The total population of all the area, continental and insular, was returned at the 1911 census as slightly over 2,000,000 Here Jamaica stands easily first, with 831,383; Trinidad coming next with 383,552. British Guiana has all but 300,000; British Honduras, 40,372. Barbadoes, with 171,953 to its 166 square miles, is one of the most densely populated places in the world, having 1,032 to the square mile. The other islands range from 5,000 odd to 36,000 odd.

Rich Resources Unused

The main reason for the present comparative paucity of population is, of course, that such large portions of the West Indian area remain unused and undeveloped. In Jamaica, for instance, out of an acreage of 2,126,411. (part from Crown lands), only about half, namely 1,013,025 acres, are returned as being at all under care and cultivation, and of these only about 274,000 acres have been subjected to tillage, the other 739,917 acres remaining "grazing lands," but slightly different very often from the 1,114,283 acres that are left in undisturbed woodland and "ruinate."

Great Potentialities

Trinidad, measured by its trade and products, ranks very much higher than does Jamaica, for, while less than half the size of that island, it has a trade which in 1913 (the last normal year) amounted to $48,838,358, against Jamaica's $25,284,735; but when we pass to British Guiana we find that a colony that is 45 times the size of Trinidad has a total trade of only $18,658,918 and, as we have seen, a population of only 296,041, against Trinidad's 383,552.

Yet British Guiana contains 57,770,000 acres, of which only 2,000,000 are privately owned, leaving 55,700,000 unalienated Crown lands. In the lowland easily accessible by railway or by navigable rivers out of some 10,000,000 acres there are some 7,000,000 suitable for agricultural purposes, of which only 1,000,000 acres have been disposed of, leaving 6,000,000 yet to be taken up and used.

GROCERS MAY COMBINE

Want Federal Government Start An Inland Trade Department

The creation of an inland trade department of the Federal Government, which will have control of all mercantile trade in the Dominion, was the request of a delegation of wholesalers and retailers which waited on Premier Borden Mr Hugh Blain addressed the Government during the conference with wholesalers, arguing the unfairness of legislation prohibiting a producer or manufacturer from stipulating the price at which his products shall be placed on sale by the wholesale trade, when compared with the treatment meted out to other trades and professions Mr. Blain denied the existence of combinations in the grocery trade, and declared that there is nothing to conceal or suppress. Financially, it is claimed, the wholesalers carry a large percentage of the retail merchants, who, in turn, carry their reliable customers through sickness or unemployment. The proposal to prohibit the setting of prices was characterized as illogical and insane, as to disturb conditions which are essential to the welfare of the country would be a blunder.

DEMOCRATIC GOVERNOR

Saskatchewan Province Had a Real Father in Office

The Hon. George W Brown, Governor of Saskatchewan, was the nearest thing to a father of his people that any Governor has been in any Province within living memory The Lieutenant-Governorship of Ontario, for example, has become almost as foreign an institution to the great mass of the people as the Llama of Thibet—that is, from the point of view of the great mass of the people seeing it at close range. The difference between it and the Saskatchewan office, as the wealthy Mr. Brown operated it, is that Government House at Regina was open every Saturday afternoon to the schoolma'ams of the city and Province—and especially the conservatories. The Governor used to travel the Province talking to farmers' meetings in a fashion which showed them that he was the greatest farmer of them all.

MR. BALFOUR HAS FAITH IN OUTCOME OF CONFLICT

In an Address to Canadian Parliament He Says Empire Will Triumph Over all Autocracies in the World.

OTTAWA, May 29.—Hon. A. J. Balfour made a notable speech in Parliament on Monday afternoon in replying to the welcome extended to him by the Parliament of Canada.

The visiting statesman said it was with the profoundest emotion that he was meeting Canada's Parliament. He had enjoyed the company of many members in the homeland, and now met them as persons responsible for the government of this great Dominion. He came, he said, at a crisis of world's history. The enthusiastic self-sacrifice of the great self-governing Dominions had been wonderful. The calculation of the German politicians had been that the British Empire was quite unfitted to deal with the storm and stress of war. That was not so bad a miscalculation as some of the obviously idiotic mistakes which Germans have made, for without a knowledge of British spirit, such a presumption might be entertained, since the empire's magnitude is so great and its parts so widely scattered.

Misjudged the Empire

These foreign speculators thought the great empire was not held together by any coercive force. The outside Dominions could not raise a corporal's guard or a cent of taxation. It had no power that they could understand, but had a moral power as they discovered, a power built on affection and sentiment. Even those who realized the power of the empire could not hope that these so seemingly slender ties could have proven as strong as they were, and that the loosely arranged organizations could come together with one purpose and for one end. It was a miracle and the miracle happened.

Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied to Mr. Balfour's address, after which the house adjourned until Tuesday.

L. LINDSAY AND W. LAKING DROWNED IN DRAG LAKE

Two Prominent Citizens of Haliburton Meet Death When Canoe Upsets---Community in Mourning.

HALIBURTON, May 29.—The Village of Haliburton was in a state of excitement when the news came that G. T. Laking and Lee Lindsay were drowned in Drag Lake.

Mr. Laking and Lee Lindsay, (mail clerk on the Haliburton train) left the village about ten or eleven o'clock Saturday, with the intention of visiting Laking's drive of logs. They drove up to the lake and left the horse at Mr. Andrew's and got Mr. Andrew's canoe and left for the lake, expecting to return about six o'clock and as they did not return a search party went up to look for them with Laking's steam-tug, and found the upturned canoe near the entrance to East Bay, and after going up to the drive camp found they had not arrived at the camp. They came back to search the shores and no trace of the missing men could be found. The mill hands and many of the villagers then made arrangements to go up in the morning and search for the bodies.

Mr. Lindsay leaves a wife and four small children and Mr. Laking leaves a wife and one child. Great sympathy is felt for the families, as both men are well known and very popular.

There was a hope until last evening that the missing men might turn up, but as night came on this hope vanished and the men are undoubtedly drowned. The wind was very high yesterday and Drag Lake is quite a large lake.

The news of the drowning of Messrs. Lindsay and Laking was received with regret by the many friends of the unfortunate men in Lindsay.

Drag Lake, where the fatality occurred, is about five miles from Haliburton Village. The two men drove out two miles to Mud Lake and then paddled through to Drag Lake, which is a little bigger than Sturgeon Lake. Its depth, however, ranges from 700 to 1000 feet. Between ten and fifteen years ago Constable Bond, of Port Hope, was drowned near this lake and his body was never recovered. East Bay, where the overturned canoe (a Lakefield) was found, is an arm of Drag Lake, and it would appear that the canoe had drifted some distance after being overturned. Lee Lindsay was a splendid swimmer, but John Laking could not swim a stroke. The canoe was found between two and three o'clock Saturday afternoon by Messrs. Wm. Laking, nephew, and Ed. Robinson.

HE GOT RESULTS

Lillian Braithwaite Hill, writer of humorous advertisements, spoke at a business men's dinner in Chicago, on, "nn in the Ad," Miss Hill began in this way: "Does it pay to advertise? Well, I should say so. A man came to an editor in the town of Shelbyville one day and asked that question. " 'Does it pay,' said the man, 'to advertise in your paper?' " 'Does it pay to advertise in my paper. You just bet it does,' the editor replied. 'Look at Sands, the cash grocer, for instance. Sands advertised for a boy last week, and the very next day they had twins at their house—both boys' "

CHATHAM CUTS PRICES

Chatham's Civic Purchasing Board is hitting the high cost of living hard these days. Saturday the board sold five tons of flour at $5.10 a hundred while the mills were quoting $7 to $7.25 Nearly five hundred pounds of butter were sold at 37c a pound, while the market price was 42c to 45c. A carload of potatoes has been purchased, and is practically all sold at $3.65 a bag, as against market quotations of $4.25 to $4.75

FROM ADJOINING STATES UNDER NEW REGULATIONS.

A change has been made regarding the terms of the reciprocal motor licenses with the states across the line. It used to be that a man living in state which had reciprocity with Ontario in regard to motor licenses could stay in Canada for as many periods as he liked for twenty-one days at a time.

For the future the motorist can only stay for thirty days' continuous stay in the province in a calandar year. He cannot come to Ontario for thirty days now and thirty days later on, but his whole visit, unless he purchases a motor license, is limited to a thirty days' sojurn.

SPAIN MUST FIGHT.

Mass Meeting Adopted Resolutions Favoring Allies.

MADRID, May 29.—Resolutions adopted at the great mass meeting in favor of the entente allies held in Madrid were presented to the Spanish Minister of the Interior. The resolutions were to the effect that: first, Spain should not remain isolated in the European conflict.

"Second, Spain should change her policy toward France and Great Britain and their allies.

"Third, following Germany's breach of Spanish neutrality Spain should break diplomatic relations with Germany and should accept all the consequences from the action which she is compelled to adopt for the defence of her dignity."

CAN YOU GUESS RIDDLES?

Some people are very good at guessing. Dr. Fowler never does any of his optical work by guess—he goes by the records shown to him conclusively by his scientific instruments, which tell him exactly the trouble and what to do to correct it. He is making a specialty of alterations and repairing, which is done by skilled help. Mr. Lansing's business success across the line bespeaks for him a large and satisfied patronage from Peterborough citizens.

HUNS STEAL TOBACCO

That many presents of tobacco sent to Canadian prisoners of war in Germany never reach the men for whom they are intended, is shown by a letter received last week by Honorary Colonel William T. Gregory, of Leamington, from Pte. W. Chrystal, of a battalion serving in France. "After we took a line of trenches from the Germans, the beggars putting up a good fight until faced by the bayonets, I came across a package of 'Old Chum' tobacco in a German dug-out." Pte. Chrystal stated in his letter. "this, Mr. Gregory had your label attached, so it is evident Huns are stealing tobacco sent to Canadian soldiers in German prison camps."

PETERBORO MEN RESPOND TO LAST OPPORTUNITY

Capt. Manning is more than pleased with the response that the men of this city are already making in signing up with his branch of the service, the Forestry Draft. During this forenoon ten men had offered for service, and there is no doubt that Peterboro will liberally respond to the last voluntary call, and maintain its former high recruiting record.

REFRESHER COURSE AT I.S. OF I.

NOTES.

In the absence of Lieut.-Col H. R. Wilson, the duties of the D.A.A. and Q.M.G. are being performed by Lt.-Col. G. Gillespie.

Capt. W. J. Sharpe has assumed charge of the Central Registry of the 3rd Military District. Capt. Sharpe went overseas with the 21st Battalion and returned some months ago.

THE LATE MISS ERMATINGER

The funeral of the late Miss Annie J. Ermatinger, a cousin of Dr. George Burnham, of this city, and well known here where she was a frequent visitor, and who during her lifetime was one of the most truly esteemed ladies of St. Thomas, took place on Friday afternoon from "Bella Vista," in Stanley Street, the home of her brother, Judge Ermatinger. The services at the house and in old St. Thomas's church, to which the remains were taken before interment in the family plot in the churchyard, were conducted by the Rev. J. W. J Andrew, rector of Trinity Church, and the Rev. W. F. Brownlee, rector o St. John's church. The deceased was born in the house located on the orginal Ermatinger property, just east of the church of St. Thomas's and her remains rest not many yards from the place of her birth. THE WEATHER

One of the truest indications as to whether a season is backward or not is the condition of the leafing process on the maples at certain dates and the date of the completion of that process. This year the maples are slow in leafing, and as yet are not in full leaf. Usually the maples are in full leaf a few days previous to the 24th; in some years they have been fully dressed by May 10, as in 1889; May 14, 1897, or May 12 in 1901. One of the latest dates for the maples leafing was in 1907, when they were not in full leaf until June 4th, and the elms had not much more than begun to assume their summer garb.—W. P.

CITIZENS GLAD WHEN ROAD OIL ARRIVES HERE

FIRST CAR OF DUST LAYER IS NOW ON RAILWAY SIDING.

The citizens who have been bothered with dust from the streets will rejoice to learn that the Imperial Oil Co. have sent in the first car of oil for the city streets. It is now on the railway siding. The Engineer's Department will be unable to put it on the roadways until the present dampness drys up, but it will be up to the housewives to keep the chairman of the Board of Works busy the first fine day the oil is not being spread on the streets.

Yesterday there was talk of an indignation meeting in several sections of the city. Many of the aldermen were threatened with all kinds of burial in oblivion if the streets were not oiled or watered at once.

There will be no excuse now.

OTTAWA, May 29.—Sir Edward Kemp's decision to strip Lieut.-Col. Armand Lavergne of his rank is whispered in official circles here. It has been known for some time that the Minister of Militia has been growing tired of hearing a man wearing his Majesty's uniform uttering the sentiments that appear in Col. Lavergne's public utterances.

ASKING SETTLERS' HELP

Enterprise of Foresters in Western Provinces of Canada

The ingenuity of some of the northern fire rangers in the prairie provinces in working up publicity schemes to aid fire prevention has often received a deserved testimony. The Canadian Forestry Association received and commended a unique book of photographs fashioned between birch bark covers, and with typewritten text graphically describing the case for forest protection. It was the work of Jas. T. Blackford, Chief Fire Ranger of the Dominion Forestry Branch at Norway House, Manitoba. The only means of access to the country patrolled by Mr. Blackford and his men is by steamboat, and the book was placed on a table of the steamer so that hundreds of travellers coming in and out read it through. On the cover were the words: "Manitoba North Fire Ranging District, Patriotic Slogan: 'No Fires in 1916.'"

Province of Small Farms

Prince Edward Island is a Province of comparatively small farms. There are 14,369 holdings. Those classified are: (1) between 100 and 200 acres, 3,227; (2) between fifty and 100 acres, 5,494; (3) between ten and fifty acres, 3,849. The general run of farms cover from fifty to 125 acres each.

WHEN CANADIANS UNITED

Races Gave Together For Soldiers—Lord Shaughnessy's Tribute

At a celebration in Montreal over a successful campaign for Patriotic Fund subscriptions, Lord Shaughnessy made one outstanding declaration which was loudly endorsed, and the business men came away from the meeting with this announcement in their ears: "If I were in charge of the affairs of the country, if I were administering the Government, I would get just such assistance to carry these things through as we have had in this fund. Such enthusiasm, such capacity for organization, such singleness of purpose, would give us results a thousand times better than can be had when we have to consider political exigencies or party advantages." The bonne entente spirit, which has characterized the whole campaign, was very much in evidence at the final demonstration. Mr. J. W. McConnell, the chairman of the Day's Pay Committee, announced that no less than 69 per cent. of the contributions included in his magnificent total came from French-Canadians.

HOW TO TRIM A LAMP

Good oil can be made to burn badly and poor oil can be made to burn well. The following are some rules for getting good service out of the lamp:

The wick, to begin with, should hang straight down in the oil. Then the oil will pass more freely to the flame, and a better light will be obtained. The wick should be cut with as thin an edge as possible. If it has a broad burning surface at the top the flame will be yellow instead of white.

The chimney should be tight to the brass burner, so as not to let air in where air is not wanted. The holes at the bottom of the burner should be left open, so as to let plenty of air in where air is wanted. The wick should not be turned so high that it will char or smoke. An old chimney lets a better light through than a new one, and a shallow bowl lamp is better for poor grades of oil than a deep bowl lamp.

Gets Potatoes Earlier

Speaking on potato seed, the method adopted by Mr. Tizzard, a potato grower in old Ontario, is worth mentioning. He puts the potatoes intended for seed under the bench in his greenhouse on a dry board along about Christmas. The stock has light and air, but no moisture. So kept, the seed develops short, hard sprouts that do not break off in handling, and these sprouts root as soon as set in the ground. Mr. Tizzard secures a crop ten days earlier than he otherwise would by this method of preparing and preserving seed.

How can the provincial agricultural colleges be made useful in the highest degree to all the farmers without the aid of the rural school?

Rules for a Long Life

A clergyman who is hale and hearty at 78 years of age, gives these rules which have governed his life: The use of plain food, with plenty of fresh fruit and pure water. Personal cleanliness by frequent baths from head to foot. Flannels next the skin the year round, graduating weight according to the season. Open air exercise every day, rain or shine. Ventilation of sleeping room, summer and winter. Eight hours' sleep each day.

Fruits of Saving

In 1866 a young Breton named Cognacq went to Paris as assistant in a little dry goods store. By 1872 he had saved up $60,000 and opened a store which he called the Samaritaine. That Breton store assistant became worth $60,000,000.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

-- SPORT PARAGRAPHS --

May ends with baseball in full bloom,
And talk of pennants fill the grandstand through,
But war's grim presence soon may cause its gloom
And leave the field to darkness and to you.

Some managers' idea of a good all-round fighter is one who is all around the ring when he faces his opponent.

Seen many a fighter so tired at the end of a bout that he couldn't hold up his hand for the decision, but never saw one who couldn't hold up his hand for his share of the gate receipts.

Stakes at Maryland race tracks were increased to $6000 and $7000. Guess old General High Cost of Living is one of the track officials this year.

Looks like Hans Wagner's baseball career has been nipped in the bud.

Grouchy Gus Says:

"The governor of the state of New York evidently is of the opinion that the pugs should stop the fighting amongst themselves and present a united front to the common enemy. The dear man should be told that "fight" is only a technical term among latter-day pugilists."

The boxer uprising was considered a part of Chinese history until Governor Whitman went in to pitch.

For one outside of the list of recognized football players, Johnny Evers plays the greatest kicking game in either league.

The multiple kick is not exclusively a football term. Baseball managers use it when they kick a raw recruit from the major league into the Epworth league.

Baseball players do their best scrimmaging en route to the dining room, and play their best kicking game when the umpire calls them out stealing second.

Yesterday was the twenty-ninth birthday of Jim Thorpe, the renowned Indian who upset the social register of Sweden and rent asunder the Amateur Athletic Association. Too much is known of the activities of this Sac and Fox tribesman to go into detail here, but it is fitting to point out that on this date, in 1888 he first saw the light of day on his father's ranch on the banks of the Canadian river, six miles north of Prague,Oklahoma. Thorpe must be tabulated as one of the most versatile athletes who ever graced the amateur or professional horizon. He was one of the greatest football players the game has ever known. He could kick, run, block, tackle, dodge, pass and smash. In baseball he was good enough t ascend to the big league, even if John McGraw finally had to let him go to the minors, only to have him returned many times. In track work he was sufficiently expert to win the all-round championship of the world. He was a dandy runner and a great jumper. He could peg the cavelin and toss the discuss. Everywhere he was placed he starred.

Speaking of Umpires.

The umpire is an awful bore,
No good cheer does he bring
To home fans who get mighty sore
When boisterously he sings
"Yer OUT!"

BASEBALL

QUEEN MARY WON.

At a junior baseball game held yesterday afternoon on the Queen Mary grounds, the Queen Mary nine defeated the King Edward team by a score of 9 to 3.

Batteries—King Edward, Manley and Moore, Rye; Queen Mary, Turner and Dormer, Davis.

Reg. Huff umpired the game to the satisfaction of all.

NO DECISION AS TO RACES

But Horsemen's Offer Will Likely Be Accepted

OTTAWA, May 29. There is no change in Ottawa in regard to the racing situation. The Government still has under consideration the proposal of the racing men that the fall meets be allowed to take place, after which racing will be discontinued until the end of the war. It is generally believed that the Government considers this a fair proposal and that it will be accepted.

Brushes that a Frenchman has invented to be carried on an automobile running boards remove mud from the soles and sides of shoes at the same time.

NEW RECRUITING PLAN.

Officer Authorized to Raise a Draft of 50 for Overseas.

STRATFORD, May 29. A new recruiting plan is announced for Perth and Oxford Counties. Lieut. Egerton Torrance, a veteran of the 16th Canadian Scottish, who has recovered from severe wounds, has been authorized to raise a draft of fifty men, with the promise that as soon as this number is secured he will be sent overseas with the men, who will be trained in England. Lt. Torrance has for some time been endeavoring to get back to France.

TO KEEP ALBERT COLLEGE.

Board So Decide, If Citizens Extend Aid.

BELLEVILLE, May 29. — Albert College board met in special session in this city to consider the future of the college, made necessary by the burning of Massey Hall recently. The unanimous decision was, though other places are making an appeal [illegible] college [illegible] it should remain in Belleville on the west side, on a new site facing the Bay of Quinte, providing the citizens respond sufficiently to justify this action.

SCHOOL CASE IS BEFORE COURT

JUDGE KELLY RESERVES DECISION WITH REGARD TO MR. GENEST.

TORONTO, May 29. — Judgment was reserved by Mr. Justice Kelly at Osgoode Hall yesterday in the motion by Chairman Sam Genest, of the Ottawa Separate School Board, for the quashing of a motion to commit him to jail for contempt of court. Judgment was also reserved in the application by Mr. Genest for an order transferring the hearing of the motion for his commitment to Ottawa. The motion to commit was enlarged until June 9. It is alleged by Mackell and others that Mr. Genest has, contrary to the orders of the court, continued to retain unqualified teachers on the staff of his schools at Ottawa.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—S. X. Constantinidi, first secretary of the Geek Legation here, has resigned and announced his association with the party of ex-Premier Venizelos whom he considers one of the greatest statesmen of the age. He says the war is becoming more and more a struggle between civilization and a people who sink hospital ships and use their dead for manure.

OBITUARY

MRS. J. D. THEXTON.

The death occurred yesterday morning of Caroline Gardiner, wife of Mr. J. D. Thexton of Mount Pleasant. This will be a great shock to her many friends who while they knew of her being slightly indisposed did not for a moment think that her demise was imminent. Shortly after midnight on Sunday she was talking with her husband and seemed to be in the best of spirits. But when morning arrived and Mr. Thexton went in to see her it was found that she had passed away. She is survived by her husband and Miss Katie Thexton.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from the family residence to St. John's cemetery, Ida.

WILL NOT LOSE BONUS.

Manager of C G E Encourages Men To Vote.

Mr. E. G. Patterson has posted notices through the works of the Canadian General Electric Co. informing all the property owners that if any of them are late in returning to work on Thursday noon by reason of their wanting to vote on the bridge bylaw that they will not suffer in their bonus. This will be good news to a number of the men who wanted to vote for the bylaw but felt that they could not afford to take a chance of losing their bonus.

CALL REV. W. R. ARCHER.

COBOURG, May 29.—The Brighton Methodist Church has extended a unanimous call to Rev. W. R. Archer, B.A., of Wellington, to become pastor for the next conference year, and he has accepted, subject to the Stationing Committee.

ONE MORE RECRUIT.

Lieut. MacLaren of the 74th Battery reports another recruit, Alex. McElvena, a sturdy blacksmith who joined today.

THE POTATO CROP

Thousands of farmers have suffered heavy losses at various times from fungus diseases attacking potato crops. Weak, spindly hills make breeding places for the diseases which would never get started otherwise. These spindly hills are often caused by planting weak seed, the result of carelessness in selecting the tubers for seed. Like begets like and the sooner persons planting small or diseased potatoes realise this the better it will be for their crop yields.

Remarkable results have been obtained by investigators in seed selection work with potatoes. Intricate methods are not necessary to obtain marked improvement in the ordinary field crops. It is a good plan to go over the field when the tops are about half ripened off and mark with a stake or twig the hills which show exceptional vigor and resistance to disease, to drought or to heat. At digging time these hills can be kept apart for seed. Any of the marked hills not yielding smooth or superior potatoes should be discarded.

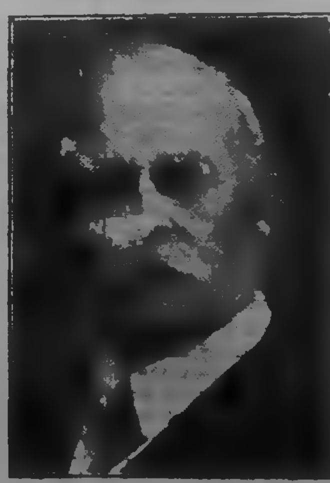
Farmers may think it too much trouble to save all their seed in this way but enough can easily be selected to plant a special seed plot each year from which seed for the main crop the following year may be obtained. If the farmer neglects to mark the vigorous hills he should, at least, note and keep apart the high yielding hills of smooth, uniform tubers for a seed plot next year. Potato growers will find that it is highly profitable to select their potatoes for seed carefully and intelligently as it will mean greater productiveness, vigor and uniformity in shape and size.—F.C.N., in Conservation.

"HOMESTEADER BROWN"

Lawyer Who Found Health and Fortune in West

The following sketch is of Hon. George Brown, former Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan: In 1882 a lanky law student emerged from Toronto University in indifferent health. He decided to build up that health by forsaking the law for the wheat farm. He went West and he drove his team ahead of the C.P.R. then extended no farther than Brandon, to Big Boggy Creek, north of Pile o' Bones, now Regina. He homesteaded there and went through all the hardships of pioneering on land which nobody understood, and which more men abandoned than stayed on it.

There is no room here to explain the peculiarities of gumbo and the treatment of summer fallow. The curriculum the young lawyer went through was severe, but it resulted in his assertion that year in and year out he would produce twenty-six bushels of wheat per acre from land which was commonly believed to be worthless for wheat thirty years ago.



HON. GEORGE W. BROWN

As Governor he was still farming a couple of thousand acres, which was some remove from the homesteading limitations of Big Boggy Creek. The interval had brought much more than a patent for the homestead. Farmer Brown transferred himself again into Lawyer Brown. When Walter Scott's advice to Sir Wilfrid elevated Lawyer Brown from an aldermancy of Regina to the Governorship of a Province the office force of Brown and Mackenzie was between forty-five and fifty. It is probably true that in the five years before the gubernatorial epoch no man in Western Canada was personally responsible for the lending of so much money to farmers as Homesteader Brown.

TITLES FOR CANADIANS

Bestowal is Said to Endanger Growth of Imperialism

Under the caption "Not Statesmanlike," the Ottawa Journal has the following to say on hereditary titles: "There is a sharp contrast between London and Canadian press comment on the bestowal of hereditary titles upon men in this country. The enthusiasm of the London Times and Daily Mail finds a strange echo in Canada. The creation of Canadian peers means an important, possibly an epoch-making change in the life of Canada. It implies a fundamental, a constitutional re-arrangement. No one sincerely friendly to the Imperial scheme, properly worked out, can be satisfied to hail with enthusiasm a first step in the progress which arouses no enthusiasm and very considerable opposition in Canada. It is too poor a brand of Imperial statesmanship which must offend the people of the Dominion at the very outset.

"If we are going to start Imperial reconstruction on the assumption that life in Canada must be changed in a reactionary way so as to accompany the new system, the people of Canada at least deserve an opportunity to express an opinion of the question before drastic action is taken. Imperial reconstruction by that process can only succeed in spite of the method adopted, and the idea will inspire little enthusiasm in this country. True Imperialists in Canada would be unworthy of the great task before the Empire if they did not raise their voices at this time in emphatic protest against a course of action which plays directly into the hands of every anti-Imperialist agitation and every anti-British element in Canada.

EDMONTON LAND SCHEME

Loans to Supplement Services of Banks to Farmers

The Edmonton board of trade have adopted a scheme for land development. The principal difference between its recommendation and most of the other schemes is, explains Mr F. T. Fisher, secretary of the Edmonton board, that the recommendations put forward by his board were formulated by a committee, the members of which have given long study to these matters and are equipped with a practical working knowledge and extensive experience regarding these problems, gained where the schemes are expected to be applied. One of the recommendations made is for a farm loan scheme designed to supplement the service which the chartered banks and loan companies are able to afford. This matter is approached by the committee much more conservatively and with a much keener sense of the difficulties in the way, than by the advocates of numerous farm loan schemes which have been put forward. While the committee had a keen realization of the fact that cheap money for our farmers is highly desirable and would tend to promote increased agricultural production, they also realized that neither the ordinary laws of supply and demand nor the accumulated experience as to what constitutes sound financing, can be set at nought by an act of a Legislature.

India's Tailor Bird

The tailor bird of India, a tiny yellow creature, makes a most curious nest. To escape snakes and monkeys this bird takes a dead leaf, flies up into a tree, and, with a fibre for a thread and its bill for a needle, sews the leaf to a green one hanging from the tree, an opening to the nest thus formed being left at the top. The leaf, apparently hanging from a twig, would never be taken for a nest.

Homesick Cows

Did you ever notice that cows suffer from homesickness? Don't you think you have been cheated if the [illegible] purchased [illegible] in her milk flow for a few days.

Tricks of the Sreen Man

Those who have seen films in which a player taking two parts appears in those parts at one and the same time, in the same scene, will wonder how it is done. The player, of course, does not play both parts at once. He, or she, plays one part, and while doing so the camera operator, by one of his many tricks, keeps blank that portion of the film on which the player is photographed taking his other part. When that part in which he has played is finished the operator winds back the film to the beginning, and the unexposed blank portion is exposed for the first time, while the other part is covered. Then the player takes the other part.

Filling the Radiator

It not infrequently happens with the motorist that when an empty radiator is filled up and the car runs a short distance, the water level will be found to have fallen considerably, though no overheating has occurred and no leak exists. The reason for this is that the water requires some little time to percolate through the various restricted passages in the cooling system, and a little shaking down results in a falling of the level.

A War-time Problem

A baker informed the Rugby tribunal that he had advertised for women workers. The reply he had received was from a girl, aged sixteen, who confessed that she knew nothing of the business and asked for six dollars per week.

It is not uncommon to have a Rhode Island Red cock throw a white feather. It is no sign of impurity. These white feathers are apt to develop with age.

WELSH SURNAMES FEW

Quaint Peculiarities of People of Celtic Principality

Wales has plenty of coal, slate, scenery, and consonants, but very few surnames. If a Welsh schoolmaster should say, "Jones, you may go home now for being a good boy," the whole school would quit. People who are not called Jones are called Williams, or Evans, or Hughes, or Lloyd. They divide these names between them, and make the best of it. They do not follow the English method of taking their surnames from towns and villages. They felt that to do so would cut them off from the rest of mankind. Nobody could possibly call on Mrs. Llanymynech. Dislocation of the jaw is a great drawback to social intercourse.

The Welshman has the Celtic imagination. He never calls a spade a spade. When he has done describing this implement of agriculture, the stolid Englishman thinks he has been listening to a story from the "Arabian Nights." Hence the Englishman says the Welshman is an "untruther." He isn't really. It's only a difference of method. The Welshman means the truth, which is the main thing. His conscience is all right, if his story isn't.

The Welshman is intensely patriotic. He regards Wales as the hub of the universe, "look you." The Welsh and the Manx are akin, and it was a Manxman who spoke of "the Isle of Man and the adjacent islands of Great Britain." But Welshmen are not devoid of the imperial spirit. They have helped to colonize the earth's empty spaces. They have fought in every continent side by side with their co-islanders.

WHO WILL FIRST BE CALLED BY DRAFT SYSTEM

Men From Twenty to Forty Years of Age Liable to Compulsion.

OUTLINE OF THE MEASURE

Any Man Unwilling to Submit Can Appeal to County Judge.

OTTAWA, May 29.—The conscription bill is not expected to be introduced in the house for a day or two yet, and possibly not until Friday. The government is anxious to get the budget out of the way first.

The final official approval has not yet been put upon the proposed measure, but the main terms of it as at present drafted are that the ages between which men are liable to compulsory service are twenty and forty, and that that the men between these ages will be called upon for service in classes, that is, classes will be formed in relation to age and number of dependants. A married man with one dependant, his wife, will be in the same class, it is understood, as a single man with one dependent, provided of course, they are of the same age. Appeals may be made to county court judges.

The opinion still holds that there will be very few opponents of the principle of conscription outside of the Quebec Liberal members and there will be one or two exceptions even among them. However, it is certain that there will be an amendment on the question of a referendum, and some of the Liberal conscriptionists will find in this amendment an opportunity of voting against the government's proposal.

BRAZIL NOW ON VERGE OF WAR

NEUTRALITY EDICT REVOKED BY A VOTE OF 136 TO 3.

RIO JANEIRO, May 29.—The Brazilian Chamber passed the first reading of the Government measure revoking Brazil's neutrality in the war between Germany and the United States. The vote was 136 to 3.

The leaders of the principal political factions declared that they would vote for the proposed project because they felt confident that Parliament would complete the measure by revoking also in favor of the Entente the country's declaration of neutrality, and thereby permit Brazil to take side with the Entente against Germany.

CHINA SET FOR MISS ANDERSON

GIRLS AT THE Y. W. C. A. REMEMBER FORMER SUPERINTENDENT.

On Monday evening Miss Anderson, who has been superintendent of the Young Women's Christian Association for a short time was presented with a number of pieces of an afternoon tea-set in the "Blue bird china. The gift was from the girls resident in the house and was bought in by Miss Helen Ross together with a bouquet of pink and white rosebuds. Miss Amy Bowles read the following address:

"Dear Miss Anderson,—Your stay among us has not been long, but we one and all wish to assure you that had it been measured by years instead of months, we should still say to you then, on the day of your departure, as we say to you now, your leaving is felt as a personal loss to every girl living in this house. We know that four walls alone cannot make a home but your kindliness and sympathy have indeed done so. The loving unselfish spirit which prompted you to do yourself those many, many acts far outside your own duties, and done for our comfort, did not pass unnoticed by any one of us. We appreciated them, perhaps the more, because of no ostentation in the doing. Knowing as we do that a good, sweet and gracious influence is one of the best and finest things Providence puts into this world, we trust that many another young woman will realize, as we do, that yours has been among the good influences in her life. Recalling that the "Bluebird" is emblematic of happiness, we ask you to accept these "bluebirds" of ours, and in the giving we are assured that your life will be full of that lasting happiness, the reward of the sterling integrity of your character.

Signed on behalf of the girls,

ELSIE KIRKWOOD
ETHEL SANDERSON
MARION ALLELY
IRENE LAKE
ALICE HOPWOOD
KATHALEEN MILLS
OLIVE MANN."

After singing "For she's a jolly good fellow," Miss Anderson, who was taken completely by surprise, thanked the girls in a most fitting manner.

COALITION CABINET IS IN SIGHT

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS AFTER CONFERENCE DECIDE THAT PEACE MUST BE CONCLUDED

Adopt Resolution Calling for Cessation of Hostilities Without Annexation or Indemnities---Russian Army Must be Better Provided With Munitions.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, May 30. — A congress of delegates from the front, after a debate on the war, has unanimously voted resolutions setting forth that it is indispensable to put an end to the international carnage and conclude peace without annexations or indemnities. They also demanded that the Russian army must be better provided with artillery and munitions with which to protect the infantry, who have hitherto had to march unprotected against enemy bullets and break with their bare arms the enemy's wire entanglements.

MONKS TO BE SENT TO THE FRONT.

PETROGRAD, May 30. — All the monks of Russia will be sent to the front to serve in the department of sanitation, according to orders issued by the war ministry. Lay brothers will be recruited as soldiers.

Only recently the monks demanded equal political rights with the lay population, including the vote, and they have been giving other marked evidences of revolutionary zeal.

PUBLIC TO BE CANVASSED FOR FUNDS TO AID Y.M.C.A.

Matter Was Discussed at Meeting of Directors and Invited Guests Last Night---Work Among Boys More Needed Than Ever.

The Y. M. C. A. Board of Directors met last evening, together with a few invited guests, the question up for consideration being the annual canvass for funds for the support of the local Association. Among those present were His Worship Mayor J. J. Duffus, Ald. J. C. Smith, Mr. Ed. H. Vanstone, manager of the Bank of Toronto; Mr. G. H. Logie, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia; Mr. F. W. Trebilcock, Rev. R. G. Peever, Rev. R. A. Whattam, Rev. Robt. Pogue, Adjutant McElhiney and a few others.

President G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., was in the chair, and, after a toast to the King, presented the Y.M.C.A. as being a public institution, both a national and civic asset.

Mr. Jos. Wearing, chairman of the Y. M. C. A. religious work committee, gave some facts regarding the religious work of the Association especially as it concerned the boys.

Mr. H. B. Cowan, chairman of the physical department committee, explained the standard efficiency tests and showed plainly why the Y. M. C. A. now required the most expert leadership. The physical director was no longer simply a gymnastic leader, but must also have the qualifications of a physician, that he might analyze the needs of the men and boys who come under his care.

Repairs Needed.

Mr. Wm. Richardson represented the property committee in a statement regarding the wear and tear on the property and equipment, and showed that repairs are required to keep the building and equipment in proper condition. Some 350 members and a large number of soldiers used the physical department during the past season, which means that a terrific strain was placed upon all apparatus in this department. Boys are impulsive and perhaps a little rough in the use of all equipment so that the property would soon become useless unless it were to receive constant attention.

Mr J. J. Turner, treasurer of the Association, said that $5000 would be needed in subscription, to cover the current needs of the Association to Dec. 31 next. He also explained a $5000 deficit the Association is carrying, and expressed the wish of the directors that this amount, together with the sum needed for current expenses be combined and provided for in a canvass for $10,000.

A general discussion followed in which the visitors participated freely. His Worship Mayor Duffus assured the Association that he believed the citizens of Peterborough were willing and able to provide for the needs of any organization that sought the public welfare, and that doubtless all that was required was that the directors and other friends get together and canvass the citizens.

Mr. Trebilcock and Adjt. McElhiney and others present took the same position, although obstacles in the way of such a canvass were not overlooked.

Is Morality on Decline?

In the general discussion the fact was brought out that the moral condition of our boys is not as good as before the war. It is difficult to give a definite reason why, but bad language and bad habits are more in evidence among the boys under 18 years of age than before the war started.

It was thought that perhaps one reason for this condition was that so many fathers are away to the war, leaving the boys at home without the usual discipline, also that the very war spirit itself had appealed to the animal passion of the average boy, undermining to a large extent his moral nature. The conclusion was that the Y. M. C. A. work for boys was more needed now than ever before.

The meeting adjourned until Friday night, when the members of the board and a number of outside friends will meet and select the names of a few prominent supporters of the Association, who they will first canvass with a view of learning whether these close friends of the Association will be willing to double their regular contributions for this year.

The directors elected Mr. Trebilcock and Mr. James Hamilton to fill vacancies on the board of directors for the ensuing year.

GET INTO RIGHT CAR.

The centre office for the citizens interested in the success of the Bridges Bylaw tomorrow will be at the City Clerk's office on Simcoe street. Cars will be at all the factories at noon and the electors are requested to be sure and get into the auto going to their polling booth. The destination of each car will be designated.

NO CHANGE TO BE MADE IN TARRIF

OLIVER RESOLUTION FOR A REVISION DOWNWARD LOST IN HOUSE.

OTTAWA, May 30. — Parliament voted down the resolution offered by Hon Frank Oliver calling for a radical reduction in tariff duties, the increase in the British preference to 50 per cent. and the placing of many articles upon the free list. It was a party vote, and the government scored by a majority of 27. There was a short debate preceding the vote, and Hugh Guthrie, Liberal member for South Wellington, declared himself against any revision of the tariff during the war. He went even further and wanted all legislation side-tracked while the war was on, including nationalization of railways.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier did not vote, but it is explained that he was unavoidably detained at Government House. Mr. Guthrie abstained from voting, although he spoke against the Oliver resolution. Chief whip Fred Pardee was also among the eastern Liberals who did not regard themselves in favor of the Oliver amendment.

OPEN TENDERS FOR REBUILDING OF COURT HOUSE

COUNTY PROPERTY COMMITTEE DEFER ACTION UNTIL FRIDAY.

The County Property Committee, to whom was left the awarding of the contract for the re-building of the Court House, met yesterday afternoon and opened the five tenders for the work

The committee rose without awarding the contract, and will meet again on Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock, when the matter will be dealt with.

The figures of the tenderers will not be made public until Friday.

VOTE FOR BYLAW TOMORROW

Tomorrow the ratepayers of the city will be asked to authorize the issue of debentures to the value of $280,000 to defray the cost of erecting two bridges across the river, a high level bridge at Hunter street and another at London street. The necessity for both these improvements is generally recognized, and the issue before the people has been explained time and again.

The arrangements for getting out the vote are perfect. Every ward has been organized and no man need walk to the polls if he prefers to ride or his time is limited. Cars will be provided to carry the ratepayers to the polling booths, and special arrangements will be made to carry the workingmen who are entitled to vote to the proper places at the noon hour.

The fate of the bylaw is not in doubt. It is all a question of how large the majority will be, and the bigger the better, as a favorable and emphatic expression of opinion will be useful subsequently in the matter of securing special legislation with regard to the issue of the debentures. A large majority, too, will show that the ratepayers of the city are awake to their opportunities, and all this agitation for a Greater Peterborough is not so much overheated atmosphere.

LAY SEVEN DAYS IN SHELL HOLE WITHOUT FOOD

Wonderful Vitality of Canadian Soldier Who Was Wounded on Patrol.

WOUNDS WERE HEALING.

General Haig Attends Famous Gathering of Pipers on Western Front.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Headquarters in France: "An extraordinary instance of vitality is reported of a soldier who had been out on patrol when he was wounded in the side and arm by bullets and also had a leg fractured. He crawled into a shell hole and lay there during daylight hours for seven days. He suffered frightfully from thirst. At night he was able to crawl out to where the Germans lay dead and obtained a little water from their bottles. This was the only thing that passed his lips for seven days, yet when found and brought in his bullet wounds were beginning to heal.

A GATHERING OF THE CLANS.

Sir Douglas Haig, British Commander-in-chief, honored by his presence a great gathering of pipers in which Canadian corps players took part yesterday. He was greatly pleased at the smartness of the evolutions performed and the excellent music played. Pipers were brought in from various parts of the front to take part in the festival. Seldom, if ever, even at the greatest of Highland gatherings have so many pipers and such a variety of tartans been seen. A parade in state of the piper bands of the fourteen battalions present showed fifteen pipe majors, 162 pipes and 105 drummers. Thousands of soldiers were on the parade ground to hear the pipers and see the Commander-in-Chief. Sir Douglas inspected some of the war trophies.

ENEMY GUNS SILENCED.

There was a renewal of enemy artillery activity during the night directed chiefly against our back areas but no infantry encounters were allowed Yesterday the enemy gun pits were made targets for our heavy Howitzers and an explosion followed by a fire took place. The enemy guns have not been heard from since in that particular locality.

WANTS CHANCE TO SHOW WHAT ENGINE CAN DO

G. E. Thomas Here to Demonstrate Power of His Motor Fire Engine.

ASKING CIVIC SANCTION.

But Apparatus Will Be Shown Here Saturday Whether the Mayor Consents or Not.

Mr. G. E. Thomas sales manager of the American La France Fire Engine Co., arrived in the city today. The firm which Mr. Thomas represents is a three million dollar corporation, the oldest firm of the kind in America, with headquarters in Elmira, New York, and a branch factory in Toronto. They manufacture fire engines exclusively.

The firm tendered for the new fire fighting apparatus wanted in this city, and Mr. Thomas is anxious to give a demonstration of his engine in Peterborough. A motor fire engine such as Peterborough is after has been completed for the Hull fire brigade and will pass through this city on a car tomorrow. Mr. Thomas wishes to unload it here and give a demonstration for the benefit of the city officials and manufacturers Saturday. He has taken the matter up with Ald. Dobbin and Mayor Duffus but whether the latter gives or withholds his official sanction, the demonstration will be made.

Mr. Thomas says that he will load at least twenty-five of those interested on his motor engine, take it to any part of the city and demonstrate just what the apparatus is capable of doing under any circumstances.

CRISIS IN PARLIAMENT MAY BE AVERTED BY FORMATION OF COALITION CABINET

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Leaves for Montreal to Consult With Anti-Conscriptionists.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, May 30. — There are strong indications that the perplexed political situation will be settled by arrangement between the leaders for a coalition ministry, probably also including some prominent men not connected with politics.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who has been in frequent conference on the situation with Sir Robert Borden and has also been to Rideau Hall, left for Montreal today, presumably to consult Premier Gouin in the probable attitude of Quebec towards conscription under a non-partisan government. While it is understood that the scheme is still very indefinite, the tentative exchange between the two leaders is believed to give promise of an early solution of the difficulty.

Under coalition administration it is likely the Conscription Bill would be redrafted in some respects to make it more acceptable to the interests now opposing the measure in the form forecasted by the Premier.

SUBS STEADILY LOSING GROUND

FAVORABLE WEEKLY REPORT TODAY SHOWS DECREASE IN LOSSES.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, May 30.—The weekly summary of British merchant vessels sunk by submraines will again show a favorable total when it is issued tonight. It is the belief of naval men that as long as summer conditions prevail there is little likelyhood that submarines will make any better showing than in past months.

ALL RAIDS REPULSED BY BRITISH FORCES ON WESTERN FRONT

French Too Hold Their Own in Heavy Artillery Fire---Russian Airplanes Active---Italians Still Triumph Over Austrians and Capture More Prisoners.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, May 20.—Hostile raiding parties were repulsed last night in the neighborhood of Fontaine Les-Croisilles and west of Lens, says today's war office report. South of Neuve Chapelle our patrols entered the enemy's trenches and inflicted casualties. Nothing else of special interest occurred.

MORE GERMAN LOSSES.

PARIS, May 30.—Violent artillery fighting occurred on the French front south of St. Quentin during the night according to the official statement issued by the French war office this morning. A German attack at Mont Blondin Champagne was repulsed, the Germans leaving dead and wounded on the field.

RUSSIANS ACTIVE.

PETROGRAD, May 30.—The usual fusilades occurred on all the fronts, says today's war office report. Russian airplanes dropped four bombs on the enemy's positions in the region of Stanislavoff. Five airplanes threw about forty bombs over Podgaitse, no injury resulting to us. Our aviators encountered the enemy. One of our airmen was killed.

ITALY VICTORIOUS.

ROME, May 30.—Official statement)—Artillery was not so active yesterday on the Trento front and on the Carnia but was very heavy on the Julian front, particularly in the sector from Mount Cucco to Mount Voldice and East of Gorizia. The enemy again persisted in his attacks upon our trenches on Hill 652. Three successive attacks after intense artillery fire failed completely. We captured some thirty prisoners.

On the Carso the work of strengthening our lines is proceeding actively. An enemy assault attempted on the Boscomalo was broken by our artillery fire. Between Jamiano and the coast we extended by local offensive actions our occupation of the ground west of Medeazza. On Monday afternoon one enemy airplane was brought down in a severe air fight east of Mount San Marco.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, MAY 30, 1917

THE STREET CAR SERVICE.

THE CITIZENS of Peterborough are certainly long-suffering and slow to anger against those in authority over them. They have for years tolerated one of the worst street car services that was ever foisted upon a community. It was, in short, a ghastly joke. There were ceaseless murmurings against it, but for the lack of efficient leadership no definite action was taken to secure anything better. The old company did not care, but, with a disregard for the public worthy of the famous Vanderbilt epigram, held on their way regardless of patrons' protests.

The local street railway passed into the hands of the Hydro Commission, and, with the dream of public ownership realized at last, the patrons of the line looked for better service. Over a year has passed, and no improvement has been made. Now the residents of the western section of the city have decided to make an organized protest, and petitions are being circulated. These will be presented to Mayor Duffus, who can act in one or other of his dual capacities, as chief magistrate of the city or as the president and organizer of the Greater Peterborough Association.

Two transfers in a short trip are an infringement on the rights of the people whose money maintains an otherwise efficient and well-equipped system of transportation. School children were in constant danger of their lives while making their way from one car to the other. The street cars are patronized, especially in stormy weather, and the object in using the service is largely defeated owing to the necessity of a double venture out into the rain at the points of transfer. Women and children put up with the inconvenience all these years, and, lacking anything like a concerted protest, the company held on its way.

At George and Charlotte streets, passengers transferring from the former thoroughfare to the Park street line usually found the car for the southwestern branch between them and the one they wanted, and they were compelled to make their way, sometimes nearly half a block, along a crowded thoroughfare before reaching the car they sought. It is simply a miracle that there were no more accidents due to the clumsy transfer system. Another objection was the frequent necessity of riding out to the end of the Charlotte street line before a car could be got for the Jackson Park line.

The street car system is now the property of the people. When the city gets direct control, improvements are sure to be made, both in extensions and timetables, but it is idle to talk of the former while the system as it now stands is not operated with some regard to the convenience of the public.

The Review took this matter up some months ago. Our timid contemporary, however, not, we are convinced, so much from principle as for other more characteristic reasons, has always, in the face of existing conditions, declared that the service was as good as it was possible to make it. On this point, as in scores of other cases, it has failed to convince the people that they are without a grievance. No other city would have long tolerated such a condition, and very few newspapers would have upheld a management responsible for it.

The system as it now stands can be improved other than by doing away with the frequent transfers. The cars that run out to the C. G. E. works can be continued along George street at least as far north as Brock street. Passengers on all the cars should be compelled to board and leave the cars on the proper side, just as they are on George street, the cars on that line being built with this end in view. Otherwise there will one of these days be an appalling accident. The cars should stop on the near side of the street as another matter of public safety, especially on the paved streets where the traffic is heavy and where the argument in favor of stopping on the other side does not apply.

AMBULANCE WORKERS NEEDED.

THE ST. JOHN AMBULANCE Association, in the opening chapter of its official textbook says that "First-aid to the injured is a special branch of practical medicine and surgery, by a knowledge of which trained persons are enabled to afford skilled assistance in cases of accident and sudden illness." and further, that "the duty of the ambulance pupils ends when the doctor's commences."

The present necessity for the extension of the ambulance movement is also due to the fact that a large number of experienced ambulance workers, who were engaged in connection with industrial undertakings and relied upon for assistance in emergencies, have answered the call of their country and placed their services at the disposal of the medical departments of the army. The withdrawal of so much medical and first aid assistance is particularly felt at a time when, in order to overthrow the common enemy, almost every phase of industrial work throughout the country is being speeded up to the point of maximum output.

All this work is being undertaken with considerably depleted staffs, and a vast quantity of substituted labor has of necessity had to be employed, including a large percentage of women, who are frequently unaccustomed to the conditions and surroundings among which they now find themselves, surroundings which often differ diametrically from those with which they have been hitherto familiar, as in the case of the woman transferred from the placid atmosphere of home to the busy engineering workshop.

It is highly desirable that as large a number as possible so engaged should acquire the training which will enable them to apply the prescribed first aid treatments on behalf of themselves and others when accidents occur. That such treatment, promptly applied, may save lives and limbs and generally prove invaluable in times of crises has been demonstrated over and over again.

A point which is not always appreciated at its full value in connection with the acquisition of first aid knowledge, but one which should appeal with added force to all at a time when industrial workers of practically all kinds are at a premium, is that if first aid methods are promptly and efficiently applied when accidents occur, not only may lives be saved and suffering ameliorated, but the period of incapacity of the workers affected may thereby be materially reduced, which, of course, not only represents a gain to the individual worker and employe—loss of wages and working time being reduced to a minimum—but also constitutes a direct advantage to the country, inasmuch as production is thereby increased.

There are, of course, other advantages which should not go unnoticed, such as the reduction of payments under the Workmen's Compensation Boards as well as by various sick benefit societies; but what is particularly desired is to emphasize here the considerable advantages which would accrue to the country at large by a vigorous campaign for the acquisition of some measure of ambulance training among industrial workers today, in view of the fact that the medical and other skilled assistance on which they were accustomed to rely in happier times is now in a large measure not forthcoming.

GERMANY'S ONLY HOPE.

SOME PEOPLE WONDER why Germany, with all the civilized world in arms against her, continues the struggle. The most optimistic among the leaders in that nation cannot hope to win against such odds.

Those who hold such views are referred to Macaulay's essay on Frederick the Great. That exponent of the same Prussianism against which the world is fighting today was in a similar position to that of the Kaiser. The forces of civilization were arrayed against him, and yet he persevered. His one hope was to stir up discord among his opponents, and this is the single hope left the Germans today.

Breeding hate among the allied nations has been the main mission of the Kaiser for the past three years. He has succeeded to an extent at least with Russia. His one chance to save himself from a humiliating overthrow is to engender distrust and jealousies among the Entente Powers, and even this hope is dim.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

ANYWAY, the backward season forces the fly to defer its spring drive.

• • • •

PRISON STRIPES rather than the King's uniform for the man who talks treason.

• • • •

THE CANADIANS who insist on a referendum on conscription may be able to induce Germany to stop fighting until the votes are counted.

• • • •

A PLEBISCITE on conscription would be like stopping to take a vote on the question of new fire-fighting equipment while the city was in flames.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

If Germany Won.

(Montreal Star.)

And Canada? Does Canada dream that she could escape the common fate of all?

A Misleading Title.

(Kansas City Star.)

Germany is looking for a new national hymn, objection being made to "Hail to the Victor" on the ground that the music is not stirring enough. Also there seems to be something wrong with the title.

French Soldiers' Pay.

(Buffalo Express.)

The women's strike in Paris is extending. This movement does not do credit to the patriotism of the French women, for which they have been so highly praised. The men whose places women have taken are fighting to save France for five cents a day.

Subscriptions to German War Loans.

(Springfield Republican.)

The Germans have a way of getting subscriptions to their war loans that would cause a shriek if tried in this country. They pay a part of the salaries of all public officials in the empire in war loan securities. No officeholder is politely asked to "do his bit"; he does it, and no questions are allowed.

Wealth Going to Waste.

(Toronto News.)

While Canada is using 35,000,000 gallons of gasoline in a year at 36 cents a gallon, it is pointed out that denatured alcohol has a greater efficiency in the generation of power than gasoline and that materials now wasted in the factory and on the farm would supply all the wood alcohol that is required. The wood waste in Canada alone would produce enough alcohol to operate all the motor cars on this half of the continent.

The Better Liberal Element.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

If it is possible to ignore Sir Wilfrid and invite such men as Dr. Michael Clark, Hugh Guthrie, W. A. Buchanan, A. K. Maclean and Fred F. Pardee into the Ministry, well and good: we should all rejoice to see the Government augmented by the incorporation into it of representatives of the loyal section of the Liberal party. But that might mean the swinging off into bitterer hostility of Sir Wilfrid himself, the men who were in his last ministry, and share their fortunes with his, and the Kytes and Carvells who are never so happy as when bringing baseless charges against the purest Administration Canada ever knew.

Hon. Robert Rogers.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

What we cannot comprehend is the reluctance of the Premier to unburden himself of Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, who has been the chief source of weakness in his Administration. Mr. Rogers is a thorough-paced politician, in the lower sense of the word. He is popularly regarded as representing those influences and practices which, while perhaps pardonable a generation or two ago, the better elements of the two great parties are now trying to slough off and surmount. We should think that in any Cabinet reconstruction he would be the first man to go. Ever since he left Winnipeg for Ottawa, the Borden Government would have been stronger without him.

GETTING FOOD TO CONSUMERS

With the ever rising costs of foods the solution of the direct market problem becomes more and more urgent. It does not need experts to prove that the more handling any article receives the greater its cost. That is why we always have such an uproar about the "middleman" who is accused of absorbing too great a proportion of the profits. The real truth of the matter is that we have not only one middleman but four of them to handle our foods in the majority of cases.

The farmer grows his produce and sells to the country buyer, the first of the middlemen. This buyer in turn ships to a wholesale receiver, the second middleman. This receiver deals in carload lots, so he must find a jobber, our third middleman, to break up the carload lots and sell to the retailer. The retailer, be he huckster, stall owner in a market or store manager, is the fourth middleman. Naturally each man must have his legitimate profit. And if by efficient methods actual costs can be lowered these business men, the middlemen, will have the first opportunity to gather in the profits. One authority says "the difference in price between what the consumer pays and the producer receives ranges from 100 to 300 per cent," while "the consumer nearly always pays the usual price, no matter how much the grower gets."

The up to date farmre resents this and is seeking a remedy by looking for a direct market, a market where the grower can sell right to the consumer. The vegetable growers of the country have put themselves on record, 12 to 1, in favor of a more general development of municipal markets. That municipal markets are popular with the housewife is demonstrated every day in Baltimore, where there are more municipal markets than in any other city in ths this country.

Public markets for plain people should be an important part in the policy of every city. But these markets must be wisely placed and efficiently conducted. It is not enough for the city officials to say: "We ought to have a municipal market in that district. Here's a piece of land that we cannot use for anything else. Let's take that for a market." It is a waste of time under such circumstances to send out an appeal to farmers to bring in their produce or for housewives to come with market baskets. One of our large cities tried an experiment recently of a similar character. A street was set aside arbitrarily to make a farmers' market. The day was appointed and the hour set when, with blare of brass band and city official oratory, the market was to be opened. All that was lacking to the success of the experiment was that both farmers and housewives failed to come.

To establish public markets that are a real boon to plain people requires truck growing farmers within in a reasonable distance of the markets to be established, which is to say within an easy transportation distance, whether that be by horse and wagon, motor truck, boat or trolley service or what not. Care must be taken to have bona fide farmers in these markets and not commission men masquerading as farmers. Where that practice is permitted both bona fide farmers and housewives become disgusted and stop coming to the market after a time. The professional dealer may be needed in the market, but it should be made plain that he is a dealer and not a farmer. He should not be permitted, as one farmer says, "to commercialize the halo of the farmer."

It also is necessary to have a strict supervision of public markets so that they will be clean enough and sanitary enough to make the markets attractive to producer and consumer. Good farmers want to attract thrifty housewives who have money to spend and that class of housekeeper will be repelled by dirty, offensive places.

BEEF AND OLIVES

These, With Tomatoes, Made Into a Tasty Dish

Place a stew pan on the fire with a lump of butter or margarine. When the butter steams add a piece of beef without bone, weighing between three and four pounds. Turn it on both sides until brown. Then salt and pepper well, cover the stew pan, and let it simmer for three or four hours, according to the weight of the meat. A quarter of an hour before serving stone half a pound of olives, and throw them in with the meat.

Cut four or five large tomatoes in half, horizontally; salt and pepper, and sprinkle the juicy part with a little chopped parsley and onion, and add a very small piece of butter. Put the tomatoes in a baking dish into the oven for about twenty minutes.

Remove the meat from the stew pan; carve it in thin slices and place one over-lapping the other along the centre of a dish; pour the gravy over the meat, and garnish the sides with a small heap of olives and half a tomato alternately.

The French begin all their stews by browning the meat in butter, adding water or stock afterwards. This method causes the brown gravy so much appreciated by English people.

Grape Catchup

Five lbs. grapes mashed in the preserving kettle, and boiled until soft. Rub through a sieve to remove skins and seeds, and then return to the kettle and add 2 teaspoons sugar, 2 tablespoons ground allspice, 1 teaspoon each of ground cloves, cinnamon and black pepper, ½ teaspoon salt. Boil until it thickens. Pour boiling hot into sterilized jars and seal immediately.

End of Roast Meat

Butter a deep dish, put a layer of cold meat, layer of sliced raw onions, layer of sliced raw potatoes, pepper salt and small pieces of butter. Continue this until dish is full, then half cover with hot water and add a little gravy, if you have any. Cover dish and bake from one to three hours. Remove cover about twenty minutes before serving so top will brown.

WEDDING SUPERSTITIONS

Brides of [illegible] Old Beliefs

Even the hardest headed girls who marry in this century in wartime seem to cling to the old fears and fancies of what a bride may and may not do on her wedding morning. The most common superstitions for the bride are that, if not in a white dress, she should marry in blue. Green and red are unlucky colors for her, and if she wears grey it means that she will go to a far country. She must not stumble on the threshold, nor read the wedding service through, nor set eyes on the bridegroom before meeting him in church; nor must she see a pin on the ground as she issues from the church; must not try on her wedding gown or veil, or return to the looking glass after being fully dressed; must not break anything on the day.

If a bird sings at her window sill, or if when driving to church she sees a lamb or dove—these things mean good luck to her. Most brides now follow the advice given in an old rhyme on their wedding day, and wear—

Something old, and something new,
Something borrowed and something blue.

Tragedy is supposed to dodge the footsteps of both bride and bridegroom if they return to the house after having once started off on their honeymoon.

FIRST ANAESTHETIC USED

Chloroform Was Discovered in 1848—Whose Honor?

Sir James Simpson, Professor of Midwifery in the Chair of Edinburg University, if not actually the discoverer of chloroform, was, at any rate, the first to introduce its employment as an anaesthetic into surgical practice. This was in 1848. Previously all operations were performed without anaesthetics, the patient being drugged with whisky and held down by strong men while the operation was performed. No medical discovery ever did more to alleviate human suffering.

Sir James is generally given credit for the actual discovery of chloroform, but it is stated in some works that it was discovered some years previous to his first experiments by an American doctor named Guthrie and by a French physician named Souberian. In any case, it was Dr. Simpson who proved its great value as an anaesthetic, and the room in which he made his first experiment still exists in Edinburgh. The story goes that he tried the chloroform on himself and two medical friends. They proved its efficacy by simultaneously falling beneath the table. Sir James had considerable prejudices to overcome before chloroform was adopted generally by the medical profession, it being denounced at one time as dangerous to health, morals, and religion.

RECORD RAILWAYS

Russia has beaten all records in railway construction. She built a great double-track, broad-guage line from Alexandrovsk, an ice-free port on her north coast, down to Petrograd, and completed it within six months. It is 1,220 miles long, and 10,000 men, mostly prisoners, were employed upon it. Then look at the Great Siberian railway! Five thousand five hundred [illegible] across wild plain [illegible] great mountain ranges, in a climate where for five months of the year the soil is frozen to the consistency of granite, and all this in eight summers! It is a record which, ever in North America, has never been equalled. It cost one hundred and forty millions, and since its completion another twenty-two millions have been spent in improving the line.

The best work done in America under similar, but even worse conditions, was the construction of the White Pass and Yukon Railway, which opened up the route from the coast to Skagway to the gold region of Klondike. Within twenty miles from its starting point this line has to climb the White Pass, a height of just off three thousand feet. When the station at the summit was opened seven feet of snow surrounded it, and the thermometer registered 57 degrees below zero—that is, 89 degrees of frost!

AFTER SIX YEARS OF SUFFERING

Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio.—"I had almost given up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could not eat anything without hurting my stomach. I could not drink cold water at all nor eat any kind of raw fruit, nor fresh meat nor chicken. From 178 pounds I went to 118 and would get so weak at times that I fell over. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine ever since and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life."—Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1624 South 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains just the virtues of roots and herbs needed to restore health and strength to the weakened organs of the body. That is why Mrs. Barlow, a chronic invalid, recovered so completely.

It pays for women suffering from any female ailments to insist upon having Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wit and Wisdom

The fluent spoken man in the smoking room of a certain hotel was talking about his great abilities—what he had done, what he could do, and finished up thus:

"I always go by the motto, 'If you want a thing done well, do it yourself.'"

"Nonsense!" replied a man in the corner. "Suppose you want a haircut?"

"I want to buy a piece for my daughter," announced a woman hustling into a local music store one day.

[illegible] son? How advanced is your daughter?" asked the clerk.

"Oh, Myrtle's only 14, but she can play anything, no matter how hard it is, when once she gets it by the ear!"

The girl was seated at dinner next to a gentleman whose name she had not caught, and the conversation after a while reached this stage:

"Did you ever talk in your sleep?" asked the girl.

"No," was the reply, "but I often talk in other people's. I am the vicar of a London church, you know."

"Those old alchemists thought they could make gold out of baser metals."

"Yes. But they didn't get rich."

"No. They devoted too much time working in laboratories and not enough in circulating prospectuses and stock certificates."

"The girl who washes our dishes tells me she is going to work in a munition factory."

"Think she will do well at it?"

"Oh, yes. Her duty is to break iron things to fill shells with shrapnel."

MR. BALFOUR'S MESSAGE.

Paid Tribute to the War Work of the Dominion.

It is gratifying to Canadians that Mr. Balfour should first set foot on American soil in Canadian territory; and they will earnestly hope that before he returns to England he may be able to pay a visit to this country and give the people an opportunity of testifying in some public way to their profound respect for him. Mr. Balfour is one of the greatest statesmen produced in the British Empire in many years. One would have to go far back to find one to whom he might be properly likened. He is a man of very genuine culture as well as a statesman. During his brief stay in Canada, Mr. Balfour delivered a message to the Canadian people, which will doubtless pass into the permanent record of our part in the war. The statement is headed: "From Mr. Balfour to the Canadian newspapers," and is as follows: "I am glad that, owing to the chances of war, a diplomatic mission from Great Britain to the United States should first set foot upon American soil in Canada, and that it should fall to me, a Scot by birth, as are so many thousands of your fellow-citizens, to bear witness to the heroism and the patient sacrifice of your sons and your daughters.

"The roll of honor of the British Empire has many names upon it which kindle our imagination, and in the mention have power to knit us all together. Upon that roll the names of Ypres and Vimy Ridge will bear witness to the world through history that when the cause was just and the peril great Canada would spare nothing of what in peace time men hold dear.

"I know well that heroism and sacrifice are not confined within the limits of the battlefield. Sir Robert Borden has had a story to tell in Great Britain of effort prodigally offered to the Imperial cause in every township from ocean's coast to ocean's coast, of the prudent counsels men in matters of administration and finance, of the contrivance of your men of business, of the munition work that your men and women have performed. Finally, but not least, I would not have forgotten in the Empire the service of Canada to the work of the Red Cross. You have combined to the utmost limit of your powers, energy, and mercy in your prosecution of the war. In times of reconstruction, such as these, they form the only foundation upon which Empires can be built that have any service to offer to mankind. I have been sent upon a mission to your neighboring State — I think of it as your mission as well as ours—and I trust that a representative from Canada will join me in Washington.

"(Signed) A. J. Balfour."

Another Lie Nailed.

The American correspondent of the Maasbode of Rotterdam, who sailed from the United States on the steamer with Count von Bernstorff, writes an article protesting against reports of bad treatment by the Canadian authorities at Halifax of the former German Ambassador at Washington and members of his party. The writer is Chevalier Van Der Schueren, a Dutch nobleman, who is a relative of the Dutch Minister at the Vatican. He writes:

"It is a pity that Count von Bernstorff has given way to caricaturing the situation, but when he invokes the testimony of his non-German co-passengers, I am bound to state that while the protracted period of search at Halifax was tiresome business, it was made bearable by the incredible courtesy and willingness of the British staff charged with the search of the vessel, courtesy which was the subject of discussion by all the passengers."

Germany has addressed a protest to the United States regarding alleged indignities suffered by members of the Bernstorff party at Halifax.

Diceless Dicing, Now.

It's pencilitis now.

Pencilitis is not a disease. It is found mostly in cigar stands around town. It takes more than one to have pencilitis.

The next time you step into a cigar store and see a customer standing against the case keeping a clerk busy rolling a pencil back and forth between them, look out for you will find out what it is.

It's diceless dice.

Some wise clerk in one of the stores conceived the idea of taking an ordinary six-sided lead pencil and marking its six sides with numbers corresponding to those on dice. The pencil is rolled and the one who rolls the highest number wins a "horse," as they call a trick in Indian dice. Two tricks out of three win the game.

While not as handy as dice, the pencils are helping some. And there is not the risk of being arrested for having a gambling device, for lawyers say they have not found a case where a court held that a pencil could be placed in the same category as cards and dice.

Training Farmers.

France is teaching some of her wounded soldiers how to be up-to-date farmers in spite of their disabilities. At Cellard, in the Department of the Loire, an institution has been opened with a complete equipment of modern farm machinery for the cultivation and harvesting of crops, including a tractor for plowing and other purposes. The instruction is essentially practical, the staff consisting of a competent agriculturist and an expert mechanic versed in farm machinery.

Received V.C. in Dramatic Manner

THERE is a mother in Winnipeg who has for eighteen months sorrowed over a Victoria Cross, the decoration won by her son at Langemarck in April, 1915. It was received by her by registered post, without the public presentation which, although it may be considered merely a matter of form and procedure, is the means of placing honor where honor is due. That mother is Mrs. M. Hall of 30 Hargrave street. The son over whom she grieves was Sergt. Frank Hall, of the 8th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force.

For a year and a half the little mother has treasured the coveted decoration, but she had never worn it until the afternoon of Thursday, April 12, when it was pinned on her breast by Sergt. James Smith, D.C. M., of Edmonton, Alta., during the Great War Veterans' convention.

When she was taken before the convention and the story told sixty men wept, and then honored her in a manner that she will always remember.

Sergt. Smith was standing in the war veterans' club rooms when he noticed a woman standing in one corner, a small box in her hand, and her eyes dimmed with tears. She opened the box to look within. He moved closer and his eyes rested on the Victoria Cross.

Approaching the little woman, he asked her who had won the much-coveted decoration, and she replied: "My son, Sergt. Frank Hall. He died in France," and she could say no more.

"When was it presented to you?" he asked.

Slowly she replied: "It has never been presented to me. I received it by registered post more than a year and a half ago."

"Then you have never worn it?"

"No, I never have. But I was just thinking I would like to wear my boy's cross if—if I could get one of the returned men here to pin it on my breast!" and she sobbed quietly.

The sergeant took the glittering little medal from the box and pinned it to the woman's dress, saying: "This is the happiest moment of my life. I am honored to present for the first time a Victoria Cross to the mother of a pal who has been left in France." They stood for a moment with clasped hands. Sergeant Smith was the first to speak.

He asked her if she would come upstairs where returned men from all over Canada were assembled that they might know the woman who had mothered Winnipeg's first V. C. hero.

He went ahead and on entering the assembly room halted the proceedings by declaring, "Mr. Chairman and comrades, I have just experienced the happiest moment in my life! I have pinned a Victoria Cross to the dress of Mrs. Hall, whose sergeant son was killed during the discharging of his duty, for which he received the highest military recognition. What is your pleasure; will I show her in?"

For a moment the delegates stood dumbfounded. Then in chorus they cried, "Yes, certainly bring her in!" and the pressing business of a moment before was forgotten. As Sergt. Smith left the room cigars and pipes were discarded, and as he re-entered with Mrs. Hall every man rose to his feet.

They crossed to the chair and Mrs. Hall shook hands with the chairman. "Comrades," said the chairman, "I am more than proud to have Mrs. Hall here to-day, for her son, Sergt. Hall, was a member of my battalion, in France, the eighth. I want to say that a braver man never left Canada——" and then the speaker's voice wavered and he could not continue. "We might hear from Sergt. Smith," he said.

Sergt. Smith told the assembly of his finding Mrs. Smith in the hall below and of his placing the coveted medal on her breast. As he spoke men bowed their heads and lifted them when they could not keep back the tears. Not a man in the room remained unaffected, as they recalled their days in France, when hearts ached for their greatest treasures—mothers and wives at home.

When Sergt. Smith concluded Mrs. Hall was asked to tell of the manner in which she received the decoration. In a voice that was weak and wavering with emotion she said: "It came in August, 1915, by registered post." Continuing, the mother said, "I have never worn it until now. It has been too sacred to me, but I am proud that it has been placed where it is for the first time by a hero of this war. It means more to me," and she bowed her head.

"Three cheers for the mother of Sergt. Hall!" someone cried, and three cheers were given and a tiger. The room echoed from the yell. Then, after an awkward pause, another started with a tremulous voice the first lines of the well-known song, "Mother," and every man present put forth his best efforts to sing the refrain.

Mrs. Hall thanked the men for their kindness, and went from the room with a light of happiness shining through her tears and the Victoria Cross glittering in the shafts of sunlight.

True Pleasure.

"Major Rasher, I saw a man today who would like the pleasure of kicking you," said a friend.

"Kicking me!" exploded the Major. "Kicking me! Give me his name at once!"

"I hardly like to tell you," said the other.

"I insist upon knowing," said the Major.

"Ah, well, I'll tell you," said the other. "It's a soldier who's in the hospital with both legs off."—Tit-Bits.

Great American Citizen Who Worked for Allies And Admired the British

IT has been often said that before the United States went to war against the Germans, the people of that country whose sentiment was pro-Ally, were pro-French rather than pro-British. Among the really great men of the United States this was not the fact. One of these men was Joseph Choate, who recently passed away in New York after a long and fortunate life. For two generations this man, "the leading citizen of New York," so the newspapers proclaim him, has given fruitful aid to every work of humanity and patriotism, and to every cause of better government where his influence could be exerted. His good fortune persisted to the end, even Azreal seemed to withhold the shadow of his wing until this American was made happy and content by the course his country took in the most tremendous of earthly events. He had a wonderfully gallant old age, hopeful, useful, radiant, and unquenched. He might have wished perhaps to live long enough to see his ardent hopes concerning the outcome of the war brought to fruition, but at least the last public event in which he took part was one which must have given him great satisfaction. He bore an honored part in the welcome of the British Commissioners, and saw what he had always hoped to see, the great Anglo-Saxon democracies drawn more closely together. The union of France and England with his own country in a great common aim inwrought with the fabric of civilization, woke all his enthusiasm. For beyond the immediate struggles he saw the vision of a world at peace. Mr. Choate spoke up stoutly for the prosecution of the war to the end; but he was a lover of peace and of justice secured by peaceful means. At the second Hague Conference he was the champion of every method of abolishing war. In one speech at The Hague he had an impassioned burst about the alternatives to settlement of international disputes by judicial process—a burst which almost has a prophetic air, in view of what has since occurred:

HON. JOSEPH CHOATE

"Let us resume all the savage practices of ancient times. Let us sack cities and put their inhabitants to the sword. Let us bombard undefended towns. Let us cast to the winds the rights of security that have been accorded to neutrals. Let us make the sufferings of soldiers and sailors in and after battle as frightful as possible. Let us wipe out all that the Red Cross has accomplished at Geneva, and the whole record of the First Peace Conference at The Hague, and all the negotiations and lofty aspirations that have resulted in the summoning of the present conference."

If Mr. Choate the past two years showed that a kind of sæva indignatio burned in his heart against Germany, it was mainly because his instincts as an international lawyer and a friend of peace had been so outraged by her reversion to barbarous warfare.

Armadillo, for Instance, Is Well Protected Against Assault.

Now that fighting men are going back to the wearing of armor for protection in battle, it is interesting to note the fact that nature has made similar provision for many animals.

The early Spanish invaders of tropical America were greatly interested in certain species of armored mammals, wholly new to them, which they found plentifully distributed over that part of the New World. They called them "armadillos," because they were encased in coats of mail.

The so-called "great armadillo" attains a length of nearly five feet. It is clad in a complete coat of flint-like armor-plates, and its tail, as solid as if forged in metal, has the shape of a trumpet. In fact, the aborigines of the Amazon valley use it as a trumpet for signaling in war. Even the smaller species of armadillos, however, are equally well protected, the head being defended by a sort of helmet. If attacked by a beast or bird of prey, the creature instantly rolls itself into a ball, thus rendering itself proof against injury.

In ancient times there lived in South America a giant ancestor of the modern armadillos. One of its huge shells, some years ago, was found by an English naturalist in use as a playhouse by half a dozen children. In another native camp (it was in the Pampas region) he came across a trumpet as big as those commonly employed on ships. It was the tail of a specimen of the extinct armored mammal.

Alligators and crocodiles, of course, are familiar to-day as types of the armored reptile. They are clad in complete mail, which is certainly proof against buckshot, and is hardly penetrable by a rifle bullet, unless a weak point in the armor be struck. Such a bullet, striking one of the plates, is fairly sure to be deflected harmlessly.

There are no armored birds. So far as known, there never were any. It is a fact accepted by naturalists that all birds are descended from reptiles, but in the process of acquiring wings and feathers for purposes of flight they might have been expected to discard unnecessary encumbrances.

In antediluvian days there were many species of armored fishes, some of which are represented today by survivors, in this respect degenerate. Evidently nature, which is forever making experiments, did not think the idea worth perpetuating.

In the insect kingdom, however, there are to-day not merely a few, but hundreds of thousands of armored species. These are the beetles, which are clad, in complete suits of mail. Their armor, in fact, is made of a material far more indestructible than steel—namely, "chitine." Chitine cannot be destroyed except by certain mineral acids.

There are several species of beetles whose "shining armor" is reputed to contain gold or silver, and, owing to this belief, people often gather them and melt them. Most remarkable of these are the "gold bugs" of the genus "plusiotis." One might easily imagine a specimen to be the work of some clever artificer in metal, the head and wing cases being brilliantly polished, with all the seeming of metal to sight and touch, and with a lustre as of gold itself.

Baby Stopped Gunfire.

A day was dawning on a battlefield in northern France through a fog so thick that none could see more than a few yards from the trenches. In the night the Germans had drawn back their lines a little and the French had closely advanced, but between the two positions a lone farmhouse was still standing. As the sun rose and the fog cleared and the gunners found their ranges, heavy guns began to boom and answer back. Thus began again the old, old, wearisome story of day after day of desolation and death.

But suddenly on both sides the firing ceased and there fell a peculiar dead stillness. Midway between the trenches, near the now shattered farmhouse, there was—no, it must be impossible, it must be a delusion! But no—there in the green meadow, crawling on its hands and knees, was a little child, a mere baby. It appeared perfectly happy and contented, and in the sudden dumbness of the soldiers the baby's laugh was heard as it clutched a dandelion. Not a sound was to be heard but that; not a shot was fired; scarcely did a soldier on either side dare breathe.

Suddenly a soldier jumped out of a German trench and ran to where the child was crawling. He tenderly took it up and carried it back to shelter. From the trenches of the French there came no shots, but there rang along both lines a mighty cheer.

But soon, alas, the guns were booming again and answering back, and the flowering bit of meadow was plowed by shells; for war is war, and men must not long yield to pity.

A PARALLEL HISTORY

SEMI-CENTENNIAL IN CANADA AND ALASKA.

United States Began to Work With Their Northern Possession About the Time That the Great Development of the Resources of the Dominion Got Under Way.

DURING the first half of 1917 occur two half-centuries which have an evident relationship. It is fifty years since Alaska passed from Russia to the United States; it is just that time since Canadian delegates in London, by drafting the British North American Act and obtaining its approval by Parliament and Queen, laid the foundation of modern Canada. The parts of Canada nearest Alaska were not at once received into the federation. But within five years the Northwest was taken over from the Hudson Bay Company, and Manitoba carved from it, and British Columbia had joined the East; while one of the direct results of the federation was the building of railways for the integration of Canada, and for exploration and development of its new parts. The North America Act and the purchase of Alaska must have been perceived by shrewd men to presage together the opening of the North. After fifty years this northern development seems in many respects slow. Alaska has now but sixteen incorporated towns and a white population of 45,000. Canada, with the area of Europe, has still a population less than that of New York State. But the end of the half-century is felt by competent observers to mark the beginning of a time when colonization of these great areas will be rapid.

Assurance of a great future for the North rises from the triple fact that at last its resources and opportunities are understood, the rival ones to the south have been largely exploited, and physical preparation for opening up the new country have been pushed well forward. We are likely to give too old a date to our present sophistication on the subject of the wealth of Canada and Alaska. We know that north of the Minnesota-Dakota lines lies a wheat area as good as the Red River Valley, so wide that one might travel as far as from Paris to Petrograd through its fields, and of unknown extent north and south. We know that the estimate of a Canadian scientist in 1904 that wheat grown on one-fourth of the suitable land in the western provinces would produce 800,000,000 bushels, or enough for 150,000,000 people, while the rest could be used for general cropping, is moderate. Yet not many decades ago the Hudson Bay Company affirmed that the North-West was, agriculturally, useless; even in the eighties and nineties many scoffed at the idea of wheat harvests; and not till fifteen years ago did the full truth begin to be known. The mineral resources of Canada are so ill-tapped that the largest asbestos deposits in the world, the silver and lead of Cobalt, and the nickel of Sudbury were discovered only when railway cuttings were made through them.

What has been done to offer physical facilities for these untouched empires illustrates the advantages of governmental over private enterprises. Canada a half-century ago had no transcontinental line, no Pacific steamer service; but one irregular and weak Atlantic passenger line; no real canal system; no markets for crops. Now the Dominion is traversed by three trans-continental lines, and in the last twenty years mileage has doubled, rising above 30,000. In 1915 the Canadian Northern completed a $400,000,000 construction, with hotels and elevators, that welds Quebec and Vancouver together and serves every city of importance in the Dominion; and the same year the Grand Trunk Pacific opened full local and through service from Prince Rupert to Winnipeg, thence connecting with all Dominion cities. The Canadian Pacific, with its ocean lines and land domain, is a powerful arm in Dominion development. All this has been brought about by Government encouragement. Five years ago an Edmonton official pointed to the map north of the city and told an English traveller that "that is all a sealed book. We know that it has a splendid climate and that millions of acres are underlain with coal. But the whole of that country is unsurveyed and practically the whole unprospected and unexplored. You want to know about it? Ah, so do we!" Now Edmonton is the hub of a whole wheel of lines, and trains may soon be taken from it even to Hudson Bay. In Alaska the American Government is operating the Alaska Northern from Seward and is building as fast as possible from Anchorage to the Matanuska coal fields.

During twenty dark years when fat American lands were being opened, Canada lost nearly a quarter of her population to the United States. Thanks to the filling of the American West and the hundreds of millions our Government has spent to make immigration easy, we have lately regained much of it and two million Americans as well. During even the first year of the war nearly 150,000 settlers entered, 60,000 from the United States, and occupied 4,000,000 acres of land. In Alaska the population of the Pacific coast some years ago began growing steadily, and the Government now reports that though railway construction "has only fairly begun, there has been a large influx of people. . . . many with the purpose of becoming permanent settlers."

LONDON MISSES NEWSBILL.

Change Was Result of Wartime Paper Shortage.

London finds it hard to reconcile itself to the loss of its old newsbills. It is resigned, of course, since paper shortage is paper shortage, but it loves to talk about the matter; to stop its neighbor at the street corner and make remark as to how this loss has changed things, and to recount the ways in which it has learned of the striking things that have happened during the preceding twenty-four hours. The casual visitor to London could never fully appreciate what the loss means to a Londoner. The newsbill is one of those things which he had grown so accustomed to, and took so much for granted, that he never realized, until they went, how largely they constituted for him an ever-open door to the world's happenings. "What news on the Rialto?" was a question which, in London, until recently, found an answer at every street corner or public place in the busy parts of the great city. Newsbills, several of them, all easily distinguished from one another by the practiced eye as the advertisement of this or that well-known paper, were, indeed, part of the outfit of every newsboy. In days of stress, or on any day, he might be seen bursting out of some side street, or rushing through some swing door into Fleet street, hastily adjusting in front of him, as he ran, the latest newsbill, wet from the press, and crying out, after the manner of his kind, the great news he had to sell.

Then, his devices for displaying his bills when he had a regular "pitch" were many and wonderful. They would be impaled on railings, strapped to lampposts and the old iron corner posts, so familiar a feature of the London streets; or they would be laid flat on their backs close to the pavement, weighted down with stones and watered in order to make them more sedentary in their habits; but, whatever the device resorted to, they were always so placed that all who passed by might gather at a glance the latest new thing.

It was not only, however, that they kept one in touch with the news of the world and the rumors of the world, from hour to hour; they were a constant study in ingenuity. Every now and again, one particular newspaper would secure the services of a past master in the art of newsbill writing, and it would become a thing to look for, how this paper would announce this or that startling piece of intelligence. The bills were dependent, of course, for their wit and point upon their utter oppositeness to the thought and feeling almost of the moment. To be really effective they demanded all the immediateness of repartee. There was no time for the newsbill writer, after the manner of a certain famous "night watchman," to think out "back talk" in the darkness of the night. And so there could be no rule about it. It was a field for genius. The newsbill writer on that momentous morning of August 5th, 1914, knew his business when he sent out his bills showing the single word "War," just as surely as he will one day know his business well enough to send them out bearing the single word "Peace"; for, on that day, he will take the law into his own hands, and send out newsbills, all regulations to the contrary, notwithstanding. Of course, the newsboy has not tamely acquiesced in the deprivation. It is always possible to get a piece of chalk, and one can write on most things; and many of them resorted to this expedient. He has, moreover, as always, been notably cheerful, not to say facetious, about it. The very word "bill" opens the door to great possibilities. There was a man, for instance, for your London newsboy is often a man, who has walked down Fleet street many summers and many winters, who chalked across the board on which he was wont to display his news, the laconic legend, "Bill gone"—to the front, maybe, or to make munitions. London is getting used to it, of course, just as it, long ago, got used to darkened streets; but it will be glad when the lights are turned on again, and the newsboy girds himself, once more, with his apron of news.—Christian Science Monitor.

MR. BALFOUR'S MESSAGE.

Paid Tribute to the War Work of the Dominion.

It is gratifying to Canadians that Mr. Balfour should first set foot on American soil in Canadian territory; and they will earnestly hope that before he returns to England he may be able to pay a visit to this country and give the people an opportunity of testifying in some public way to their profound respect for him. Mr. Balfour is one of the greatest statesmen produced in the British Empire in many years. One would have to go far back to find one to whom he might be properly likened. He is a man of very genuine culture as well as a statesman. During his brief stay in Canada, Mr. Balfour delivered a message to the Canadian people, which will doubtless pass into the permanent record of our part in the war. The statement is headed: "From Mr. Balfour to the Canadian newspapers," and is as follows: "I am glad that, owing to the chances of war, a diplomatic mission from Great Britain to the United States should first set foot upon American soil in Canada, and that it should fall to me, a Scot by birth, as are so many thousands of your fellow-citizens, to bear witness to the heroism and the patient sacrifice of your sons and your daughters.

"The roll of honor of the British Empire has many names upon it which kindle our imagination, and in the mention have power to knit us all together. Upon that roll the names of Ypres and Vimy Ridge will bear witness to the world through history that when the cause was just and the peril great Canada would spare nothing of what in peace time men held dear.

"I know well that heroism and sacrifice are not confined within the limits of the battlefield. Sir Robert Borden has had a story to tell in Great Britain of effort prodigally offered to the Imperial cause in every township from ocean's coast to ocean's coast, of the prudent counsels [illegible] men in matters of administration and finance, of the contrivance of your men of business, of the munition work that your men and women have performed. Finally, but not least, I would not have forgotten in the Empire the service of Canada to the work of the Red Cross. You have combined to the utmost limit of your powers, energy, and mercy in your prosecution of the war. In times of reconstruction, such as these, they form the only foundation upon which Empires can be built that have any service to offer to mankind. I have been sent upon a mission to your neighboring State — I think of it as your mission as well as ours—and I trust that a representative from Canada will join me in Washington.

"(Signed) A. J. Balfour."

Another Lie Nailed.

The American correspondent of the Maasbode of Rotterdam, who sailed from the United States on the steamer with Count von Bernstorff, writes an article protesting against reports of bad treatment by the Canadian authorities at Halifax of the former German Ambassador at Washington and members of his party. The writer is Chevalier Van Der Schueren, a Dutch nobleman, who is a relative of the Dutch Minister at the Vatican. He writes:

"It is a pity that Count von Bernstorff has given way to caricaturing the situation, but when he invokes the testimony of his non-German co-passengers, I am bound to state that while the protracted period of search at Halifax was tiresome business, it was made bearable by the [illegible] courtesy and willingness of the British staff charged with the search of the vessel, courtesy which was the subject of discussion by all the passengers."

Diceless Dicing, Now.

It's pencilitis now.

Pencilitis is not a disease. It is found mostly in cigar stands around town. It takes more than one to have pencilitis.

The next time you step into a cigar store and see a customer standing against the case keeping a clerk busy rolling a pencil back and forth between them, look out for you will find out what it is.

It's diceless dice.

Some wise clerk in one of the stores conceived the idea of taking an ordinary six-sided lead pencil and marking its six sides with numbers corresponding to those on dice. The pencil is rolled and the one who rolls the highest number wins a "horse," as they call a trick in Indian dice. Two tricks out of three win the game.

While not as handy as dice, the pencils are helping some. And there is not the risk of being arrested for having a gambling device, for lawyers say they have not found a case where a court held that a pencil could be placed in the same category as cards and dice.

Received V.C. in Dramatic Manner

THERE is a mother in Winnipeg who has for eighteen months sorrowed over a Victoria Cross, the decoration won by her son at Langemarck in April, 1915. It was received by her by registered post, without the public presentation which, although it may be considered merely a matter of form and procedure, is the means of placing honor where honor is due. That mother is Mrs. M. Hall of 30 Hargrave street. The son over whom she grieves was Sergt. Frank Hall, of the 8th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force.

For a year and a half the little mother has treasured the coveted decoration, but she had never worn it until the afternoon of Thursday, April 12, when it was pinned on her breast by Sergt. James Smith, D.C.M., of Edmonton, Alta., during the Great War Veterans' convention.

When she was taken before the convention and the story told sixty men wept, and then honored her in a manner that she will always remember.

Sergt. Smith was standing in the war veterans' club rooms when he noticed a woman standing in one corner, a small box in her hand, and her eyes dimmed with tears. She opened the box to look within. He moved closer and his eyes rested on the Victoria Cross.

Approaching the little woman, he asked her who had won the much-coveted decoration, and she replied: "My son, Sergt. Frank Hall. He died in France," and she could say no more.

"When was it presented to you?" he asked.

Slowly she replied: "It has never been presented to me. I received it by registered post more than a year and a half ago."

"Then you have never worn it?"

"No, I never have. But I was just thinking I would like to wear my boy's cross if—if I could get one of the returned men here to pin it on my breast!" and she sobbed quietly.

The sergeant took the glittering little medal from the box and pinned it to the woman's dress, saying: "This is the happiest moment of my life. I am honored to present for the first time a Victoria Cross to the mother of a pal who has been left in France." They stood for a moment with clasped hands. Sergeant Smith was the first to speak.

He asked her if she would come upstairs where returned men from all over Canada were assembled that they might know the woman who had mothered Winnipeg's first V. C. hero.

He went ahead and on entering the assembly room halted the proceedings by declaring, "Mr. Chairman and comrades, I have just experienced the happiest moment in my life! I have pinned a Victoria Cross to the dress of Mrs. Hall, whose sergeant son was killed during the discharging of his duty, for which he received the highest military recognition. What is your pleasure; will I show her in?"

For a moment the delegates stood dumbfounded. Then in chorus they cried, "Yes, certainly bring her in!" and the pressing business of a moment before was forgotten. As Sergt. Smith left the room cigars and pipes were discarded, and as he re-entered with Mrs. Hall every man rose to his feet.

They crossed to the chair and Mrs. Hall shook hands with the chairman. "Comrades," said the chairman, "I am more than proud to have Mrs. Hall here to-day, for her son, Sergt. Hall, was a member of my battalion, in France, the eighth. I want to say that a braver man never left Canada——" and then the speaker's voice wavered and he could not continue. "We might hear from Sergt. Smith," he said.

Sergt. Smith told the assembly of his finding Mrs. Smith in the hall below and of his placing the coveted medal on her breast. As he spoke men bowed their heads and lifted them when they could not keep back the tears. Not a man in the room remained unaffected, as they recalled their days in France, when hearts ached for their greatest treasures—mothers and wives at home.

When Sergt. Smith concluded Mrs. Hall was asked to tell of the manner in which she received the decoration. In a voice that was weak and wavering with emotion she said: "It came in August, 1915, by registered post." Continuing, the mother said, "I have never worn it until now. It has been too sacred to me, but I am proud that it has been placed where it is for the first time by a hero of this war. It means more to me," and she bowed her head.

"Three cheers for the mother of Sergt. Hall!" someone cried, and three cheers were given and a tiger. The room echoed from the yell. Then, after an awkward pause, another started with a tremulous voice the first lines of the well-known song, "Mother," and every man present put forth his best efforts to sing the refrain.

Mrs. Hall thanked the men for their kindness, and went from the room with a light of happiness shining through her tears and the Victoria Cross glittering in the shafts of sunlight.

True Pleasure.

"Major Rasher, I saw a man today who would like the pleasure of kicking you," said a friend.

"Kicking me!" exploded the Major. "Kicking me! Give me his name at once!"

"I hardly like to tell you," said the other.

"I insist upon knowing," said the Major.

"Ah, well, I'll tell you," said the other. "It's a soldier who's in the hospital with both legs off."—Tit-Bits.

Great American Citizen Who Worked for Allies And Admired the British

IT has been often said that before the United States went to war against the Germans, the people of that country whose sentiment was pro-Ally, were pro-French rather than pro-British. Among the really great men of the United States this was not the fact. One of these men was Joseph Choate, who recently passed away in New York after a long and fortunate life. For two generations this man, "the leading citizen of New York," so the newspapers proclaim him, has given fruitful aid to every work of humanity and patriotism, and to every cause of better government where his influence could be exerted. His good fortune persisted to the end, even Azrael seemed to withhold the shadow of his wing until this American was made happy and content by the course his country took in the most tremendous of earthly events. He had a wonderfully gallant old age, hopeful, useful, radiant, and unquenched. He might have wished perhaps to live long enough to see his ardent hopes concerning the outcome of the war brought to fruition, but at least the last public event in which he took part was one which must have given him great satisfaction. He bore an honored part in the welcome of the British Commissioners, and saw what he had always hoped to see, the great Anglo-Saxon democracies drawn more closely together. The union of France and England with his own country in a great common aim inwrought with the fabric of civilization, woke all his enthusiasm. For beyond the immediate struggles he saw the vision of a world at peace. Mr. Choate spoke up stoutly for the prosecution of the war to the end; but he was a lover of peace and of justice secured by peaceful means. At the second Hague Conference he was the champion of every method of abolishing war. In one speech at The Hague he had an impassioned burst about the alternatives to settlement of international disputes by judicial process—a burst which almost has a prophetic air, in view of what has since occurred:

HON. JOSEPH CHOATE

"Let us resume all the savage practices of ancient times. Let us sack cities and put their inhabitants to the sword. Let us bombard undefended towns. Let us cast to the winds the rights of security that have been accorded to neutrals. Let us make the sufferings of soldiers and sailors in and after battle as frightful as possible. Let us wipe out all that the Red Cross has accomplished at Geneva, and the whole record of the First Peace Conference at The Hague, and all the negotiations and lofty aspirations that have resulted in the summoning of the present conference."

If Mr. Choate the past two years showed that a kind of sæva indignatio burned in his heart against Germany, it was mainly because his instincts as an international lawyer and a friend of peace had been so outraged by her reversion to barbarous warfare.

Armadillo, for Instance, Is Well Protected Against Assault.

Now that fighting men are going back to the wearing of armor for protection in battle, it is interesting to note the fact that nature has made similar provision for many animals.

The early Spanish invaders of tropical America were greatly interested in certain species of armored mammals, wholly new to them, which they found plentifully distributed over that part of the New World. They called them "armadillos," because they were encased in coats of mail.

The so-called "great armadillo" attains a length of nearly five feet. It is clad in a complete coat of flint-like armor-plates, and its tail, as solid as if forged in metal, has the shape of a trumpet. In fact, the aborigines of the Amazon valley use it as a trumpet for signaling in war. Even the smaller species of armadillos, however, are equally well protected, the head being defended by a sort of helmet. If attacked by a beast or bird of prey, the creature instantly rolls itself into a ball, thus rendering itself proof against injury.

In ancient times there lived in South America a giant ancestor of the modern armadillos. One of its huge shells, some years ago, was found by an English naturalist in use as a playhouse by half a dozen children. In another native camp (it was in the Pampas region) he came across a trumpet as big as those commonly employed on ships. It was the tail of a specimen of the extinct armored mammal.

Alligators and crocodiles, of course, are familiar to-day as types of the armored reptile. They are clad in complete mail, which is certainly proof against buckshot, and is hardly penetrable by a rifle bullet, unless a weak point in the armor be struck. Such a bullet, striking one of the plates, is fairly sure to be deflected harmlessly.

There are no armored birds. So far as known, there never were any. It is a fact accepted by naturalists that all birds are descended from reptiles, but in the process of acquiring wings and feathers for purposes of flight they might have been expected to discard unnecessary encumbrances.

In antediluvian days there were many species of armored fishes, some of which are represented to-day by survivors, in this respect degenerate. Evidently nature, which is forever making experiments, did not think the idea worth perpetuating.

In the insect kingdom, however, there are to-day not merely a few, but hundreds of thousands of armored species. These are the beetles, which are clad, in complete suits of mail. Their armor, in fact, is made of a material far more indestructible than steel—namely, "chitine." Chitine cannot be destroyed except by certain mineral acids.

There are several species of beetles whose "shining armor" is reputed to contain gold or silver, and, owing to this belief, people often gather them and melt them. Most remarkable of these are the "gold bugs" of the genus "plusiotis." One might easily imagine a specimen to be the work of some clever artificer in metal, the head and wing cases being brilliantly polished, with all the seeming of metal to sight and touch, and with a lustre as of gold itself.

Baby Stopped Gunfire.

A day was dawning on a battlefield in northern France through a fog so thick that none could see more than a few yards from the trenches. In the night the Germans had drawn back their lines a little and the French had closely advanced, but between the two positions a lone farmhouse was still standing. As the sun rose and the fog cleared and the gunners found their ranges, heavy guns began to boom and answer back. Thus began again the old, old, wearisome story of day after day of desolation and death.

But suddenly on both sides the firing ceased and there fell a peculiar dead stillness. Midway between the trenches, near the now shattered farmhouse, there was—no, it must be impossible, it must be a delusion! But no—there in the green meadow, crawling on its hands and knees, was a little child, a mere baby. It appeared perfectly happy and contented, and in the sudden dumbness of the soldiers the baby's laugh was heard as it clutched a dandelion. Not a sound was to be heard but that; not a shot was fired; scarcely did a soldier on either side dare breathe.

Suddenly a soldier jumped out of a German trench and ran to where the child was crawling. He tenderly took it up and carried it back to shelter. From the trenches of the French there came no shots, but there rang along both lines a mighty cheer.

But soon, alas, the guns were booming again and answering back, and the flowering bit of meadow was plowed by shells; for war is war, and men must not long yield to pity.

A PARALLEL HISTORY

SEMI-CENTENNIAL IN CANADA AND ALASKA.

United States Began to Work With Their Northern Possession About the Time That the Great Development of the Resources of the Dominion Got Under Way.

DURING the first half of 1917 occur two half-centuries which have an evident relationship. It is fifty years since Alaska passed from Russia to the United States; it is just that time since Canadian delegates in London, by drafting the British North American Act and obtaining its approval by Parliament and Queen, laid the foundation of modern Canada. The parts of Canada nearest Alaska were not at once received into the federation. But within five years the Northwest was taken over from the Hudson Bay Company, and Manitoba carved from it, and British Columbia had joined the East; while one of the direct results of the federation was the building of railways for the integration of Canada, and for exploration and development of its new parts. The North America Act and the purchase of Alaska must have been perceived by shrewd men to presage together the opening of the North. After fifty years this northern development seems in many respects slow. Alaska has now but sixteen incorporated towns and a white population of 45,000. Canada, with the area of Europe, has still a population less than that of New York State. But the end of the half-century is felt by competent observers to mark the beginning of a time when colonization of these great areas will be rapid.

Assurance of a great future for the North rises from the triple fact that at last its resources and opportunities are understood, the rival ones to the south have been largely exploited, and physical preparation for opening up the new country have been pushed well forward. We are likely to give too old a date to our present sophistication on the subject of the wealth of Canada and Alaska. We know that north of the Minnesota-Dakota lines lies a wheat area as good as the Red River Valley, so wide that one might travel as far as from Paris to Petrograd through its fields, and of unknown extent north and south. We know that the estimate of a Canadian scientist in 1904 that wheat grown on one-fourth of the suitable land in the western provinces would produce 800,000,000 bushels, or enough for 150,000,000 people, while the rest could be used for general cropping, is moderate. Yet not many decades ago the Hudson Bay Company affirmed that the North-West was, agriculturally, useless; even in the eighties and nineties many scoffed at the idea of wheat harvests; and not till fifteen years ago did the full truth begin to be known. The mineral resources of Canada are so ill-tapped that the largest asbestos deposits in the world, the silver and lead of Cobalt, and the nickel of Sudbury were discovered only when railway cuttings were made through them.

What has been done to offer physical facilities for these untouched empires illustrates the advantages of governmental over private enterprises. Canada a half-century ago had no transcontinental line, no Pacific steamer service; but one irregular and weak Atlantic passenger line; no real canal system; no markets for crops. Now the Dominion is traversed by three trans-continental lines, and in the last twenty years mileage has doubled, rising above 30,000. In 1915 the Canadian Northern completed a $400,000,000 construction, with hotels and elevators, that welds Quebec and Vancouver together and serves every city of importance in the Dominion; and the same year the Grand Trunk Pacific opened full local and through service from Prince Rupert to Winnipeg, thence connecting with all Dominion cities. The Canadian Pacific, with its ocean lines and land domain, is a powerful arm in Dominion development. All this has been brought about by Government encouragement. Five years ago an Edmonton official pointed to the map north of the city and told an English traveller that "that is all a sealed book. We know that it has a splendid climate and that millions of acres are underlain with coal. But the whole of that country is unsurveyed and practically the whole unprospected and unexplored. You want to know about it? Ah, so do we!" Now Edmonton is the hub of a whole wheel of lines, and trains may soon be taken from it even to Hudson Bay. In Alaska the American Government is operating the Alaska Northern from Seward and is building as fast as possible from Anchorage to the Matanuska coal fields.

During twenty dark years when fat American lands were being opened, Canada lost nearly a quarter of her population to the United States. Thanks to the filling of the American West and the hundreds of millions our Government has spent to make immigration easy, we have lately regained much of it and two million Americans as well. During even the first year of the war nearly 150,000 settlers entered, 60,000 from the United States, and occupied 4,000,000 acres of land. In Alaska the population of the Pacific coast some years ago began growing steadily, and the Government now reports that though railway construction "has only fairly begun, there has been a large influx of people. . . many with the purpose of becoming permanent settlers."

LONDON MISSES NEWSBILL.

Change Was Result of Wartime Paper Shortage.

London finds it hard to reconcile itself to the loss of its old newsbills. It is resigned, of course, since paper shortage is paper shortage, but it loves to talk about the matter; to stop its neighbor at the street corner and make remark as to how this loss has changed things, and to recount the ways in which it has learned of the striking things that have happened during the preceding twenty-four hours. The casual visitor to London could never fully appreciate what the loss means to a Londoner. The newsbill is one of those things which he had grown so accustomed to, and took so much for granted, that he never realized, until they went, how largely they constituted for him an ever-open door to the world's happenings. "What news on the Rialto?" was a question which, in London, until recently, found an answer at every street corner or public place in the busy parts of the great city. Newsbills, several of them, all easily distinguished from one another by the practiced eye as the advertisement of this or that well-known paper, were, indeed, part of the outfit of every newsboy. In days of stress, or on any day, he might be seen bursting out of some side street, or rushing through some swing door into Fleet street, hastily adjusting in front of him, as he ran, the latest newsbill, wet from the press, and crying out, after the manner of his kind, the great news he had to sell.

Then, his devices for displaying his bills when he had a regular "pitch" were many and wonderful. They would be impaled on railings, strapped to lampposts and the old iron corner posts, so familiar a feature of the London streets; or they would be laid flat on their backs close to the pavement, weighted down with stones and watered in order to make them more sedentary in their habits; but, whatever the device resorted to, they were always so placed that all who passed by might gather at a glance the latest new thing.

It was not only, however, that they kept one in touch with the news of the world and the rumors of the world, from hour to hour; they were a constant study in ingenuity. Every now and again, one particular newspaper would secure the services of a past master in the art of newsbill writing, and it would become a thing to look for, how this paper would announce this or that startling piece of intelligence. The bills were dependent, of course, for their wit and point upon their utter oppositeness to the thought and feeling almost of the moment. To be really effective they demanded all the immediateness of repartee. There was no time for the newsbill writer, after the manner of a certain famous "night watchman," to think out "back talk" in the darkness of the night. And so there could be no rule about it. It was a field for genius. The newsbill writer on that momentous morning of August 5th, 1914, knew his business when he sent out his bills showing the single word "War," just as surely as he will one day know his business well enough to send them out bearing the single word "Peace"; for, on that day, he will take the law into his own hands, and send out newsbills, all regulations to the contrary, notwithstanding. Of course, the newsboy has not tamely acquiesced in the deprivation. It is always possible to get a piece of chalk, and one can write on most things; and many of them resorted to this expedient. He has, moreover, as always, been notably cheerful, not to say facetious, about it. The very word "bill" opens the door to great possibilities. There was a man, for instance, for your London newsboy is often a man, who has walked down Fleet street many summers and many winters, who chalked across the board on which he was wont to display his news, the laconic legend, "Bill gone"—to the front, maybe, or to make munitions. London is getting used to it, of course, just as it, long ago, got used to darkened streets; but it will be glad when the lights are turned on again, and the newsboy girds himself, once more, with his apron of news.—Christian Science Monitor.

No Excuse.

There's something there's no excuse for—scientists can't figure up any alibi for them. It seems they were just invented along with filibusters, mosquitoes, and many other like pests just to make existence miserable. There are five of 'em on each foot, situated on the end you push into the sock first. They are very quarrelsome and there's much friction amongst them and they raise more fuss than a bushel of Mexican revolutions. They are very ungrateful creatures. Toes really owe us a lot for letting them live. They're useless, and what do they do but harvest corns, encourage ingrown nails, freeze up on us and have a mean way of sneaking under somebody else's heel to be stepped on? NO TRACE FOUND OF THE BODIES OF DROWNED MEN

SEARCH STILL GOING ON FOR LINDSAY AND LAKING AT HALIBURTON.

No trace of the bodies of the two men, Lee Lindsay and John Laking, drowned on Saturday in Drag Lake, Haliburton, has yet been found, though searching parties are still patrolling the lake.

A correspondent writes: "How the distressing accident happened will never be known, but likely Mr. Lindsay, being a good swimmer, went down trying to save his companion who could not swim. . . It is altogether the most distressing accident that has ever happened in Haliburton, as both gentlemen were highly respected by the whole community—and I am sure I voice the sentiments of all, that the friends of both have the heartfelt sympathy of the whole village and township in their severe loss, and that they may be sustained, guided and have full trust, even in this dark hour, in Him who has promised to care for the widow and the fatherless—is the wish of all."

WOMEN'S BOOTS LOWER.

That is, in Height, But Not in Price, Says Despatch.

LONDON, May 30.—Women's boots are to be lower this summer. This statement, it should be explained, however, has no reference to prices

It is announced that the Government proposes to economize in leather by prohibiting the manufacture of boots exceeding seven inches in height. Trade journals say manufacturers will gladly comply, hoping they will be permitted to make 'all' boots, provided the tops are of other material than leather. The permission, however, is not likely to be given, because fabrics appropriate for such uses also are scarce.

QUACK DOCTOR IS HANDED $50 BY EASY FARMER

WHO CALLS FOR LINDSAY POLICE WHEN FAKE IS DISCOVERED.

Chief Short, of Lindsay, was called out of his bed on Tuesday night about 12 o'clock by Constable Parkes and a party from Eldon, the latter claiming he was victimized by a man who professed to cure him of a supposed lump on his back. The profesor, or doctor, whatever he had liked to be termed., was stopping with a farmer who he made believe had an enlargement growing in the vicinity of his spinal column, and for his health sake he had better have it taken off. To this the farmer agreed and underwent the regular course of treatment which consisted of rubbing and massaging for one week. After this time he was pronounced cured by the doctor, who made a charge of $50, which was given him.

The doctor handed him back $5 to pay for his week's board, which the farmer did not want to take, but finally accepted. Since thinking the matter over the patient found out that he had no such lumps or projections on his back, and has concluded that he was the victim of a fake.

DRINKING IN JAPAN

Terrible Havoc Wrought by Addiction to "Sake"

That drinking is a widespread habit in city and country life alike, says Captain Bickel, is a widespread general impression in the minds of most missionaries. As, however, outward evidences of direct intoxication are comparatively scarce in public, I fear that the terrible havoc wrought by liquor in Japan is not fully understood. Reports from many prefectaires give striking evidences that drink has a terrible grip on the communities. A few places report drinking as being moderate but by far the large majority of the reports have statements such as the following: "Fifty per cent. of the village A drink." "The village of B with 600 houses spend 12,000 yen ($6,000) per year on sake." "Several families in the village of C spend above fifty dollars each year on alcohol." (The figure represents about the annual earnings of unskilled workers such as night watchmen or porters, and more than most workers will earn in a country village). I have intimate knowledge of one county largely given over to the manufacture of shoyu (a sauce like a ketchup) in which the consumption of sake larke outstrips the profits on this main source of income. Liquor shops are largely on the increase in country districts.

EXPERT SUGGESTS THAT MORE BEANS BE PLANTED THIS YEAR

S. B. McCready, of Guelph College, in City in Connection With Resources Committee.

Mr. S. B. McCready of the Ontario Agricultural College and field secretary of the Ontario Organization of Resources Committee, arrived in the city this morning. He is on a tour of the province organizing branches of the committee, and came here from Warkworth, where one was formed last night. Mr. McCready was pleased to find so vigorous a branch in this city. He spent some time in conference with President Gillespie, Secretary Wearing and other members of the organization, and afterwards left for Lindsay.

Mr. McCready says that grave as the production problem is, it will be worse next season. There will be fewer men than ever in the country when the selective draft is put into operation. Everything that is possible should be done to help the farmers and to prevent waste. Once show the farmers that there is a disposition to aid them, and they will be encouraged to try and produce more than ever next year.

Mr. McCready says more attention should be given to the production of beans, both by the farmer and the gardener. Seed can be obtained from the Dominion Canners at Hamilton, a firm that has agreed to can no more Canadian beans until June 20th, so as to save them for seed. It costs about $8 for seed for an acre of beans, and $40 to purchase seed potatoes for the same amount of land. It is not yet too late to plant the former, and they will do well on a light soil not suitable for potatoes.

Mr. McCready says the crop outlook is cheering and that everything seems to be doing well in spite of the backward season. He urges co-operation in the matter of purchasing seed, and believes that the city should bring in potatoes or beans for the benefit of the producer. He is also an advocate of meatless days and everything else calculated to conserve the supply of food.

MAGISTRATE DUMBLE DISMISSES CASE AGAINST LOUIS DECKER

Interesting Decision as to What Constitutes Violation of Transient Trader's Bylaw.

Police Magistrate Dumble this morning dismissed the charge laid against Louis Decker for a breach of the Transient Traders' Bylaw. someone living in the city of Toronto

In the case of Daniel Thompson, plaintiff, against Louis Decker, the charge is that defendant on Tuesday, the 15th of May, 1917, did unlawfully exercise the calling of a transient trader at the American Hotel Hunter street, Peterborough, without having a license therefor required by Bylaw No. 1775 of the city of Peterborough.

I find by the evidence that the defendant is in the employment of someone living in the city of and carrying on business in Peterborough as a maker and vendor of enlarged photographs! that his process is to send out a lady, who canvasses at the private houses for the enlarging and sale of these framed enlarged photographs; that the lady canvasser is skilful and gets at the homes generally from women, photographs of friends, sons and husbands of the women canvassed, which she induces them to bargain for. After having taken the little old photographs from the home. and there they are enlarged. When a batch of the enlarged photographs is ready, an employe comes down to the city and exhibits the photographs, secures the approval of the people and part payment. Then after a while another employe comes down to deliver the enlarged photographs and the grand frames, and gets a writing signed, containing the price and the approval and the terms of payment on delivery, but the agent will not deliver until he gets all the money.

The man who exhibited the goods and got the written contract is sued in the police court at Peterborough for having committed a breach of the Transient Traders' Bylaw.

It will be observed that the agent who made the written contract and got the part payment had no goods with him at the time, framed and ready for delivery. He simply undertook to send the goods at a future day. Now the question before me is, Did that man commit a breach of the bylaw? Apparently the principal lived entirely out of the city and those who got the original photo and the original contract, and the one who brought the goods to be delivered were simply agents of the principal who carried on the business.

I have looked into the authorities and I am not of the opinion that the violation of the transient traders by-law was committed by the defendant in this case. He had no premises in Peterborough occupied as a place of business; that, when the enlarged photographs were ready for delivery they were brought to Peterborough and stored in a barn ready to be delivered. Now there are many cases which have arisen in this Province practically on all fours with this. For instance, a merchant sends out a traveller who brings samples of cloth. He shows them to his prospective customers who selects his cloth for a suit. The agent takes his measure and sends it to the head office at Toronto or elsewhere, and in due time the suits of clothes come back to the man who bought them. Now there are many instances of this kind cited in the cases. In some of them the order was taken for ladies' garments, but in none of these cases did the prosecutor obtain a conviction either under the Transient Traders' Act or the Hawkers or Pedlars' Act, and the very latest cases reviewing them makes no distinction between the case of the man taking orders for clothing and the man taking orders for enlarged photographs.

In this case, a woman who got hold of the original photo did part of the work. At the head office the photo was enlarged. Then a second man exhibited the enlarged photo, got the approval and the written contract. Then the head office sends a man who delivers the finished goods and collects the balance of the money.

Why should any one of these three or four persons be singled out as the defendant responsible for the whole transaction? Is it not the proprietor of the business who is really the principle? This is a difficulty to be dealt with, but putting the whole matter in the most favorable light for the prosecution, I am satisfied that the defendant in this case was not, under the bylaw, a transient trader, who is defined in the statutes as an occupant for a short time of premises where he does business, who is not a leaseholder, whose name appears in respect of the property on last year's assessment roll. But a man residing out of the city, by means of agents, introduces his goods by sample through agents who take orders and who finally collect the price and deliver the goods. I am constrained to dismiss this charge.

In view of all the authorities, I think that this charge should not have been made without first having been submitted to the city solicitor to make sure that the charge would lie.

The following authorities amongst others may be looked at:

4 Ontario Law Reports, Rex vs. St. Pierre, page 76 (taking orders for ladies' garments).

TOOK THE WRONG CAR.

Did the Worthy Citizen Make a Mistake or a Blunder.

A good story is being told on two west end residents. One is a strong advocate of prohibition and the other enjoys a little social drink in his home once in a while. Both of these gentlemen are very great friends and live side by side and both own cars of the same make.

The other evening the anti prohibitionist was on his way to his summer home in the north country and had in his car a case of Scotch which had just arrived from Montreal. He stopped opposite his residence for the purpose of getting something or other to take to the lake with him. His friend next door arrived home about the same time and stopped his car at the rear of the other car and went into the house for something and then started out again, starting up the first car that came to him. He sailed away with the car and finally stopped at a very prominent Methodist residence. A chat from the car seat was indulged in and the case of whiskey in the rear discovered. The shock was too great for the conversation to be prolonged, the car owner got home where he found his neighbor waiting the return of his own auto.

A modern philosopher with a turn for humor defines the difference between a mistake and a blunder as follows: If a man takes away a good umbrella and leaves a poor one in its place he makes a mistake. If he reverses the process he commits a blunder.

The good Methodist brother referred to above is now attempting to explain to his friends which of these definitions applies to the episode of the car loaded with what according to his faith was contraband goods.

FINED THE COSTS

At the Police Court this morning John Doig was fined the costs of the case in which he was charged with appropriating fence rails to his own use. The fence has been restored to its former owner in good condition, and the magistrate allowed the defendant to go upon paying $5.65 costs.

PRICE OF BREAD MAY BE REDUCED TO OLD FIGURE

Wheat and Flour Take Drop and Bakers in Other Cities Are Cutting Price of Bread to Meet This Decrease.

There is every probability that the price of bread will be reduced in this city before many days and if this is done it would only be in line with the action taken by the bakers in other cities to meet a corresponding drop in the cost of flour.

Bread was reduced in Toronto today from twelve to eleven cents a small loaf and from 24 to 22 cents a large loaf, and if the price of wheat and flour continues to decline another reduction of two cents on the twenty-four ounce loaf will soon be made, thus bringing the price to the level which prevailed before May 14.

"The price was advanced altogether on account of the tremendous increase in the price of wheat and flour," declared Mr. Mark Bredin, general manager of the Canada Bread Co., "and now that the restrictions against grain speculation have had an effect the public should, we think, get the advantage."

Wheat Went Up To $3.50.

Ontario wheat sold on May 1 this year at $2.65 to $2.75 a bushel. The price on May 14 was $3.25, and a few days later the advance brought it to the $3.50 level, with the blue sky appearing to be the limit. Then came the restrictions against speculation, and today the price is $2.55 to $2.60.

The course of flour prices were somewhat similar. On May 1 Ontario flour sold at $11 a barrel. During the previous two weeks the market had been easier, being influenced largely by export conditions, and on April 9 bakers were paying $10 for the best flour. One month later they paid $16.50 a barrel. Today the price is $11.25 to $11.35.

Bread In Winnipeg.

Leading bakers in Winnipeg declined to reduce their prices although flour has dropped $2 a barrel in less than a week. There will be no reduction until flour is below $10 a barrel, they state.

It is now $13.10. Bread is 8 cents a pound and a quarter loaf.

AT S. A. TEMPLE.

Special Services Tonight With Brigadier Morehen Presiding.

Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen, district officers commanding this part of the Salvation Army in Canada, will be present at a great rally at the S. A. Temple tonight at 8 o'clock.

In connection with their visit there will be a big open air demonstration in which the Songster Brigade, representing the Allied nations, will take part together with the Band, Scouts and Guards and senior soldiers.

The Officer and Corps, together with the Scouts and Guards of No. II Corps at Byersville will unite with No. I both for the open air and inside services.

Some of the numbers put on by the Songster Brigade so acceptably on Monday night will be repeated tonight. Drills by the Scouts and Guards, etc., with an address by Brigadier Morehen who will be chairman, will make it worth while you attending, and you will be welcome.

NOT FOR BILLY.

Evangelist Declines Offer to Start New Church.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Billy Sunday said at a recent meeting: "A woman here in New York—a rich woman—offered me $25,000 a year and all the expenses I wanted to start a new church, a new denomination, in New York. But I turned her down. No new denomination for me. The old time religion is good enough. Live it—that's all!"

WILL RESORTS SUFFER BY IMMIGRATION LAWS

The summer girl is in for a bad time this summer. "As Canadians cannot visit the States for holiday purposes we presume that Americans will not be allowed to come here," said an immigration official today. "Of course we have nothing to do with the American side of the question, but it is almost certain that after June 5th, when Americans will begin to enroll, they will not be allowed to visit Canada for their summer vacations."

MET IN SALONIKA.

Two Bobcaygeon soldiers went into a restaurant at Salonika and asked for Turkey with Greece. The waiter said: "I'm sorry, gentlemen, but I can't Servia," whereupon the Tommies cried, "Fetch the Bosphorus." When that gentleman arrived and heard the complaint, the manager said: "Well, gentlemen, I don't want to Russia, but you cannot Roumania," and so the poor Tommies had to go away Hungary.

CONGESTION OF CANADIAN CHEESE

J. A. MacMillan, of Glengarry, in the House of Commons, complained that Canadian cheese was congested in factories and not being purchased. It had been understood that the British buyers would fix a price for the Canadian output. Would the Government see to it that the delay was not prolonged? Sir Robert Borden admitted that such negotiations had been in progress, but declared that he did not know how far they had gone. He would make enquiries.

Distinguishing Fixture Chains

Annoyance through inability to locate quickly the proper chain for lighting a gas lamp in the dark was overcome by fitting a small brass tube to one of the chains as shown in the illustration. The tube was soldered to the chain by which the light is turned on and the other chain passes through the tube and is grasped below it. To turn on the light, it is only necessary to slide the hand along both chains and to grip the tube, drawing on the chain attached to it. To turn the light off, the exposed end of the other chain is drawn.—Popular [illegible]

COST OF CITY CARTAGE

Important Item in Expense of Living in City

The view that the cost of city cartage and the local distribution of commodities by retailers represents an important factor in the high cost of living is more than borne out by the results of a survey which has been made by the Census Bureau. For four important classes of commodities—coal and wood, milk, ice and department store merchandise—which together represent a very considerable proportion of the cost of living, the expense of delivery or cartage one way, according to the results of this preliminary survey, constitutes on the average more than 8 per cent. of the total cost to the consumer. The percentages for the individual commodities, however, vary greatly from this average. For department store merchandise the delivery expense, as indicated by the data so far obtained, represents less than 2 per cent. of the selling price; for milk and dairy products the corresponding proportion is 12 per cent.; for coal and wood, 19 per cent.; and for ice, 45 per cent.

Winter Clover For Fowl

Clover cured only enough to preserve is excellent, and fowls will eat a portion of it all winter, when they would turn away from cabbage. The shattered heads of clover from the haymows are one of the most valuable of foods for egg production in winter. Pour boiling water on the clover heads, cover them over with a bag, and allow them to steam and soak until the mass has cooled down to about blood heat, then drain off the water and use a pint of wheat bran with each two quarts of clover heads. Mix thoroughly and feed warm.

BASEBALL AT BATTLE FRONT

The old adage or "all work and no play" has its application in war as well as in peace. The baseball season on the western front front is in full swing. Under the very shadow of Vimy Ridge a great game was played yesterday afternoon before an all-khaki audience on a bit of the battlefield on which the shell holes had been filled in, and a rough grand stand erected for the officers and other spectators, including General Horne, commanding the First British Army, who has become an enthusiastic fan.

presenting two Canadian brigades. As a matter of fact all the teams in what may be called the World War League are now composed of representatives of the numerous Canadian bodies, and all the players are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the American forces to arrange for an inter-league series.

Score was 7 to 1

The second Canadian brigade beat the third by the score of 7 to 1. The second brigade had a great left-handed pitcher, whose delivery the third brigade batters could not solve at all. The third brigade team also had a good boxman, who formerly played with Ottawa in the Canadian League The catcher was unable to hold his delivery well, and this fault accounted for many of the runs scored by the winners.

The game was remarkably free from errors, considering the battle-eld diamond on which it was played. All the equipment had been brought overseas, including the base-bags.

Shells Fall Half-Mile Off

As a side show it was possible [illegible] to see an occasional German shell dropping half a mile or so away. Airplanes were humming overhead, but assuming them to be friendly, no one looked their way, except when a fly ball happened to be hit.

There was typical rooting by the Canadians, and much wagering on the game. One subaltern bet enough, he said, to pay his expenses on a three weeks' leave in Paris, but he choose the wrong side, and his leave was indefinitely postponed. The games are played twice a week in this strangest of all baseball league.

PROTEST FROM QUEBEC OVER HORSE RACING

MONTREAL, May 30.—Complaints are voiced in racing circles in the Province of Quebec that the Dominion Government, in its reported decision to stop betting after August 1st, is playing favorites as far as the Ontario tracks are concerned.

The Province of Quebec law says that sixty days must elapse between meetings on the same track. Ontario has no such prohibition, therefore Ontario tracks can hold two meetings and the Quebec tracks only one. Already it is announced that Devonshire will hold a second meeting at Windsor, Ont., on the same dates as those arranged for the Blue Bonnets meeting here.

An extra electric horn or light fuse is a very valuable accessory to the supply kit of the modern motorist. It is an easy matter to install a new fuse, but a very difficult matter to improve one. VARIED RICHES OF GREATER ONTARIO

Northern-grown Wheat is Province's Best—Climate, Minerals, Pulpwood and Fisheries Discussed

Mr. J. L. Englehart, as manager of the Ontario Government's Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway gave facts on the riches of Greater Ontario; the agricultural, fishery and mineral possibilities of which equal the very best in the world. The climatic conditions, he said, are all that are to be desired; the rainfall well distributed throughout the area, with temperate summers, delightful autumn, and sunshine at Haileybury equal to that at Toronto. There were virtually three soils mould, created by leaves and forests for countless ages; below this, clay which on test compares favorably with that of Lambton county, except for fall wheat and corn; underlying the clay is limestone—a reservoir into which roots descend and refresh themselves, create growth, ripen grain, roots, vegetables, etc. Greater Ontario has twenty millions of acres of alluvial soil. This does not include vast stretches of agricultural possibilities south and west of James Bay.

Success Already

Mr. Englehart said further that farms taken up by settlers at fifty cents per acre are now valued at from $100 to $150 per acre. Temiskaming took the highest mark in 1916 for potatoes in the standing field crop competition for Ontario. An exhibit of spring wheat from Uno Park was awarded first honors in competition with counties from York east and Parry Sound south. Settlers could get usually $36 per acre for pulpwood cut, drawn and peeled; thus settlers were paid for clearing their own land, the work being easy as compared with old Ontario, as there are no tap roots; while uncleared spruce wood forms a savings bank for settlers on which they may draw as needed. In New Ontario the approximate value of pine on Crown lands was $150,000,000; on licensed lands, $10,500,000; pulpwood, approximate value, 300,000,000.

Cheap Power and Munitions

Fisheries are important, with annual value of four millions. The largest fresh water fisheries on the continent, he claimed, are within the Province of Ontario. The salt waters in James Bay and Hudson Bay are teeming with fish—a virgin field The speaker predicted that that region would form the future summer resort of the Province, with motoring from Pacific to Atlantic. Between Cochrane and James Bay there were more than a million horse-power. Some day the navigation of that region will come to Ontario and Toronto. In that secluded part of the world are ideal conditions for munition factories that may be of imperial importance, as minerals are plentiful which furnish nitrates for explosives and also for the very best fertilizers, which will be needed in our Canadian West.

Digestible Fats

Experiments were made with a view to determining the relation between the melting point of fats and their digestibility. From these studies it appears that of the fats tested those with low melting points, such as butter and lard, are capable of more complete assimilation in the body than those with high melting points—beef fat and mutton fat.

Potato Scones

Put two cups of mashed potatoes into a bowl, add two tablespoons of hot milk, one tablespoon of melted butter, one teaspoon of sugar, quarter of a teaspoon of salt, and one cup of flour Knead, divide into three pieces and roll out into rounds. Divide each round into four small scones, place on a hot griddle and cook five minutes on each side.

Brown Bread

Take some of the sponge and add clean bran until the desired shade. Add butter the size of a small egg, one-quarter cupful sugar to each loaf, and bake after it has risen. This bread is easy to make and excellent to eat.

Simmered Sausages

Prick each sausage and barely cover with tomatoes. Boil until brown and tender, stirring often. Thicken the gravy with a little dissolved flour. Season and pour over the sausage.

THE CONCERT LAST NIGHT

The Olympic Quartette, Peterborough's new musical organization, composed of Messrs. Asa Huycke, manager and second bass, Thomas Ward, first bass, and Edward and Harold Jones, first and second tenors respectively, made their initial appearance at the concert given last night by the choir of the Murray Street Baptist Church. The artists who composed the quartette have every reason to feel gratified at the hearty reception which was tendered them. Great things were expected of them by the audience and they certainly made good. Their final number was that old favorite, "Lead Kindly Light," and the audience enthusiastically insisted on a recall and refused to subside until the quartette responded. The work of the singers showed the careful training which is a work of all the pupils prepared by Mr. Huycke of the members of the excellent choir of which he is director.

Dudley Buck's "In Vocal Combat," rendered by the quartette was certainly a musical novelty that appealed to the audience. The tenors in "Then You Will Remember Me," competed with the two bass singers who rendered "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep." The matter of awarding the merit prize was left to the judgment of the audience and is still an open question.

The Choir's Part.

The members of the choir individually or collectively, sustained the high reputation they have so long enjoyed with the music loving public of this city. The various numbers rendered were "Unfold Ye Portals Everlasting," from the Redemption; the old English madrigal, "You Stole My Love;" By Babylon's Wave; There is a Land of Pure Delight," the music for which was composed by Mr. Huycke. And a pleasing melody of old songs which included such favorites as Judge Bell's, "Listen to the Mocking Bird," "Weel May the Keel Row," "Green Grow the Rushes O," ending up with a spirited rendition of Rule Britannia and the National Anthem.

Bouquet For Miss Sanderson.

Miss Ida Sanderson, the organist of the church, acted as accompanist and also rendered piano solos. Toward the close of the entertainment she was escorted to the platform by Rev. R. J. Webb and presented with a magnificent bouquet of roses by little Aileen Morgan.

Then Choirmaster Huycke was called to the front and informed by Mr. Webb that there were no roses for him. The choir, however, in appreciation of his painstaking efforts on their behalf, had sent to Toronto for a silver mounted baton which it was expected would have arrived in time for last night's entertainment. It had reached the post office but the donors had been unable to get it out. It will be presented to Mr. Huycke Sunday morning.

Mrs. Pettit, Reader.

Mrs. L. J. Pettit, recited the thrilling account of the Chariot Race from Lew Wallace's Ben Hur, one of the most stirring pieces of English in the language, and so true was the interpretation that the audience could see in conjunction the horses in that famous contest dashing madly around the arena. Two other selections were taken from Canadian authors, Jean Blewett's inimitable character character sketch "For He Was Scotch and so Was She," and one of Drummond's habitant poems.

Mr. Otto Gliddon won new laurels with his clarinette solos, the best of which were "The Carnival of Venice" and "Had I the Wings of a Dove," the latter given in response to a hearty encore.

One of the most pleasing numbers of the evening was the selection "The Guardian Angel," given by Misses F. Scott, D. Rathbone, A. Pollard and D. Hartshorn.

CANON CORNISH WELCOMED BACK TO HIS OLD HOME

YORKTON ANGLICANS ARE GLAD TO GREET RECTOR AND HIS WIFE.

Canon and Mrs. Cornish were given a very warm welcome on their arrival at their old home in Yorkton, Sask. The citizens of that town were more than pleased to see their old Rector back as will be seen from the following extract taken from the Yorkton Enterprise.

"With mingled feelings of pleasure and regret over one hundred parishioners of Holy Trinity church assembled at a social gathering in the Parish Hall on Monday evening for the purpose of welcoming home Canon and Mrs. Cornish, and bidding farewell to Rev. W. B. Parrott, who has ably fulfilled the duties of rector during the fourteen months' absence of Canon Cornish as rector of St. John's parish at Peterborough, Ont.

Mr. F. J. Pilkington, rector's warden, ably performed the duties of chairman, and the program was opened by an admirably rendered reading by Mrs. Chas. Bradbrook.

Mr. Pilkington expressed the great pleasure felt by the congregation on the return of their beloved rector and their great regret at losing the services of one so highly esteemed as Rev. Mr. Parrott.

Canon Cornish said that Mrs. Cornish and himself were delighted to return to Yorkton but would always have the most kindly remembrances of their stay in Peterborough. He thanked Mr. Parrott for his great service on behalf of the parish during his absence and the members of the congregation for their cordial reception, requesting their continued co-operation in promoting the welfare of Holy Trinity.

Mr. Chas. Magrath followed with a number of very amusing stories related in his own inimitable style, after which, on behalf of the congregation, Mr. Wynn presented Mr. Parrott with a purse containing over $100, as a slight token of the esteem and good-will of his many warm Yorkton friends.

Mr. Parrott replied in a brief and suitable manner, expressing his appreciation of the gift and his regret at leaving so many kind friends. He had greatly enjoyed his brief residence in Yorkton and would always remember Holy Trinity with the kindliest feelings.

Occupying seats of honor on the platform were Ptes. Parnell and A. L. Alexander, two heroes of the present war, together with Rev. G. B. McLennan of St. Andrew's Church, Rev. J. H. Toole of First Methodist church, Rev. J. M. Telford of the Baptist church, and Rev. Mr. Atkin, rector of the Anglican church at Saltcoats. On behalf of their congregations and themselves each expressed their great regret at Mr. Parrott's departure and extended a warm welcome home to Canon and Mrs. Cornish.

A dainty repast was served by the ladies of the congregation, and the evening was concluded with the singing of the National Anthem and the pronouncing of the benediction by Mr. Parrott.

On a strict party division of 65 to 33 the Commons defeated Hon. Frank Oliver's amendment to the budget calling for a general downward revision of the tariff.

THE CONCERT LAST NIGHT

The Olympic Quartette, Peterborough's new musical organization, composed of Messrs. Asa Huycke, manager and second bass, Thomas Ward, first bass, and Edward and Harold Jones, first and second tenors respectively, made their initial appearance at the concert given last night by the choir of the Murray Street Baptist Church. The artists who composed the quartette have every reason to feel gratified at the hearty reception which was tendered them. Great things were expected of them by the audience and they certainly made good. Their final number was that old favorite, "Lead Kindly Light," and the audience enthusiastically insisted on a recall and refused to subside until the quartette responded. The work of the singers showed the careful training which is a work of all the pupils prepared by Mr. Huycke of the members of the excellent choir of which he is director.

Dudley Buck's "In Vocal Combat," rendered by the quartette was certainly a musical novelty that appealed to the audience. The tenors in "Then You Will Remember Me," competed with the two bass singers who rendered "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep." The matter of awarding the merit prize was left to the judgment of the audience and is still an open question.

The Choir's Part.

The members of the choir individually or collectively, sustained the high reputation they have so long enjoyed with the music loving public of this city. The various numbers rendered were "Unfold Ye Portals Everlasting," from the Redemption; the old English madrigal, "You Stole My Love;" By Babylon's Wave; There is a Land of Pure Delight," the music for which was composed by Mr. Huycke. And a pleasing melody of old songs which included such favorites as Judge Bell's, "Listen to the Mocking Bird," "Weel May the Keel Row," "Green Grow the Rushes O," ending up with a spirited rendition of Rule Britannia and the National Anthem.

Bouquet For Miss Sanderson.

Miss Ida Sanderson, the organist of the church, acted as accompanist and also rendered piano solos. Toward the close of the entertainment she was escorted to the platform by Rev. R. J. Webb and presented with a magnificent bouquet of roses by little Aileen Morgan.

Then Choirmaster Huycke was called to the front and informed by Mr. Webb that there were no roses for him. The choir, however, in appreciation of his painstaking efforts on their behalf, had sent to Toronto for a silver mounted baton which it was expected would have arrived in time for last night's entertainment. It had reached the post office but the donors had been unable to get it out. It will be presented to Mr. Huycke Sunday morning.

Following are the names of those who took part in one of the best musical entertainment ever given in this city:

GERMANS ATTACK ON FRENCH FRONT WITH GAS SHELLS BUT ARE REPULSED WITH LOSS

Fighting That Started at Two O'clock and Lasted Until Daylight Broken up by Heavy Fire and French Bayonet Charges---More Prisoners Taken.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, May 31.—There was pronounced activity by artillery south of St. Quentin and on the Chemindes Dames North of Jouy near Cerny and in the vicinity of Hurtebise where a number of patrol encounters also occurred. In Champagne the enemy made sharp attacks at several points on our front during the night following a violent bombardment in which poisonous gas shells and shells from large calibre guns were discharged.

Northwest of Auberive and at Mont Blond all German efforts were checked by our fire. The enemy attacked with particular strength our positions at the Teton, the Casvue and Mont Haut. We repulsed four different attacks after a struggle of extreme severity. Fighting began at about two o'clock and it continued until daybreak. It was broken up by our fire or repulsed by the bayonet.

The attacking troops each time were hurled back in disorder to trenches whence they came after having suffered heavy losses. Only at one point on the front attacked, northeast of Mont Haut did the enemy gain footing in some advanced positions. We took a number of prisoners of whom two are officers.

On the left bank of Meuse, the Verdun front, artillery fighting was spirited in the region of Hill 304. Two attacks by enemy were repulsed completely.

SEARCH IN VAIN FOR THE BODIES OF DROWNED MEN

BOOM TO BE LAID TO PREVENT REMAINS GETTING INTO LAKE.

The search for the bodies of Messrs. Lee Lindsay and John Laking, who were drowned in Drag Lake, Haliburton County, continued all day yesterday until darkness set in. Mr. Ed. Robinson succeeded in getting something on his line in East Bay, and on coming in bubbles came to the surface. His line became detached, however, and darkness prevented further search.

A boom will be stretched across the entrance to east Bay, so that should the bodies rise to the surface after being in the water ten days they will be prevented from floating out into the lake.

TRIED TO DODGE THEIR POLL TAX AND GOT FINED

MAGISTRATE DUMBLE HAS NO SYMPATHY WITH YOUNG MEN.

Failure to pay heed to the Assessor's notice to pay their Poll Tax caused a number of the young men of the city to appear before the Police Magistrate at the police court this morning and as a warning to others to pay up at once. It cost each of the delinbuents $7.60.

There are a number of notices that the receivers have paid no attention to and the police have been given the list of Tax Collector Green and unless a prompt payment is made the police will collect the amount with costs or the usual stay of 15 days in jail will be the option.

ORIENTAL HOTEL DROPS OUT OF THE PROCESSION

Famous Old Hostelry Closes its Doors Tomorrow on Account of Lack of Patronage --In Business Over Half a Century.

The Oriental Hotel will serve the last meal as a house of public entertainment and tomorrow the place will be closed indefinitely. This means the passing of one of Peterborough's oldest hotels and one that is well known by the travelling public from one end of the Dominion to the other.

The building has been used for hotel purposes almost as long as the memory of the oldest inhabitant extends back into the past. It is at least half a century since the place was first taken over by Allan Huffman, who named the hotel after himself, and who subsequently left it to go into the same line of business in Belleville. Mr. Hufman was succeeded by James McIntyre, who gave the hotel the name by which it has ever since been known. Later the property was acquired by the late Samuel Dickson and it is still in the possession of his heirs.

Probably the Oriental achieved its greatest success under the management of Mr. George A. Graham, now of the Empress, who conducted it for nearly twenty years. It was by all odds the leading hotel in the city during that time. The proprietor made a sacrifice to principle when they decided to stop the sale of liquor about five years ago, thus leading all the hotel property owners in the province in the campaign to close the bars. Mr. Graham soon afterwards took over the control of what was at that time the National.

The subsequent career of the Oriental demonstrated the fact that the dry hotel has no chance even when other things are equal—with the hotel in the same city where liquor is sold. A large part of its patronage deserted. Even those of avowed temperance principles did not always put up at the Oriental when stopping in the city.

There is evidently a superfluity of first class hotels in this city and this is one explanation for the closing of the Oriental. The travelling public will not be neglected as a result as there is plenty of accommodation left.

Mr. A. E. Colson, who has been the popular manager of the hotel for the past year, was successful in running a temperance hotel in Renfrew before coming to this city. He leaves here to take up the management of the Grand Trunk Hotel, the Algonquin, at the famous summer resort of that name. Mr. Coulson was for five years manager of the Highland Inn at the same resort.

ROWELL, GOUIN, MURRAY OFFERED SEATS IN CABINET ACCORDING TO LATE RUMOR

Atmosphere at Ottawa Not Yet Cleared---Report Says if Coalition Fails Premier Will Reorganize Cabinet and Force Extension and Conscription Through Parliament

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, May 31.—Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier Murray of Nova Scotia and Newton W. Rowell have been invited to enter the Dominion Cabinet according to an article on the political situation in this morning's Journal-Press. If they refuse, the article contends, there will in all probability be a general election within a few weeks. The rumor that an election may follow upon the failure of the coalition scheme caused plenty of excitement in Ottawa. The official silence maintained since the Premier's conscription announcement in the House was in force today. Sir Wilfred Laurier returned last night from a conference with Sir Lomer Gouin in Montreal. Unofficial gossip about the result of that conference is not favorable to the alleged coalition scheme. Reports of the utterance of Mr. Murray in Halifax seem to indicate he is not unfavorable to a coalition government. It is recalled that Mr. Rowell is not against conscription. There is plenty of talk around the House, all of unauthoritative of course, that if coalition fails the Premier will decide upon Cabinet reconstruction, taking new material from the ranks of his own party and jamming through parliament the extension measure as well as a conscription bill to be enforced after voluntary recruiting has been given a final chance.

Meanwhile it is agreed in some parliamentary quarters that Sir Robert is waiting until situation clears one way or the other before going on with the consideration of the conscription bill which is said to be ready for introduction to the House.

What Papers Say.

Toronto World says a coalition in two weeks or an election in month. Murray of Nova Scotia, Rowell and Gouin to be in the Cabinet. The Mail and Empire says there may be coalition with a war council of five or nine.

The Globe says the conscription bill will be a mild measure applying chiefly to young men not engaged in necessary or productive work. A statement that lacks originality seeing that nothing else was expected from the first.

ALLEGED QUACK DOCTOR NABBED BY CONSTABLES

REMANDED AT LINDSAY AFTER OFFERING TO RETURN MONEY.

License Inspector Thornbury, of Victoria, was requested by County Police Magistrate Moore, owing to the absence of High County Constable Conquergood, to go in search of the stranger, who is accused by an Eldon resident of obtaining money by false means.

Accompanied by Constable Jones, of Fenelon Falls, Mr. Thornbury motored to the residence of Mr. McNeil, four miles from Bobcaygeon, on the Fenelon Road, as it was understood that the accused had visited there. The visit was not productive of results, however, so the officers motored up and down the side lines and concessions until they found the accused at the residence of a man named Cavanagh on the boundary between Veralum and Somerville. This was about ten o'clock at night, and the accused had made arrangements to stay at the Cavanagh home for the night. He was brought to Lindsay, and yesterday appeared before County police Magistrate Moore. Mr. L. V. O'Connor appeared in his behalf, and he was remanded for a week.

According to the information given by the police, the accused stated that he was a linguish of some ability, and the reason he travelled the section of the country in which he was found was because he was endeavoring to reach Burnt River to take a train to Hamilton. He gave his name as Douglas Haig, but yesterday stated that his name was Douglas. He had attached the name Haig because it was the name of the family home in the old country.

In referring to the treatment administered the Eldon man, accused claimed that the medicine used cost more than what he had charged his patient for treatment. He further claimed that he had removed a hump from the patient's back by his treatment, and also extracted several worms, which he threw in the stove.

When placed in custody the accused offered to give the Eldon man his money back.

STR. "ISLINDA" IS DESTROYED EARLY THIS A.M.

BURNED TO WATER'S EDGE DESPITE EFFORTS OF RESIDENTS.

The Stony Lake cottagers heard with a great deal of regret this morning that the popular back lake steamer, the "Islinda" had been burned at her dock at Young's Point.

Mrs. Duvall discovered the steamer on fire about half past two this morning and at once gave an alarm but despite the greatest assistance from all the residents as well as the crew the boat was destroyed to the water line. The cause of the fire is not known.

Just what the damage is cannot at the present moment be estimated as the steamer had been thoroughly overhauled this winter and was ready for a busy season's work. In fact already she had been at work doing some towing in the adjoining lakes.

The Stoney Lake Navigation Co. who owned the steamer will have a hard time getting a boat to replace the "Islinda." Manager Frank G. Young left for the Point this morning. The steamer was in charge of Capt. P. J. Young.

GUNS ROAR ALL NIGHT LONG ON BRITISH FRONT

A Hostile Raiding Party Was Driven Off Early This Morning.

ITALIANS STILL WINNING.

Capture Three Villages in Albania, the War Office Announces.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, May 31.—Official report says: A hostile raiding party was driven off early this morning south of Armentieres. We secured a few prisoners. There was a considerable amount of artillery activity on both sides during the night in the neighborhood of Bullecourt, on the right bank of the Scarpe.

ROME, May 31 - Italian troops in Albania have occupied the villages of Cerevoda, Velise, St. Osoja and Cafa, the War Office announced to-

Bad weather interfered with operations on the Trentino and Carnia Fronts. In the area above Trieste there were no changes of importance, says the official statement.

There is a good deal of artillery activity. Behind the lines movement is unceasing. The enemy knows it, and is disturbed. He is shelling roads on the Carso—even the little villages this side of the Isonzo—with angry persistence, but without much result. Observation shows he is busy himself getting away guns and other material to safer places. He succeeded in moving most of the guns when threatened by the Itallian advance, but our allies captured forty undamaged guns and many more were destroyed. When Selo seemed to be threatened with immediate occupation the Austrians blew up the breeches on a battery of heavy guns. The same thing happened at other places.

North of Gorizia the Austrians keep counter-attacking at Vodice. They have thrown wave after wave of troops against the new Italian lines, and their losses have been very heavy. Moreover, they have lost more ground. The Italians are sweeping down the south-eastern slope of the mountain, taking a trench here and there and picking up a few prisoners.

Recalls Tragedy on Battle Front

LT. HAROLD S. MATTHEWS NOW PRESUMED DEAD.

The Toronto Mail and Emipre says in today's issue:

Lieut. Harold Stratton Matthews, who has been missing since last June, is now officially presumed to have been killed in action. Lieut. Matthews was the son of T. F. Matthews, of Matthews-Blackwell, Ltd., and it is believed that he was killed while acting as forward observing officer on June 2, when the Germans captured part of the Canadian trenches. It is known that he remained in his position, and continued to give firing directions to his men after the Germans had entered the Canadian trenches. He was 22 years of age, and graduated in 1914 at the head of his class in the Royal Military College. He went overseas with the first contingent, and was gassed at St. Julien, but he returned to the trenches in a short time. A brother is overseas.

PENAL SERVITUDE FOR MAN IN RUSSIA IF HE COMMITS ANY VIOLENCE WHILE DRUNK

Those Who Drink to Excess at All Liable to Jail Term of Eighteen Months---Provincial Government is Set on Stamping Out the Drink Evil.

PETROGRAD, May 31.—The Provisional Government has decreed repressive measures against the abuse of alcohol. Poisons, getting drunk or drinking to excess in public places are liable to eighteen months imprisonment. Persons while drunk, committing robberies, acts of violence or other offences will be liable to penal servitude for six or eight years.

War Minister At Front.

The visit of War Minister Kerensky to the front has been marked by enthusiastic demonstrations. The Minister of War declared that he will himself march at the head of the advancing battalions. Kerensky fully appreciates the necessity that the army take the offensive, not only in the interests of his country, but in the interests of his party. He has already done a great deal towards allaying some of the evils which threatened to convert the Russian revolution into a conflict of classes. The worst of these evils was the deterioration of Russia's military efficiency.

Why Troops Rested.

To the congress of delegates from the front Col. Jakubovitch, the new assistant Minister of War, delivered an address on the situation in the field. He said everything was ready for an offensive except the necessary sense of duty, which had impeded the arrival of foodstuffs and fodder. Transport supplies had improved considerably during the first days of the revolution, then gradually things got worse, until a week ago there was complete disorganization, soldiers deliberately uncoupled trucks of fodder and foodstuffs for the front, and railway officials were powerless to handle the traffic. Many were leaving the front and insisted on turning back all trains westward bound. Then there were exorbitant demands of the workmen, who were demanding 32 roubles a day of six hours. He further declared that the whole army and country were infested with German spies and the Government found it difficult to cope with the evil.

MAY COME HERE BALFOUR HOPES TO PAY VISIT

TO INDUSTRIAL CENTRES OF THE PROVINCE.

OTTAWA, May 31.—Before leaving Canada, Mr. Balfour hopes to visit the industrial districts of Ontario. At Government House yesterday he received a deputation from the St. Andrew's Society, and one of the joint legislation committee of the Orange Order of British North America, to both of whom he gave sympathetic replies. An arrangement had been made for representatives of a delegation of these who support Home Rule for Ireland, but this was unavoidably cancelled at their request. Clarence I de Sola, of Montreal, head of the Zionist movement in Canada, also had an interview with Mr. Balfour on the Zionist movement in Palestine. He seemed highly pleased with the result of the interview.

MOTOR FIRE ENGINE TO BE TESTED HERE SATURDAY

La France Apparatus Referred to in Review Yesterday, to be Given Trial---All Interested Are Invited to Attend.

Citizens generally, and particularly manufacturers who are interested in the improvement of the fire fighting equipment of the city, should make it a point to attend the demonstration to be given of the capacity of one of the combined hose, chemical and pumping engines, such as is proposed to obtain for the city service.

It is likely that the display will be made at the corner of Aylmer and Brock streets, where an ample supply of water can be drawn from the creek. The pumping capacity is stated as at 750 gallons of water per minute. The carrying service of the machine is ample for all hose and man needs.

The machine is on the way to Hull, Que., as a part of the equipment of that city, built by the American LaFrance Co., of Elmira, N.Y. The triple combination machine gives large service, but would appear to be essential where the needs of the service will be served by using either a chemical service, a pumping service and, of course, the hose. All are carried on one machine, and in addition from five to seven men.

The hour fixed for the demonstration by the Fire; Water and Light Committee of the city, is at 1.30 o'clock, in the afternoon. Make it a point to attend. The display will afford the citizens some conception of the efficiency of such a fire piece and what the money of the city will go to pay for. Saturday, at 1.30 p.m.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, MAY 31, 1917

MUNICIPAL COAL YARDS.

IT IS A COMPARATIVELY easy matter to start the fire and heat the water in preparation for the brewing of a pot of rabbit soup, but to lay hands on the main ingredient is an entirely different matter.

Invested with the proper authority from the powers higher up, no serious difficulties are likely to be experienced by a municipality in arranging for the opening of a civic coal yard. The building and outside space can be obtained, the wagons and teams required to handle the fuel are available. The real obstacle to complete success presents itself when the attempt is made to secure a stock. Suave representatives may be sent to the anthracite dealers across the border, to the very mines even, and such impromptu coal buyers will return with not even a sample to show for their trouble and outlay.

If the private dealers cannot buy coal in sufficient quantities to serve their customers, then it is a cinch that no advocate of municipal ownership need make the effort. The friends of civic yards are starting to solve the problem from the wrong end. Municipal yards can never be made a success until the coal mines and the railways are nationalized. Canada is without influence in establishing such an order of things in the United States, and Peterborough is helpless to remedy the conditions of which the citizens complain.

The owners of the mines and the railways, one and the same set of financiers in the majority of cases, are naturally opposed to the nationalisation of their holdings. Municipal coal yards are a step in that direction. The owners have it in their power to fight such institution from the start by withholding supplies, and this is a power they will not be slow to exercise.

There are Canadian schooners waiting at American lake ports for cargoes of coal for private dealers, and they are waiting in vain. Appeals made right at the point of production are as fruitless as attempts to buy from the wholesalers. Where the private dealer fails, the friend of municipal ownership may spare himself rebuffs at he hands of the miners and the railways.

Toronto appears to have given up the idea of municipal coal yards. Even the supply required for charitable purposes, for use in the House of Industry, and by those unable to buy their own fuel, is to be handled by a private company at a general price of $9 a ton. A contract just made calls for 650 tons to be delivered at the House of Industry and for 1,100 tons to be delivered in 500-pound lots at the homes of the city's poor. Toronto in the same connection advertised for fifty cords of wood, and did not receive a single tender.

It is impossible at present to solve the fuel problem by substituting wood for coal. There is plenty of the former in the forests of Canada, but it requires men to cut it and take it to market, and men for the purpose are not available any more than they are for other lines of work.

The situation is certainly grave, but it cannot be helped by plausible talk or by civic investigation alone. It avails nothing to keep the pot boiling for the soup while the rabbit is still at large and there are no means at hand for effecting its capture.

NO DISGRACE IN THE DRAFT.

NOT EVERY MAN who enters the military service when the draft goes into effect will be dragged into it. There will be volunteers then just as there are now. There is really no disgrace attached to those who are affected by the system. A gang of men meet on the highway every year to put in their statute labor. They have been drafted for the purpose, but do not feel humiliated on that account. If this line of work was carried on under the voluntary system, some would be public-spirited enough to do their duty, but more would shirk.

There is compulsion in almost everything under the sun, compulsion in the payment of taxes and in education. It does not naturally follow, because of one or the other, that if left to the freedom of their own wills all men would dodge their taxes or avoid the trouble and expense of keeping their children at school. The man who serves as a juror or witness in court does not feel humiliated in his own estimation because he has been brought there by legal process which he could not afford to ignore.

The draft is not undemocratic, either. The leading republic in the world resorted to it at the very outset of its entry into the war. In Canada the mistake was made of deferring an obvious national duty until every other plan had failed, besides following the usual custom in this country of attaching political significance to every public measure.

TWISTING THE FACTS.

IT IS NEXT TO IMPOSSIBLE for a British statesman or newspaper to make a statement concerning the war without having the Germans distort it into an admission that the struggle is going against the Allies. This is not due to native inability of the Huns to understand what they read so much as a desire to keep the masses in line by making the most of everything.

A few days ago the Westminster Gazette, referring to a statement made in Parliament with regard to the submarine menace, said: "Let us, on the faint chance that it may reach some German ear, rehearse the British faith on this subject, as gathered from yesterday's speeches in the Vote of Credit debate. We believe that whatever we have lost on the submarine we have more than recovered by the entry of the United States. We believe that, 'given proper prudence, foresight, and the necessary arrangements, we can see our way through on the tonnage problem.' We believe that there is no weapon without a remedy, and the combined inventiveness and energy of the United States and the Allies will find a remedy, and in the long run produce more than the submarine can destroy. We believe that in their boastings about the destructiveness of the submarine the Germans have altogether miscalculated the forces that it brings into being to oppose it and the resources that are in reserve to repair its ravages. We are not elated or depressed by the fluctuations in the weekly returns; and we do not say that all is lost when they are bad and all is safe when they are good or relatively good. We take them seriously and work on the worst assumptions; but the idea that we are going to be terrorized into accepting German terms of peace by the fear that something may happen in the future that has not happened yet, and which we believe we can avert, is as idle as all the other assumptions of German frightfulness."

This article was taken up by all the leading newspapers in Germany, one of which described it as a fresh proof of the efficiency of the German submarines and as evidence that the anxiety in England concerning the British position on the seas is increasing daily.

No Liberal paper in Canada, expert as they are in that line, could so distort and adapt to their own purpose something said or done by their political opponents.

SPORTS AND WAR.

BATTING IN THE .300 CLASS, holding the record for bases stolen, and the like, are, after all, inconsequential feats when compared with what young men are doing on the battle line. The interest in sports has to a great extent lost its edge. The public are vastly more concerned as to what is accomplished by John Smith in the trenches than in the achievement of Tom Jones on the baseball diamond. A victory for the Allies is of more moment than the announcement that this or that horse has won the King's Plate or some other trophy for which horse owners strive year after year.

From the attempt made in some quarters to suspend professional baseball, other athletic games and horse-racing until after the war, it does not follow that the advocates of this course are opposed to any of such forms of amusement on principle. The stand they take is that there are more serious matters that should claim the attention of the public. The outstanding objection to horse-racing is the betting that seems to be inseparably connected with the sport of kings. But baseball and other forms of sport have been purged of this evil association, and there is no reason why horse-racing should not be divorced from the betting fraternity, legalized or otherwise.

The breeding of high-class horses will be abandoned if racing is ever made illegal. The races are the annual opportunity of the owners to demonstrate the prowess of their stock. It is their yearly exhibition, their chance to advertise what they have for sale.

Horse-racing is not the only beneficent institution that has been brought into disrepute to a certain extent by evils that have followed in its trail, evils, too, that can easily be suppressed.

WASTING ADVICE ON FARMERS

"I hope the farmers realize their responsibilities," observed the druggist. "Now that the war is a condition rather than a theory they should make good use of every foot of ground."

"I'd hate to be a farmer," observed the horse doctor. "Everybody's always handing him good advice and the surprising thing is that he takes it so good naturedly. As a general thing we take it for granted that the other fellows know their business, and govern ourselves accordingly, but we assume that the farmer doesn't know enough to come in out of the wet, and when we have no pressing engagements on hand we call around and tell him how to run his farm.

"It makes the ordinary man as mad as a moist fowl when some aleck undertakes to tell him how to run his business. I lost one of my best customers because my temper flew off the handle under such conditions. When Jake Anchor was in the live stock line he sent for me whenever an animal was indisposed.

"Jake had an exasperating fault. He would call me in to doctor his sick stock, and then stand around, while I was doing it, telling me what I ought to do. One day I was administering a pint of tabasco sauce to a horse that was under the weather. It was a beastly day, and I had been missing sleep for a week, and was in a bad humor. Jake told me that he just knew I was doing the wrong thing, and he fully expected the horse to die as a result of my prescription. The proper medicine for that critter, he said, was tincture of aconite and not pepper sauce.

"He kept on chattering while I was pouring the dope into the horse, and when that was done I couldn't control my indignation any longer. I sailed in and groomed Jake's head with both hands, and then rolled him down an embankment into the creek, and it was a great relief to my jaded spirit. But is was a fool thing to do. Jake has never forgiven me to this day, and another veterinarian sits up with his sick cows and hands in a bill the first of every month.

"No man enjoys being told how to do his own stunt. Few of us will stand for that sort of thing, but the farmer has to. All his acquaintances take every opportunity to counsel and instruct him, and he can't punch all their heads.

"Nowadays the colleges and universities have broken into the game, and they send out earnest young men to tell the farmers what kind of cows they ought to keep, and how to vaccinate their hens against influenza, and how to analyze the soil and know just what to plant.

"And agents go around the country selling books which explain in words of one syllable, for the benefit of the farmers, how to dehorn cows without the use of anaesthetics, and how to add to their incomes by shearing swine and selling the bristles to the brush makers, and all sorts of useful things.

"The magazines are forever lecturing the farmers, denouncing their criminal waste, and telling them how to make $5 where they are now making less than $1. Every once in a while you hear of a farmer setting fire to his barns and haystacks and then drowning himself in the well. He has been driven to it by counsel and admonition. A man can stand a certain amount of free advice, but there is a rubicon, and when that is passed something desperate happens."

MAKING ONE'S TASK ATTRACTIVE

Thomas Carlyle was bitter in his denunciation of the materialism of his time. He decried avarice; he deplored the fact that machinery would put man out of work. Time has demonstrated that machinery has far from fulfilled Carlyle's prediction, but there is food for thought in his other doctrines.

The industrial system of the present time makes automatons of men in certain fields. But the expectation that monotony would be the evil result of factory life has not been borne out by experience. Scientific management has done more than anything else to relieve monotony. It teaches workmen to do away with useless movements. Thus time and energy are saved. In efficiently organised plants workmen rest at certain intervals of the day to break the fatigue and monotony of work. The workman, moreover, has an incentive to work for. The standard of pay in work is that of the output of the slowest workmen. Hence if a man is efficient, if he has ambition, if he desires to outdo his fellow workmen, if he wants to earn more money, he has an incentive. In his zeal to rise above the rest he forgets the monotony of the actual work. It is the mental state he is in that makes a mere sham of physical monotony.

But what about clerks in department stores and offices? Consider the bookkeeper, for example. Figures, hour after hour, day after day, year after year. The zeal to construct, to produce, that accompanies factory work, is not there. There is no letup, no bonus to work for. It is an antiquated system. To what has he to look forward? More pay? No. Greater skill? No. Organization, the feeling that workers are banded together to protect their interests? No.

That is why, in the words of Elbert Hubbard, "slipshod assistance, foolish inattention, dowdy indifference and half hearted work seem to rule in office work." Office work takes the initiative out of men, it makes automatons of them and it tends, moreover, to reduce their virility and manhood. Put an office man and a factory workman together; see which is stronger and healthier, both physically and mentally, and which has the greater capacity for accomplishing difficult tasks. The man who is not educated and has no intellectual inclinations may or may not stand the strain. But put an educated man there—there are many—and the strain simply destroys him. His brain is clogged, ambition is killed, interest in life destroyed. What is typical of the bookkeeper applies to general office work.

Let a man produce something, let him turn out something tangible? The skilled mechanic turns out a motor. He has something to see, something to be proud of, something to produce satisfaction. This pleasant state of affairs spurs him on to turn out a better piece of work in less time.

MASON'S MELODIES

PATRIOTS.

The country calls for men to fight against a brutal, ruthless foe; the country's cause is just and right; the bugle's sounding—will you go? Forever honored is the man who springs to arms without delay, impatient to be in the van, to lead his comrades in the fray. His breast with noble ardor burns; he grips his sword and thinks no more of all the trivial concerns of workshop, counting room or store. We hear his martial harness clank, we view him with a jealous stare, while we go padling to the bank and salt down greasy doubloons there. "We'd gladly do our bit," we say, "but while admist the battle smoke our little business would decay. War's perils we would gladly court and meet the foe with dauntless tread, but we have grandsires to support and uncles who are needing bread. Some day we'll press our iron heels upon the faces of the foe, but we must close up sundry deals, involving money, ere we go. Some day we'll battle on the land or on the briny ocean foam, but there's no rush, you understand; we'll wait until the cows come home." Forever honored is the man who rises, at the country's need, above the private scheme and plan, the lure of profit, urge of greed.

HUMOROUS INCIDENT IN TOSTI'S LIFE

Frequently we see in the press that various associations are debating the question of the desirability of having a growing list of titles conferred upon Canadians. This recalls that the late Sir F. Paolo Tosti was knighted by King Edward, a fact, perhaps, not generally known, as Tosti was born and died in Italy. He spent most of his life in England from choice. He was a great favorite with the English people both on account of his musical accomplishments and his very charming manner. The frequency with which he was commanded to sing and play before Queen Victoria also indicated his standing in the Old Country.

An amusing incident is told of Tosti. On one occasion he attended a great reception in London. Upon entering a row of liveried servants began each in turn to bow most profusely to him. After passing a few, he muttered to the next flunkie an epithet in the Neapolitan dialect which in English would be something like "Darn fool." Again he used the same expression to the next servant, and the next, and so on until the fourth when dubbed "Darn fool" retorted, "Darn fool yourself." Then Tosti knew he had struck one who understood the Neapolitan word.

Tomato Fritters

Boil seven medium sized tomatoes which have been peeled and cut in small pieces, one tablespoon of chopped onion, a teaspoon of salt and a dusting of paprika. When soft rub through a sieve and slowly add to one-half a cup of cornstarch cooked for five minutes in one-third of a cup of butter. Cook for another five minutes and add a well-beaten egg and three tablespoons of grated cheese. Do not let boil after adding the egg. Drop by spoonfuls into deep boiling fat and when brown, drain on paper and roll in grated cheese.

Delicious Tea Cake

Take one cupful of cream, two beaten eggs and one cupful liquid yeast one-half cupful sugar. Beat all together, add flour with a very few currants to make it soft dough. Set away to rise. Roll out, cut with biscuit cutter, lay on pan far apart and let rise until very, very light and bake. When done (well browned) brush with a little cream and three spoonfuls of brown sugar, mixed

Sweet Buns

Take a piece of dough enough for a large loaf, mix into it one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of [illegible] rants and one-half cupful of butter. Mix well, pulling the dough apart and dry with flour. Just so it can be handled, allow it to rise, put on the pans and let rise until light, and bake in a moderate oven until nicely browned.

ARTISTIC TEMPERAMENT.

The Average Singer is Very Nervous.

Singers rarely or never contract tuberculosis, which is probably due to their proper method of breathing, thereby taking in plenty of oxygen—important and indispensable to good health. At the same time the chief neurotics that visit a physician's office are singers. This neurotic condition, common in singers, is mainly due, so some doctors believe, to extreme sensitiveness. Nervousness occupies a big place in the life of the average singer.

Music is very instrumental in producing a nervous condition. It causes a marked effect on the nervous system through its varied vibrations. It has been proven repeatedly by experimentation that music will cause stimulation, depression, make the weak strong, cowards brave, and aid many maladies of the nervous system.

Temperament in a singer is nothing but a tributary to nervousness. Temperament will cause an increased reaction, both mental and physical to external impressions. Singers who possess an abundance of temperament, characterized by mental force and high-strung sensibilities, manifest tenseness, vigor as an expression of style. In other words, temperament is nothing but a preponderance of the mental over the physical qualities.

Temperament is affected by different conditions, as elevation of temperature, change of climate, high altitude, and environment. If singers control this temperament of theirs their singing will be clear; but if they lack power of adaptation sudden nervousness may come in, thereby causing straining, clouding, and muffling of the voice, and improper breathing.

The treatment of this neurosis requires the greatest care. The singer's food, sleep, exercise, and work, should all be systematically regulated. Personal hygiene is very important in such individuals. Their intellectual work especially should be judiciously limited and should alternate frequently with periods of repose. Excitement of all kinds should be avoided.

WILL PROTECT MUSIC BUYERS

Association of Music Dealers Has Two-Fold Object.

The Canadian Piano and Music Retailers' Association's Executive Committee held their initial meeting at the St. Charles Hotel, Toronto, recently, when a constitution and by-laws were drafted, and arrangements made to correspond with all retailers asking them to join the Association and lend their active co-operation.

The objects of the Association are these: "For the betterment of conditions in the piano and music trades; for the co-operation of the manufacturers and wholesalers; for the consideration of the regulation of the one-price system; to confine the music business of prices, terms and contracts; and for the general uplift of the trade."

Mr. J. M. Greene, head of the music company of that name in this city is an active member of the above committee, and is energetically devoting considerable time not only to enhancing the interests of music dealers, but also, to assuring protection for buyers of music, instrumental especially.

Peterboro Enthusiasts.

It is also worthy of note that Peterborough dealers have organized into a local branch of the mother association, with a view to promoting musical advancement in Peterborough and district homes, churches and schools. They will cooperate in the direction of making the acquisition of instrumental music as easy as sound and reliable business transactions will permit, and encourage all enterprises of a musical entertaining nature. This home organization will meet in its first business session on Monday evening next, and it is confidently expected that the enthusiasm of its members will be in keeping with the demands of a Greater Peterborough.

THE ORIGIN OF RAGTIME.

Ragtime American Only in So Far As the Negro Is.

In making the statement, as so many foreign musicians do, that ragtime is essential American, one must remember that it is so only because the Negro is American. Ragtime is mainly a product of negro art. It is the song that his ancestors sang that he has brought over from Africa. It is the song that his anhestors sang in the moments of frenzied worship, festivity and riot. It has a charm in its beat that harkens back to the swaying bodies of the savage. This is the cause for its popularity as dance music.

The reason it does not take a higher position in the art of music is because it is not lasting in its charm. A popular song of today will be unknown three months later, whereas the songs of the great composers never die. This is due to the fact that the Negro is comparatively young. His civilization is one of a few scant centuries. The one of the white man is that of thousands of years. The latter has passed through the weathering and refining processes of time where the former still stands forth in all its credulity. The music of the Negro is not vulgar, as is believed by many supporters of the old masters of music. David Mannes, the well-known violinist who has made an intensive study of this phase of music, holds the most convincing brief in defence of it.

THE CHURCH CHOIR.

The Church Choir is doing a commendable work in making music popular in the homes and in cultivating the talents of the rising generation. At a concert given in Murray Street Church Tuesday night upwards of fifty carefully trained vocalists took part. The music heard in the churches is an echo of that in the homes. The local choirmasters are all artists in their profession and the singers who are trained by them can hardly overestimate their advantages.

A GREEK SLAVE.

This irrisistible musical comedy presented last week in the opera house by the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Co., under the capable direction of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Devey again demonstrated the influence of music upon Peterborough citizenship. The offering attracted three large responsive audiences whose unstinted applause left no doubt as to the worth of the presentation. And in support of the "Music in the Home" propaganda, it might be incidently mentioned that "A Greek Slave" was mainly rehearsed in the home, the opera house not being available.

EUROPEAN STUDY.

Going Abroad More a Habit Than a Necessity.

For generations the Prix de Rome has had a special attraction for music students in Paris. The fact that Rome has ceased to be an important educational centre so far as music is concerned has nothing to do with the distinction of obtaining a travelling scholarship of such value and with such historic associations. Undoubtedly the Gouin Government of the Province of Quebec had the Prix de Rime in mind when they founded a scholarship providing for three years' European study for the most promising of the young musicians of the province. This scholarship is called the Prix d'Europe, and the examinations are to be held in Laval University, Quebec City, on June 30th next.

The fact that any Canadian Government extends any financial support to music whatever is in itself most satisfying. Still one may reasonably ask if the establishment of such a scholarship is the best means of encouraging music study. For the past ten years it has been brought home to our people that the custom of going abroad "to finish" was more a habit than a necessity. Except for the specialized study of opera singing there is little to be obtained by a European sojourn save the broadening of spirit which travel always brings. The system of piano and violin teaching has been fairly well standardized all over the world, and when experienced teachers can be found on this side of the Atlantic why should anyone go travelling? The possibility of building up our own institutions, developing the great opportunities which lie before us, and giving Canada a chance to build an artistic reputation, is recognized by many of our most eminent musicians.

Quebec is to be congratulated on what has been done by the Government, yet as other provincial administrators begin to realize the importance of encouraging art, and art education, they would perhaps be better advised if they stimulated home industries. It may not be wise to continue the tradition that all civilization and all culture are permanently settled on the other side of the ocean.

The New Westminster Operatic Club has just produced with exceptional success Edward German's light opera, Merrie England. In the absence of fourteen members of the club at the front their place were filled by competent oldsters and an excellent performance was given.

Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise was sung for the first time in Port Arthur on April 24th under the direction of Mr. B. Gunton Smalley with an orchestra of 24 pieces and a chorus of 100 voices. The work, which demands a good deal from the choristers, was sung in excellent manner, and the performance won high praise.

IN TIME OF STRESS

A Soothing Power Which Benefits Sorrowing Hearts

There has been a call to eliminate all waste and extravagant expenditure, but grave danger to the public and harm to the individual would result from indiscriminate and unintelligent economy.

Even if it were necesary to curtail all luxury, music cannot be placed in this class. England's continued support and the governmental encouragement of professional musical activities, Canada's increase of music in the home, and Germany's maintenance of bands which play in the public squares during the day are of special significance at this time, and are all evidences of the people appreciation of the place music fills. When war calls for all posible sacrifice, the mind and the heart look for some-power which will fill the gap—the great void caused by privations.

Music in the Home to be Concentrated Upon

This great need for a concentrating infuence has been satisfied to an appreciable extent by introducing music into the homes. Its soothing power greatly benefits the sorrowing heart, brings encouragement to the desolate, and rouses new hope in the discouraged.

Surely, in Europe there is no stronger need than for a means of counteracting the dismal and ravaging effects of war; misery cries out for relief; sorrow yearns for a "way out." The thinking element in the European countries has realised that music—the great panacea—acts as a powerful solace and stimulus.

Then we, surely a progresive nation, new at the proposition of war, must take lesson and inspiration from the experience of others. Let us not eliminate music from our homes and our lives—on the other hand let us increase its influence. The absence of this influence would result in a serious harm to the country. Deprived of this saving cultural element, it would not be long before this nation would degenerate to inert materialism, going ahead along mechanical lines and losing all initiative.

Wise Economy Calls for Music

The thinking people are now directing the attention of the country to calmly consider just what to eliminate during the "retrenchment" period. The great national necesity now is to take stock of one's expenses, and to clarify one's mind as to which of these are necessary and which are superfluous.

The false economy which is suddenly springing up as a result of war-hysteria, is warned against.

At all times the relaxation forms a necessary part of every human being's life. In time of stress it is expedient to concentrate on these forms of pleasure which may be clased with economy. Even if economy should be needed, it is clear that those pleasures which may be enjoyed in the home are the most economical. With little expense music constitutes the greatest factor in the pleasure of home life.

Wastefulness must most certainly be corrected, but now of all times our efficiency must be increased. We are able to do this only by one method—keep in our lives those elements which increase the mental powers, and chief among these is music.

THE LAUNDRY OF LIFE.

LIFE is a laundry in which we
Are ironed out or soon or late,
Who has not known the irons
Of fate?

We enter it when we are born,
Our colors bright. Full soon they fade,
We exit "done up," old and worn
And frayed—

Frayed round the edges, worn and thin,
Life is a rough old linen slinger.
Who has not lost a button in Life's wringer?

With other linen we are tubbed,
With other linen often tangled.
In open court we then are scrubbed
And mangled.

Some take a gloss of happiness
The hardest wear cannot diminish;
Others, alas, get a "domes-Tic finish."

Verdun Will Be Rebuilt.

The once neat town of Verdun is almost erased to the ground. Nothing remains but heaps of debris, but in time all signs of destruction will be removed and a new Verdun, more beautiful in structure, will arise out of its ashes. The blood-soaked, shell-churned soil, however, may last forever. The most terrible mark left by the battle is to be found in the long, narrow strip of ground on both sides of the Meuse. This blood-soaked gash on the face of the earth begins on the west, near Avocourt and crossing the river, runs to about Abaucourt, a distance of between twelve and fifteen miles. In depth it varies from a few hundred yards to about three miles. Within this strip is to be found the graveyard of Germany's last hope of dominating France.—L' Illustration.

MUSICAL NEWS NOTES

A Conservatory of Music has been opened at Edmonton. Among the members of the staff are Mr. Albert Weaver-Winston, violinist, a pupil of Emil Sauret, Mrs E. Jean Atkinson, pianist, a graduate of the Toronto Conservatory and a former pupil of Mr. J. D. A. Tripp, Mr. Herbert Wild, a Fellow of the Royal College of Organists. Mme Gagner who studied singing in Montreal, Boston, Paris, and Rome is the head of the vocal department. The Conservatory, which bears the modest name of The Associated Music Studios is housed in the Mason and Risch Building. Those who remember the early days of Edmonton long before a railway came within sight of the city, will rejoice and marvel at these evidences of artistic progress.

During the past season Verdi's Manzoni Requiem has been successfully produced in Montreal by St. Paul's Church Choir under Mr. Blair as conductor. The Boston Festival Orchestral Club assisted, and Miss Inez Barbour, of New York, was the principal soloist.

The Women's Musical Club of Halifax has just closed its season. The club organized during the year a series of examinations among school children on the rudiments of music and gave prizes for sight singing.

Riding a Wooden Steed.

It is related that the common and very popular toy seen here was the invention of a man who was urged by his wife to make a toy to please and amuse their only boy. So the man got busy and the popular toy was the result. Before his invention he worked for a small wage per day, but now that little boys and girls all over the country demand his invention he has grown rich, and the little boy will soon ride in an auto.

ABOARD A KIDDY KAR.

A Little Nervous.

Lord Charles Beresford tells a story about his stay at a country inn near Oxford. His lordship arrived over night quite alone, and told the host who he was. That worthy thus admonished the hot water boy: "Look here," said he earnestly, "we have got a lord here—a real live lord. We never had one here before, and I don't suppose we will ever again. When you take his lordship's water up in the mosning knock several times, and if a voice says: 'Who is there?' mind you say: 'It's the boy, my lord!'" The unfortunate boy was so flustered, however, next morning that shivering outside the door with his hot water when Lord Charles cried: 'Who's there?' he blurted out: 'It's the lord, me boy.'"

CAN GET NO COAL CARGOES

The Oswego Palladium says: For a week or more five Canadian schooners have been in the harbor awaiting coal cargoes that are not yet in sight, and the captains and crews do not know when they will be. "No one can tell why the cargoes of coal are held up," said one of the vessel masters. "I have made inquiries everywhere but the only information I can get is that there is no coal for shipment here; that it is all going toward tidewater; that cars formerly used for coal exclusively are now being used under direction of the Public Service Commission for carrying sand and gravel and other kinds of freight. We are unable to learn that there isn't a supply of coal as large as usual this year, that seems to be admitted, but we are told that the dealers with money in hand can't buy it and that if they could they wouldn't get cars to bring it here. I'm told that this was the experience of one Canadian buyer in Kingston who recently made a trip to the coal fields, to Philadelphia, Pittsburg, and New York, all to no purpose." The schooners here are the "Katie Eccles," "St. Louis," "Abbie L. Andrews," "J. B. Merritt," and "Oliver Mowat."

NEW TITLES CREATED

SUBJECT IS INTERESTING CANADA AT PRESENT.

Sir Hugh Graham of Montreal, a Newspaperman, Receives a Seat in the House of Lords, and Attention Has Thus Been Called to Our Long List of Knights and Baronets.

NO Canadian title has caused more comment than the peerage conferred on Sir Hugh Graham, proprietor of The Montreal Star. He is the first Canadian-born citizen who, remaining a resident of Canada, has been awarded a seat in the British House of Lords. His brother baron Lord Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R., is a pretty good Canadian, but he was born in Milwaukee. Lord Beaverbrook (Max Aitken), raised to the peerage but a few weeks ago, is a native-born Canadian, but he has deserted Canada for residence in England. Baron Mount Stephen made his career and his money in Canada, but he was born in Scotland, and is also spending his last years there. It remained for a newspaper man to achieve the distinction of a simon-pure Canadian brand of British peerage.

Baron Graham is also a bona-fide newspaper man. His career is one of the romances of journalism. He has never been openly identified with any other important business enterprise. As a youth of twenty-one he founded The Montreal Star. That was almost fifty years ago, and since then he has devoted his whole life to it. It is his boast that he has made it what it is, which is the most widely read and most profitable newspaper in Canada, "without the influence of any political party, without any sustained policy and without being tied to fixed opinions on any question or subject."

Incidentally this statement may give a clue to the newspaper situation in Montreal which is unique. In the old days the Star had two rivals, the Herald and the Witness. Then one day they were merged and every one believes that the man behind the merger is Sir Hugh Graham. That the Star is nominally Conservative in politics and the other paper Liberal has never seemed to bother Sir Hugh. Other papers still contest the field, but there is probably not another city of half a million population where the newspaper field is dominated by one man as it is in Montreal by Baron Graham.

But why to the peerage? Officially the answer is that it is a recognition of "lifelong devotion to the highest causes of Empire." Someday some critic may inquire if it would not be more to the ultimate benefit of the Empire if titles were granted for services rendered in Canada, for Canada, that is if titles are to be continued at all.

There is also an impression that a movement is under way to "imperialize" the House of Lords and get it in line for the imperial reorganization which it is hoped by some is to take place following peace. On theory is that in the imperial scheme the House of Lords will be given a large role to fill either as second chamber to an imperial House of Representatives or as the imperial legislative body itself. In either case representation from the Dominions in it would be necessary, for as a purely British House it could not undertake to govern the overseas Dominions. It is pointed out that with such representatives as Baron Graham, Baron Beaverbrook, and Baron Shaughnessy Canada is securing an active representation.

But even those who do not object to the granting of titles in Canada wonder why it is that these fancy honors never go to elected representatives of the Canadian people, who have devoted their lives to the service of their country, but always to private individuals, generally of great wealth who sometimes have never held a public office of any kind, not even that of poundkeeper.

There have been several rumors that Sir Robert Borden would some day be called to the peerage. He would qualify both as a statesman and as a man of considerable wealth.

Other Canadian members of the peerage include Baron Aylmer and Baron de Blaquiere, both of whom are Irish peers without seats in the House of Lords, and Baron de Longueuil, a Canadian title which was in existence before the Conquest, was perpetuated by the Treaty of Paris of 1763, but was not formally acknowledged by a British sovereign until Queen Victoria's day. In addition, there are the Baroness Macdonald of Earnscliffe and Baroness Strathcona, the widows respectively of Sir John A. Macdonald and Lord Strathcona. Both live in England.

Peerage as a rule is hereditary. So are baronetcies. An encouraging feature about Canadian titles is that so far these hereditary ranks have been sparingly distributed. The common or garden varieties of knighthood die with the recipients. But there are a few baronetcies. Sir William Osler, the distinguished Canadian, who won his professional fame at Johns Hopkins, holds a baronetcy. So does Sir Edward Gordon Johnson, the fifth baronet in his line, an employe in the head office of the Canadian Pacific Railroad in Montreal. So does Sir Cyril S. Rose, the third baronet in line, a descendant of a former Minister of Finance; also Sir Charles Stewart Tupper, the son of a former Prime Minister and second in line; also Sir John Beverley Robinson, of Edgewater, N. J., U. S. A., whose title comes from a former Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, and also Sir Vincent Meredith, head of the Bank of Montreal, who in his own person founds the title.

POOR BLOOD AND WEAK NERVES

(By F. Raymond Ward, M. D.

Lack of strength is about the first symptom of violation of the laws of health. There come nervousness, unsteady hands and limbs, skin eruptions, dizziness, sleeplessness, heart palpitation, and with the feeling that the life blood is being sapped comes complete prostration. In this condition the sufferer is indifferent to all things—and looks upon life with a gloomy, melancholic view.

It is given as a statistical fact that seven out of every ten people in the United States are suffering from nerve exhaustion, and of this number less than half realize it. They know that they have gloomy thoughts, a depression of mind, an impaired memory, dizziness and headaches, wakeful nights and spells of extreme exhaustion, but they attribute it to any other cause but the right one. They feel languid, irritable and restless, the why and wherefore of which they cannot explain. They are suffering from nerve exhaustion, a condition which is undoubtedly the means of causing more misery and crushing more hopes than any other trouble that flesh is heir to.

Nervous exhaustion will not cure itself. The sufferer who thinks that nature alone will bring about a restoration of health is simply deluded by a false hope. He will realize that all the power of realizing is left him, when he becomes a hopeless victim to one of the many diseases which follow in its path.

Those suffering from nerve exhaustion or loss of energy as a result of overwork, mental worry or violation of nature's laws are quickly restored to sound health by Dr. Ward's special treatments. Dr. Ward's office is located at 79 Niagara Square, Buffalo, N. Y., which is right opposite the McKinley Monument. His office hours are Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. Sundays 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. Consultation and examination is always without charge.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

How the Early Little May Flower Got Its Name.

LIKED BY THE BUMBLEBEES.

Not Only Is the Trailing Arbutus of the Woodside Sweet Scented; It Also Contains Delicious Nectar—Its American History Reaches Far Back.

Spring is with us, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, and it seems a good time to tell about PINK MAYFLOWERS.

The little mayflower, or arbutus, is a great favorite of mine.

Not only is the mayflower sweet smelling, but it is sweet tasting, as any little bumblebee can tell you. On the hillsides or the borders of rocky woods where the flower generally grows, you will in the springtime find swarms of the bumblebees hanging around the flowers, into which they dive for a drink of their delicious nectar.

I must tell you how the mayflower got its name.

I have told you of the brave white people who first came to live in this country nearly 300 years ago. They reached the land in the fall, and in Massachusetts, where they had come to stay, that winter was a very cold one. They suffered much because the food was scarce and the clothes which they had were not warm enough. Their English homes had been warm and comfortable, but in the American forest they had only poorly built log cabins, through the cracks in which the chill winds often whistled.

When the hungry wolves howled around their doors on wild nights or they could see the Indians watching them from behind the trees in the great uncleared forest no doubt they often longed for the pleasant English towns they had left. For the women and children who had to stay much indoors it was very hard indeed.

But by and by spring came, and then the settlers were able to be out once more. And great was their delight when the leaves came out on the trees, when the bushes in the forest clothed themselves in green and the grass everywhere became fresh and bright. Here and there in the woods flowers began to appear and first of all among them the little pink flower which we have named the mayflower.

The little children gathered them and carried them home to show their delighted parents.

And the women dug them up and tried to plant them around the cabins to begin little gardens, gardens that they meant to make as much as they could like the loved gardens which they had left with their homes across the ocean.

The flowers grew all about the pine groves of old Plymouth, where the people had settled, and because the flowers had come to them in May and because the name of the good ship that had brought them to America had been called the Mayflower they so named the flower.

Not a Copper.

In the French city of Toulouse, it seems, there are no more copper sous. Instead, there are sous of pasteboard. The one-sou piece is rectangular and of exactly the same size as the two-sou piece. Just how or why is not clear, but the disappearance of the copper coins from the whole region of Toulouse has been complete. Consequently, the necessity of replacing them by this paper, or rather cardboard, money. The paper two-sou notes bear this legend: "Good for one fare." For they are tramway tickets, nothing more, though they pass freely as currency. The one-sou note has printed in the middle of it a picture—a very bad picture, at that—of that rare, precious, marvellous, and no longer obtainable object, the copper sou.

On account of the shortage of men women will be employed in the big shipbuilding plants in Camden, N.J.

New Russian Calendar Has Been Made Uniform With European Nations

THE calendar is one of those things which most people take for granted. It is regarded as a simple and necessary equipment of every well-regulated household or office, and few people, probably, pause to consider the wealth of history, stretching back to the remotest period, which lies behind it. In this respect, indeed, the calendar is a snare and a delusion, for, from the very first moment when one begins to make inquiry into its history, one is involved in many other studies. There are associated with it great political questions and great religious questions. There are mazes of the most abstruse mathematical calculations to be faced, whilst it involves, or may involve, a careful study of practically the whole field of astronomy. Then, if anyone imagines, when he first engages in this inquiry, that he has simply to trace through a single thread, which has one end in the beginnings of things and the other on his writing desk, he is doomed to disappointment. There are other calendars, still in use to day, and many others were at one time in use, and they all have histories. However, the Julian calendar, to which Russia, by a special edict, has at last conformed, after holding out successfully against it for more than three hundred years, is now by far the most important of those at present in use, and the coming in of Russia places it in the position of a world calendar.

Russia, in the change she has just made, has performed an act beside which the national writings off of an hour at the commencement of summer time is indeed a small matter. She has written off no less than thirteen days, and, in order to bring herself into line with the rest of the world, took a leap, from April 18 to May 1. Thus is a long controversy now practically settled. It had its beginnings more than three hundred years ago, and it came about in this way: In early times the Romans were wont to divide their year into ten months, but, later on, in the days of the kings, they adopted the lunar year of 355 days, divided into twelve months with an occasional intercalary month to preserve the adjustment. In process of time, however, the priests who had charge of the matter, either through carelessness or ignorance, allowed confusion to creep in, and by the time of Julius Cæsar the matter was crying out vociferously for drastic adjustment. Julius Cæsar, accordingly, grappled with the question in B. C. 6. The year was divided into 365 days, and, every fourth year, one day was added, the length of the year being assumed to be 365¼ days. As a matter of fact, however, the year is less than 365¼ days, by eleven minutes and forty-eight seconds, and this fact was the source of all the trouble which followed, for some sixteen hundred years.

In those sixteen hundred years, the few minutes each year grew into days, and by 1582 the discrepancy between the official date and the actual date amounted to ten days. This shifting of days had caused great disturbances by unfixing the times of the celebration of Easter, and likewise of all other movable feasts, and so, in the year already mentioned, Pope Gregory XIII. decided that a reformation was necessary. After carefully investigating the matter, with the help of the astronomer Clavius, he ordained that ten days should be deducted from the year 1582, and that, in the month of October in that year, the calendar should jump from the 4th to the 15th. In order that this displacement should not occur again, it was further ordained that every hundredth year should not be counted as leap year, excepting every fourth hundredth, beginning with 1600. In Spain, Portugal, part of Italy, France and the Roman Catholic Low Countries, the change was made, although not in every case on the same date; but in the Protestant countries the innovation was strenuously resisted, and the Lutherans of Germany, Switzerland, and the Protestant Low Countries did not agree to the change until the year 1700. England stood out for another half century, and it was not until 1751 that an Act was passed for equalizing the style, in Great Britain and Ireland, with that used in other western countries of Europe. By that time the ten days of Gregory's time had grown to be eleven, and so, when the change was made, the 2nd of September, 1751, became the 14th, and an incensed populace paraded the streets of London, calling upon the authorities: "Give us back our eleven days!" Russia and Greece still held to the old style, the discrepancy, of course, accumulating all the time. Now Russia has made the leap, and Greece alone is left to represent the old order.

MARKET PRICES

TORONTO, May 31.—The intrusion of the holiday into last week was a considerable deterrent to activity in Toronto horse trade circles. After a fairly good beginning there was a general slackening up, although indications are good for the coming weeks. At the Union Yards there was a very satisfactory inspection on Monday, and close to 100 horses were accepted out of the 160 that were shown. The inspecting officers expressed themselves as pleased with the showing made, and they expect two or three such inspections weekly when the trade gets in full swing.

The sale for rejected horses is held on Tuesday and Wednesday, and there is a fair demand for expressers of good upstanding type at $215 to $220, and for fairly good wagon horses at $120 to $140.

In commercial horse trade circles prices are ranging from $110 to $160 and $170.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

Peterborough markets this week have not been very encouraging to the market clerk as very little produce or live stock has been offered.

The hog market is on the downward path and from the predictions made by men who should know the prices will gradually drop for some weeks unless better shipping facilities are arranged for.

The local price for this week is $16.00.

There is a good demand for butcher stock of all kinds. Some of the local butchers have been importing dressed beef from Toronto in preference to paying a very high price for the live animal at home.

The Peterborough Cheese Board will hold its second sale on Wednesday morning next at 10 o'clock in the Bank of Montreal Chambers. Judging from the prices offered at other boards there will be some sharp bidding for the local offering.

ALWAYS SWEETHEARTS THE DIFFICULT TASK

After Marriage Affection Generally Diminishes—Why Should This Be?—Wives Keep Husbands' Love

A woman writes: The fact should not be lost sight of that when a woman becomes a wife she has a still greater end to attain, namely, the keeping of her husband's love. There could be no more disastrous mistake than to think that a woman has completed her task when the marriage register is signed. Yet it is an error which is only too frequently made. There can be but little happiness in the lives of any married couple who fail to remain sweethearts still, through life. And it is so easy to do that.

The Chase Over

"You never hear of a man continuing to run after a 'bus after he has caught it!" exclaimed a wit once, who was taxed with ceasing his lover-like attentions after marriage. And it is to be feared that too many women adopt this attitude. After marriage they seem to think that they have made their position in life, and that it is quite superfluous to make themselves as attractive to their husbands as they had to when those husbands were sweethearts.

Now, however, we may endeavor to disguise it, there is not the slightest doubt that we make ourselves attractive, dress our hair nicely, and wear pretty frocks and frills, mainly for the purpose of subjugating the opposite sex. Our plans generally succeed, but most women forget that man is a most obstinate creature, who is liable to break loose at any moment after the influence which first conquered him is removed.

How to Succeed

Therefore, you find many young wives neglecting their personal appearance directly after marriage, and in consequence unhappy married life is the result. Don't forget that your husband wooed and won you, and loved you when you were only too pleased to make yourself attractive to him. If you fail to keep that up, then he finds that you are quite a different woman to the one he married, and unhappiness is the result.

One of the most important things a young wife has to look after is her personal appearance, if she would keep her husband's love. Instead of spending an hour or two scrubbing out or tidying up some corner that he never sees and that does not matter, attend to your looks and your dress. Another thing: It is a common belief among women that courtship ceases with marriage. No idea could be more fallacious. If you had to make little sacrifice, to go to some little extra trouble, in order to win your husband's love when he only saw you once or twice a week, how much more essential is it to do the same when you are married and your more constant companionship is likely to stale!

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Helpful Hints For Those Who Care to Use Them

Wash silver that is not in daily use in soapy water, wipe, and dry a few minutes in a warm oven, then wrap in tissue paper. Do not allow one piece to touch another. Place tissue paper between. Put the teaspoons and other small pieces in a quart can, and hermetically seal. Put the knives, forks, and tablespoons in a two-quart can. They will not tarnish, and will require no polishing when wanted for use.

Keep a box of powdered borax near the work table. Add a little to the water in which the dish towels and dish cloths are washed. They will wash easier, keep sweet longer, and the borax will aid in keeping the hands soft.

To remove iron rust spots, in the absence of sunshine, soap them well, place a wet cloth on a very hot iron; when the steam rises lay the spots on the cloth and immediately rub with a crystal of oxalic acid, or a damp cloth dipped in powdered crystals. When the spots have disappeared, wash at once in several waters. Guard the acid well, as it is a deadly poison.

A two-quart can of boiling water is an excellent foot-warmer if encased in a little flannel bag. It can be rolled about easily, and is of easy application where dry heat is to be used to relieve pain.

Brighten the colors in a carpet by sweeping it with a broom dipped in salt and water, shaking well to remove all surplus water. The broom should be damp, not wet. Use damp earth to remove the dust when carpets are lifted.

Before broiling steak open all the draughts to make the coals bright and clear. Hold the meat for the first few minutes close to the glowing coals, then turn. This will seal the juices. Then it may be finished at a distance of several inches above the coals. From a broiled steak little or no juice should escape.

THE WOMAN AT HOME

No Excuse For Indifferent Dressing—Study Your Family

A woman writes: "Curl papers and a kimono" are likely responsible for more unhappy marriages than either you or I dream of. A great many highly intelligent women have the Japanese idea about beauty—after marriage some Japanese women blacken their teeth—to make themselves ugly in the sight of other men, quite forgetting how unattractive they make themselves to their own husbands.

Many of our own women, allowing the cares of housework to weigh down on them, arise of a morning, wash themselves indifferently, tie their hair in a hideous knot, and get into a sloppy dress. In this garb they greet their family at breakfast—the most trying meal of the day. With this image of slatternly ugliness in their minds husband and children leave the house, carrying away a repulsive impression of a woman that ought to be all love and charm to them.

You should wake up five minutes earlier if you are rushed in the morning. This gives you time to do your hair properly, and for a sponge off. When you greet your family then, you do it looking attractive, fresh, inspiring. You feel prettier, too—and since it is you who determine whether your home is cheerful or no—it will be you who start off the family on a day of good work and good thoughts—all because of a dainty breakfast table and a smiling mother and wife.

BASEBALL

"I intend to keep up the fight for later openings indefinitely," says Col Ebbets. "I have facts and figures to strengthen my argument that the pennant races should start on or about April 25, with the wind-up on October 12. Weather statistics of former years prove that in all the major league cities the temperature in October averages seven degrees higher than in April. It is criminal business to ask the public to attend baseball games in April when concrete stands still retain the winter's cold and the fans are not acclimited. The records show that October for many years has provided good baseball weather, and that the world's series could have been started as late as the 14th of that month. By that time the public has become accustomed to fair weather and is not compelled to sit outdoors with ice and snow on the ground. It is foolish to believe that April ever will be a favorable baseball month in future. The seasons seem to be changing, and it is about time for the major leagues to realize that important fact."

After a year of idleness Joe Wood pitched his first game for the Clevelands on Saturday and the Yankees collected eleven bingles in eight frames. Wood probably was afraid to extend himself and therefore, is entitled to another chance to prove that he can pitch as well as he did in 1912, when he won thirty-four games and lost five. Wood's skill that year enabled the Red Sox to win the American league pennant and the world's series from the Giants, but he has been ailing ever since. In spite of his ineffectiveness, however, he has demanded a high salary. The Red Sox sold him to the Clevelands last spring for $15,000, and Wood signed a new contract for big money, feeling sure that he would be a winner. Perhaps hot weather will help Wood, but there are many baseball men who believe that he has seen his best days.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

BORN TO BE OLD MAIDS

Narrow Mindedness Prevents Proper Marriage, Says a Writer

Elizabeth M. Dorrell writes: Persons of cast iron habits in daily life or even adamant mental attitudes, should never marry, no matter what their age. I have seen young girls of eighteen so narrow-minded and set in their opinions that they were predestined old maids and would remain old maids in thought even if they married a dozen times. I have also seen old ladies of sixty whose mental plans were so youthful that I didn't wonder that men still wanted to marry them.

Did you ever see a boy with a narrow forehead and green eyes set close together without knowing that at forty he would be a deacon and pass the plate in church and make his wife scald the tea leaves twice? Did you ever see a fat, roly-poly boy with thin light hair and a genius for making friends, that you did not know he would grow into a commercial traveller and bring his wife a box of candy when he had stayed out too late?

Did you ever see a perfectly selfish young girl, who thought of nothing but silk stockings and how to keep her complexion, that you couldn't see the patient way her husband would have to sew on his own buttons and set the table Sundays nights while the neighbors would always be buttoning her children's pinafores? Then, did you ever see the ravening motherlook in the eyes of a little girl as she bent over her array of dolls without hoping in your own heart that she would marry the right man and be the happy mother of many well-kept babies?

Age has nothing to do with a person's right to marry. I heard the other day of an old lady who was going into incoherent raptures over the birth of her thirty-second grandchild. What a born grandmother that woman was! She probably had a genius for home-making.

ORIGIN OF LEAP YEAR

St. Patrick Once Did a Little Love-Making Himself

There are several legendary origins of the Leap Year privilege of ladies proposing, the best known being the one which says we owe it to St. Patrick. While walking along the shores of Lough Neagh the saint met St. Bridget, who tearfully told him that there was trouble among the nuns over whom she ruled because a woman might not propose to a man. In those days, by the way, single bliss was not enforced as an absolute rule of the Catholic Church as now.

Moved by her tears, St. Patrick offered St. Bridget and her nuns the privilege of proposing one year in seven. But Bridget declared this would never satisfy the ladies, she knew, and pleaded for at least one year in four, strengthening her argument by throwing her arms round St. Patrick's neck.

"Biddy, acushla, squeeze me that way again and I'll give you leap year, the longest year of the lot," is said to have been his reply, and so the matter was settled. To come to strict history, in 1288 a law was passed in Scotland by which any man who refused to marry the lady who proposed to him was fined $5 or less according to his means, unless he could show that he was engaged to another lady. Unfortunately, there are no statistics recorded of the effect of this curious law.

Spiced Fruit

Peaches, pears, plums, cherries or crabapples make delicious sweet pickles for use with cold meats. One pint of spiced vinegar will be required for every 6 lbs. of fruit. Put the vinegar on to boil for a few minutes with a teaspoonful of each of three spices (any combination of spices desired may be used), and 4 lbs. sugar. Two or three cloves may be stuck in each of the large fruits before cooking. When the spiced vinegar is boiling, add the fruit, cook until tender, and seal while boiling hot.

Flannels should be washed with soap and warm water, never hot or boiling water, and if a little glycerine is added the wool will keep soft.

To get long service out of scrim or muslin curtains, hem them top and bottom alike so that they may be reversed.

Rusted curtain hooks, if soaked in vinegar over night, can be used again.

Sometimes a cigar draws better than the actor it is named after.

It takes more than a visit from his wife's mother to make a man happy.

BROWN SWISS CATTLE

The Brown Swiss, as they are known on this continent, represent one of the leading breeds. It has been developed in Switzerland, and is probably one of the oldest breeds known. In its native land it is classed as a dual-purpose breed, and formerly showed both as a beef and a dairy breed in America, but is now classed as a dairy breed. The cows weigh from 1,200 to 1,400 pounds, and the bulls often weigh more than a ton. The color is brown to silver gray, resembling the color of some families in the Jersey breed. The cows give a good flow of milk, containing about 3.7 per cent. of butter fat.

LOGGER'S DARING FEAT

Busby Became Talk of Vancouver District—Rivalled Steeplejack

The crew of Higgins' logging camp at Camelon Harbor, Tribune Channel, about 80 miles north of Vancouver, witnessed an act of remarkable daring and agility, performed by one of their number, which will doubtless be talked about for many a day in the Coast lumber camps, where feats of daredevil bravery are as common as "scraps" among school boys.

In the course of a shift to a new logging location it became necessary to attach a cable to a very tall tree at a point 120 feet from the ground. Usually this is done by a workman equipped with pole-climbing spurs and belt, but this time these means were not available. What was to be done? It would take several days to secure the equipment from Vancouver, and a shutdown of the operations for that length of time was not to be thought of owing to the heavy expense involved.

This is where tall Andrew Busby came to the rescue. He was an expert chopper and skilled in using a springboard. With his axe and two springboards he began to climb the tree. Standing on the first board, he chopped a notch five feet above him, slipped the second board into the notch, climbed up, and, drawing the first board after him, repeated the performance a score of times. In an hour, while his companions below watched him breathlessly, he reached the top of the tree and affixed the rope. Standing on a board a few inches wide, he was apparently as cool at 100 feet from the ground as when he was only five feet from terra firma. Busby became a private in the 230th Forestry Battalion, enlisting in Vancouver a few days after performing the act above mentioned.

MOTORISTS SHOULD KNOW

Many Hints About Tires and Those Long Tours

One should never use hard grease for chain lubrication.

Two or three pairs of pliers instead of one should be carried.

You must know the load per tire in order to inflate properly.

Two horns should be installed when a long tour is to be made.

One should never forget spare tire valves and a hand-tire pump for emergency.

In lapping the piston it should be given both a reciprocating and oscillating motion.

If the silent chain is exposed when in operation it should be oiled as frequently as possible.

Where enamel has cracked and fallen off wire wheels, paint should be applied to prevent rusting.

Maximum tire mileage will be obtained if the casings always are properly inflated and kept free from cuts.

If the driving gears of a speedometer are lubricated once each week they will operate more quietly and for a longer period.

The side walls of the tire must retain a given shape and this shape can be altered by changing either the load carried, or the pressure in the tube.

Cinnamon Rolls

Take a piece of dough, roll out thin, spread with butter, sprinkle thickly with ground cinnamon and plenty of sugar, roll in a long roll, pull it out to make the rolls required size, and cut off one inch thick and lay in a pan, cut side up, close together, let rise and bake. They must be well flavored with cinnamon and sugar and very carefully baked so as not to burn or they will not be nice.

A bit of cardboard slipped between the facing where hooks are to be sewed on will prevent the stitches showing on the right side.

STEWART—WHITE.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ephriam White, "Cedar Grove Farm," Ida, in the Township of Cavan, Durham Co., on May 24, 1917, when their daughter, Pearl Blanche, was united in marriage to Mr. Percy W. J. Stewart of Ida.

At the hour appointed, the bride, leaning on the arm of her father and neatly attired in a dress of white crepe de chene beautifully trimmed, and wearing a bridal veil caught up with orange blossoms, and carrying a large sheaf of white roses, entered the artistically decorated drawing room to the strains of a very pretty wedding march played by Mrs. J. Richardson of Pontypool. The bride being presented by her father for marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. T. Wickett of Fraserville in the presence of about ninety guests.

The flower girl was Miss Helen Kennedy of Cavan, cousin of the bride, and the ring bearer was Master Marshall Finney, a nephew. The register was signed by Wm. White and Miss Etta L. Stewart.

The presents were both valuable and useful, attesting to the popularity of the bride, the groom's gift being a substantial check, to the flower girl a necklace, to the ring bearer a pearl handled knife, and the pianist a pair of white kid gloves.

After all had done justice to a sumptuous repast the happy couple left amid showers of best wishes for Toronto, London and Buffalo, the bride being attired in a suit of woodland green with hat to match. On their return they will reside on the Stewart homestead, "The Maple."

USE MORE FISH IN DAILY DIET

ORGANIZATION OF RESOURCES COMMITTEE MEET IN TORONTO.

TORONTO, May 31.—At a meeting of the Organization of Resources Committee of Ontario the sub-committee appointed to deal with the fishery resources of the province brought in a report which was adopted. The object of the report is to institute an immediate campaign to increase the use of fish as food and thus relieve other foodstuffs for Canadian soldiers overseas, the motherland and our Allies, and in this was effect some of the objects of the greater production movement.

Another matter dealt with was the appointment of a number of field secretaries to assist in the organization of the province. It was recognized that the extent of the 1918 crop will depend upon the quantity an defficiency of the labor that the farmer can command. The farm tractor is expected to play an important part in this respect if the good reports of the work they are doing continue to come in. The whole question shows the necessity of the province being thoroughly organized in time to meet the requirements of the situation as they arise and in order that the purpose of the committee may be carried into effect.

The committee also took up the question of the prevention of waste and the inauguration of a thrift campaign, and a sub-committee was named to deal with this matter.

HEAVY VOTE IS CAST FOR BYLAW

INDICATIONS POINT TO BIG MAJORITY IN FAVOR OF BRIDGES.

The citizens generally took an extraordinary interest in the voting on the overhead bridge bylaw today. Voting on a bylaw does not often call for a very heavy vote, but judging by the large vote polled at noon the result will be a sure representation of the feeling of the people towards the work.

Hundreds of autos were in service to bring the voters to the polls, and a special effort was made at noon to have a sufficient number on hand at the factories to get the electors to their respective polling divisions.

At the Council chamber the largest vote of any bylaw was registered at noon.

The result of the vote will be bulletined at the Review office this evening.

ROWELL, GOUIN,

MR. ROWELL SILENT.

TORONTO, May 31. — N. W. Rowell declined today to talk on the report that he had been invited to enter the coalitoin cabinet.

MR. MURRAY, TOO.

HALIFAX, May 31. — Premier Murray, while expressing himself in favor of a bona fide coalition government, today declined to say if he had been invited to enter the cabinet.

PREMIER GOUIN'S OPINION.

QUEBEC, May 31. Spoken to about the report that he had been called to be a member of a coalition cabinet at Ottawa, Sir Lomer Gouin today said he had not heard of it, and added: "The Canadian people may rely on Sir Wilfrid Laurier in this grave crisis."

Asked whether he had met Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Montreal yesterday, he answered that he had.

BREAD DROPS IN PRICE.

The Kitchener bakers announce that the price of bread dropped from 24 to 22 cents for a three-pound loaf as the result of the decrease in the price of flour. A further decrease in price is anticipated.

The "Sneeze-Wood" Tree

Among its many other peculiarities South Africa includes the "sneeze-wood" tree, which takes its name from the fact that one cannot cut it with a saw without sneezing. Even in planing the wood it will sometimes have the same effect. No insect or worm will touch it; it is very bitter to the taste, and its specific gravity it heavier than water. The color is light brown, the grain running very close and hard; it is, too, a nice looking wood, and takes a good polish. For dock work, piers, or jetties it is a most useful timber, keeping sound a long while under water.

Get a New Valve

It is not advisable to attempt straighten a valve stem on an automobile. While the stem may be straightened and used temporarily to good advantage, nevertheless it is best to replace the valve with a new one. If this is not done a leaky valve is bound to result. It is more economical and more satisfactory to install a new valve as soon as possible.

Tumblers for cold drinks that are made of ice and provided with paper holders have been invented by a German.

Hinged ribs that permit it to be folded to half its length feature a new fan that can be carried in a hand bag.

NEEDLE-THREADING HINTS

Are you a busy seamstress lady? Do you have to hustle unmercifully when you sew, trying to get in a vast amount of work between breakfast and time to get lunch? Then you will appreciate this hint for the busy sewer. Take your thread which you are working with and on the spool thread a package of the right size needles. Then as you need a needleful of thread slide one needle along, break off the right length of thread and go ahead. You can save a lot of time and are not nearly so apt to lose needle as if you threaded them first and stuck them in a cushion. You might be able to get some one with good eyesight to do this for you before you start to sew. Remember, too, that a good way to thread either sewing or machine needles is to hold the eye of the needle against a background of white.

Another needle-threading hint which you might try is to stick the needle through a piece of heavy white paper as far as the eye. The paper not only throws the eye into relief, but acts as a gauge for the thread. This is a good trick to know when you are trying to thread an unusually coarse thread through a fine needle.

The waist of white voile is always attractive and smart, to say nothing of its durability. A dainty model is shown in white, the jabot collar and cuffs trimmed with inch-wide val lace. Crochet buttons fasten the front and very tiny ones outline the shape of the cuff.

CANDIED CRANBERRIES

To Be Used For Cake Decorations or "Tutti Frutti"

For one and a half cups of berries make a thin syrup by boiling together until clear two cups of sugar and two and a half cups of water. When the syrup is cool add the berries and bring very slowly to the boiling point. If the berries are heated too quickly the skins will burst before the syrup soaks into the pulp. As soon as the syrup boils take the dish off the stove and let it stand over night.

Next day drain the syrup from the berries and boil it until it is reduced to about half its original volume. Put the berries into this medium-thick syrup and heat slowly, boil gently for three or four minutes, and then allow to stand for two hours or more. Then boil gently a third time for five minutes. A smaller dish probably will be needed for the third and last boiling.

When thoroughly cold, or, better still, on the following day, drain off the syrup and spread the berries out on a lightly buttered plate or a sheet of clean, waxed or lightly buttered paper until the surface of the berries dries. The berries, if directions have been followed, will candy separately and not into a sticky mass.

To make a delicious ice cream add one-half to three-quarters of a cup of chopped berries to each quart of the cream mixture. They also can be combined with bits of candied orange lemon peel or other glace fruit to make "tutti-frutti" ice cream. The syrup left over after the berries are candied has a pleasant sweet flavor and fine color and is excellent in pudding sauce or even when diluted with water for use on pancakes and waffles.

HOT BATTLE ON WESTERN FRONT

TROOPS CONTINUE TO PLAY BALL WHILE HUN AIRSHIPS HOVER ABOVE DIAMOND

British Soldiers Have Nothing But Contempt For Marksmanship of Enemy in the Clouds.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Headquarters in France, June 1.—The shelling of areas west of Lens by our heavy howitzers continues day and night. It had been hoped that mine heads and other essentials for an early resumption of operations in mine fields might be shared but the enemy had done a work of destruction most effectively and ruined buildings are used now as a shelter for his guns and emplacements for his machine guns.

That part of the front on which the electric light station stands resembles most the shell pitted part of Vimy Ridge. Projectiles making holes in the earth scarcely distinguishable from small mine craters have been thrown there during the past few days. The retaliation of the enemy is light although now and then when he believes there is an unusual gathering in our lines he puts on a barrage.

Infantry activity along the line has been confined to the exploration of German trenches by our patrols. Some times these are found badly damaged and unoccupied but in these the enemy is occupying posts behind his trenches. In the back area the Canadian infantry is kept busy in instructional actions. Many thousands of men who have come from England recently to make good the wastage of April and May are now being taught the latest ideas in handling bombs, grenades and machine guns by instructors who come in from the front to give a demonstration. After these lessons drafts are gradually put in the trenches alongside our experienced troops.

Enemy aircraft are again showing enterprise but fortunately their marksmanship is poor and their bombs fall wide of the mark. Our men are inclined to be too contemptuous of Hun airmen. This Friday morning I saw a group continue to play ball while an enemy airship circled about above dropping bombs in the vicinity. Last week under similar conditions on the French front when the German airman approached a trumpet was blown and the people got under cover. A reckless Frenchman sometimes is much better than the common sense British.

Mr. W. H. Denham's Appreciation

To those who voted and worked for the passing of the bridge bylaw:

On behalf of The Quaker Oats Co. I wish to express their appreciation of the good will and warm interest shown The Quaker Oats Co. in passing the bridge bylaw by such a handsome majority.

I feel confident that the future will prove the wisdom of the ratepayers' decision and that the building of the bridges will be a great step toward the development of a Greater Peterborough.

I wish to thank The Review, the manufacturers and citizens generally for their co-operation, and especially those who gave their personal services toward getting out such a large vote.

Sincerely,
W. H. DENHAM.

LABOR MAN HAS STRAIGHT TALK WITH THE KING

Will Thorne Tells His Sovereign Some Homely Truths.

AND HIS MAJESTY LISTENS.

High Cost of Food and Labor Unrest the Topics Under Discussion.

LONDON, June 1. — Will Thorne, Labor M.P., who had an interview with King George the other day, told his Majesty what Thorne described as "some solid, homely truths." Mr. Thorne intimated that the King liked his plain speaking and showed a familiarity with the questions discussed. These were the labor unrest and high food prices.

The censorship regulations, which have since been roundly denounced in the press of all shades of opinion, prevented a free discussion of the causes of the recent engineering strike, and therbey, in the general view, helped to create a much more serious situation than would have been caused had the strikers' grievances been publicly ventilated.

Though the engineering strike was fortunately settled by an eleventh-hour intervention by Lloyd George, the labor unrest still continues, and is closely connected with the continuously increasing prices of food and the notorious profiteering, to check which no adequate steps have yet been taken. When Lord Devonport accepted the food controllership he did so with reluctance, after others, including Lord Milner, had refused the post, which was wittily described as "a hanging job" for the holder. Ill health increased Devonport's difficulties, and sympathy is expressed with him over the attacks to which he has been subjected, one critic, for instance, asking what but failure could be expected from a "sublimated grocer." The hard fact, however, remains that the British food problems have been, if anything, complicated by the methods by which they have been tackled.

TRUCE BETWEEN HUN AND RUSS. PROBABLYOVER

Germans Are Now Looking for Trouble on Eastern Front.

PEACE NOT NOW POSSIBLE.

Naval Guns and Troops Are Being Hurried to the sian Line.

THE HAGUE, June 1.—The Germans undoubtedly expect heavy fighting on the Eastern front. Recent arrivals in Holland state that numerous transports of men and naval guns are going eastward. The latter feature is novel, and appears to indicate a shortage of heavy and high-angle field artillery. The latest German communiques continue to refer to the increasing artillery duel along the whole Eastern front. The Frankfurter Gazette published a leading article emphatically warning the public that the so-called unofficial truce is now over, and the Entente apparently succeeded in arranging for a simultaneous offensive on all fronts. The paper says the Kaiser's warning to the troops on the Western front that a decision is now at hand referred to the coming combined offensive. It is significant that Theodore Wolff agan warns the German public to abandon all hopes of a separate peace with Russia, whilst the Dutch pacifist press tonight accuses the German Chancellor of clumsiness in his treatment of the Russian situation.

The correspondent learns from very well informed sources that the German military party were anxious to deal a smashing blow on the Russian front during the crisis of the revolution, but were prevented owing to the complete impossibility of withdrawing men and guns from the Western front.

GAVE CHAUFFEUR WHISKY.

Man Who Did Fined $200, Motor Driver $25.

KITCHENER, June 1. — John Robb of Stratford was fined $200 and costs in the police court, having pleaded guilty to the charge of giving whisky to a young man who drove a motor party from Stratford to this city on Saturday night, and had been fined $25 and costs for driving a car while drunk.

HOLD CAPTURED POSTS AGAINST COUNTER ATTACK

Lively Fighting Now in Progress on Western Front—Aerial Service of Enemy is Demoralized.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, June 1. — A news agency despatch published here says: The British forces reached the third line of German trenches in a night raid near Loos early this morning. West of Cherisy another raiding party stormed and occupied two of the enemy's posts. At the moment this is despatched they are tenaciously holding this position despite enemy counter attacks. Besides these two local engagements there was a stiff fight for a time during the night when a British raiding party in the Scarpe valley met a strong German patrol force.

Early today there was more than the usual aerial activity. British airmen declare that further investigation reveals the increasing fragility of the German fighting planes. The Teutons are apparently in such a hurry to get the machines to the front to replace the great number shot down by the Allied airmen and to combat the complete aerial espionage of the French and British fliers, that they are sacrificing stability and safety in planes.

1534 FOR THE BYLAW

Biggest Majority Ever Given in This City for a Measure Involving Expenditure—Only 86 Voted No.

The ratepayers of the city yesterday gave a hearty endorsement to the City Council in their efforts to leave no stone unturned to secure the rebuilding of the new plant of the Quaker Oats Co. here.

Just think of Peterborough carrying a bylaw by a majority of 1,534. Never in the history of the municipality was such a vote polled on any bylaw, and never in the same period was such a unanimous verdict of approval given to the City Council. Mayor Duffus and Chairman McIntyre of the Manufacturers' Committee can feel that the property owners in the strongest terms cast their mark of approval on their action in getting the Quaker Oats Co. to re-establish their plant here.

All the doubt that has existed, if any, has been swept away by the immense vote of yesterday. The people appreciate the Quaker Oats Co., and it goes without saying that the company will appreciate the confidence that the citizens have placed in their promise.

When the first returns of the voting were received at the City Hall the most sanguine of the supporters of the bylaw could hardly believe that the figures were right. The returns from the Co-operative Store showed that only three votes had been cast against the measure. Then the other divisions were quickly heard from, and all added to the magnificent endorsement of our city fathers.

It is a good deal of satisfaction to Mayor Duffus and the aldermen to find that their constituents approve of the expenditure of such a large sum of money in order to secure the Quaker Oats Co.'s new plant for the city, and they feel well repaid for the time and money spent in order to accomplish the signing of an agreement with the officials. It is also a great pleasure to Mr. W. H. Denham, the local superintendent, to be able to notify the officials at headquarters that his idea of what the citizens of Peterborough would do was not wrong.

The following is the vote by subdivisions, and it will be found, on careful analysis, that it was an almost unanimous endorsement, a sixteen to one crack:

DR. CAMERON IS ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT OF O.M.A.

Government to be Asked to Cooperate With Doctors to Prevent Spread of Venereal Disease.

Dr. (Major) G. S. Cameron was elected vice president of the Ontario Medical Association which met in Toronto yesterday. One of the most important questions discussed by the organization was the necessity of the Dominion and Provincial Governments co-operating with the medical fraternity, with a view to eradicating as far as possible the spread of venereal diseases, was strongly emphasized yesterday in a resolution passed at the conference of the Ontario Medical Association in the University Mining Building. It was the opinion of the meeting that the time had arrived when drastic action should be taken along certain lines to protect the feeble-minded, a very large percentage of whom suffer from the ill-effects of the disease.

To Stamp Out Disease.

While the physicians in conference did not desire to make public the substance of the resolution passed at the meeting, held behind closed doors, it was learned that it was the desire of the delegates that the Government should not only take steps to stamp out the disease by assuming the responsibility of taking blood tests in such cases, but also inaugurate a policy of placing a ban upon the importation of remedies made in Germany and used to a very large extent in cases of this kind in the past.

Spreading During War.

It was frankly admitted by one of the delegates that the spread of this particular disease had reached alarming proportions since the outbreak of the war. According to the reports of physicians, the disease generally was not entirely confined to the feeble minded, but reached a certain proportion of the civil population as well. After a lengthy discussion, a special committee was appointed to prepare a report to be submitted at a special meeting of the Executive Board at the call of the Chairman.

CRIME TO HOARD FOOD IN STATES

AMERICAN SENATE CLAIMS TO HAVE SOLVED THE VEXING PROBLEM.

WASHINGTON, Jane 1. — A stringent amendment to the Gore food bill, making it a felony to hoard food products or other necessities of life or to resort to any scheme to create a shortage, was adopted by the Senate by a viva voce vote. It is regarded by the Senate as by far the most potent of all the food legislation considered by Congress, and is interpreted by senators as carrying the real solution of the food problem.

GERMAN OFFICERS BEG FOR PARDON AND FOR AID

Two of Them With Sixty Privates Give Themselves up to Lieut. T. A. Morrow at Vimy Ridge.

Gentleman:

Two officers and forty men, German soldiers beg for pardon and are your prisoners. We have several blessed men, for whom we beg for a medicin. Have the kindness to lead me to one of your officiers.

CZCWPINOTZ,
Lieutenant, 3rd. 5, 17,
of the German Army.

The above note was presented to Lieut. T. A. Morrow by two German officers, who with sixty prisoners surrendered at the Battle of Vimy Ridge. Lieut. Morrow is a son of Mr and Mrs. W. O. Morrow, 202 Water Street, City. He went overseas with the 39th Battalion from Belleville, but since has been transferred to the 4th Battalon, 1st Division Canadians, France. He explains the incident in the following letter to his sister:—

France, May 8, 1917.

My dear sister Velma:

Just a few lines to let you know all is well. Have come through another scrap safely and soundly, and may say the Canadians certainly have made a name for themselves. We are being patted on the backs from all sources, and the French inhabitants here in the village are using us and treating us like little gods.

We are out for a rest after a month's work in the line. In the rear is a large woods, nearly all in bloom with innumerable flowers, and all around the village is the bright green of the springing crops. It certainly is a relief to get back to places where things are natural. I sent some flowers home recently picked in a woods where there wasn't a leaf on the trees and not likely to be either.

Well, Velma, I fared better for prisoners this time than in the last push, but they are remarkable circumstances which I will relate. Three Germans approached (hands up, of course) and presented me with a note I am enclosing. Before I go farther take absolutely every care with this note, and don't let it get defaced any more than it is now. Have it framed, for I prize it highly, and to date many eyes have regarded it enviously. It sure is one of the best souvenirs of the war. As you see these two officers sent over the note asking to be taken prisoners, and instead of forty there were sixty men. You will notice he has a few French words mixed with the English. "Officier" is the French for

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, JUNE 1, 1917

BETTER THAN EXPECTED.

EVERYBODY BELIEVED that the Bridges Bylaw would carry yesterday, but few hoped that anything like so large a majority would have been recorded. The result is gratifying to all sections of the city, and is the first demonstration of the good work that is being done by the Greater Peterborough Association. It shows that the proper spirit of civic pride exists among the citizens.

The eighty-six unterrified ratepayers who voted against the bylaw no doubt had reasons sufficient to satisfy themselves. In no part of the city was there any sectional jealousy developed, and the light opposition vote was generally distributed. Even in the South ward, where, if anywhere, indifference might be excusable, there were only eleven votes cast against the bylaw. In Ashburnham, where the ratepayers were most directly interested in the outcome, eight votes were cast in the negative. It is not hard to identify these voters, as there are a few men over there who make it a point to oppose every money bylaw submitted to the electors. In Alderman Smith's subdivision one hundred and eighty-four affirmative votes were cast, the highest number reached at any polling booth in the city. The influence of the alderman was felt and his hard work counted.

The large vote cast is easily accounted for. There was an organized effort to get the electors to the polls, and there was a vast amount of hard work done before the day set for voting. One of the most enthusiastic workers for the bylaw in Ashburnham was Rev. Dean McColl, an energetic member of the civic association across the river.

The vote yesterday means a great deal for Peterborough. The two sections of the city will soon be united as they have never been before. The street railway system will be extended in keeping with the city's growth, and Peterborough will soon be able to boast of the largest and best-equipped cereal plant in the world. The effects are likely to be felt at once, and a business stability immediately established. The reconstruction of the mammoth factory will cause a building boom such as any city in Canada seldom sees, especially at a time when that line of industry is practically at a standstill.

UNIFORMS FOR WOMEN.

SOME OF THE LEADING young ladies' seminaries in the United States have decided on an innovation. At the commencement exercises no member of the class of graduates or any one else taking part is to wear a dress costing more than ten dollars. All costumes are to be as nearly as possible exactly alike. This is not only a measure of war-time economy, but has been designed to do away with social distinctions. The gulf between affluence and comparative poverty will be bridged. All the graduates will be practically on the same footing, so far at least as outward appearances are concerned.

In Canada a step is being taken in the same direction. Women engaged in war work are talking of adopting a uniform so that class distinction will disappear.

Men, gathered together on festive occasions, dress alike, and the result is a spirit of comradery that would be otherwise impossible.

The gowned choir is another illustration of the leveling and unifying tendency of uniformity in attire. All choir girls look alike, no matter whether the gown covers shimmering satin or a plain dress of muslin.

In the meantime, the trouble in the pews remains. Public worship is too often a parade of the art of the dressmaker and the milliner, and yet there are those who wonder why the poorer classes appear indifferent in the matter of attending church. The reason may not be far below the surface after all.

HELPING THE FARMER.

THE MEMBERS of the Organisation of Resources Committee are still intent on the work for which they were appointed, and in Toronto yesterday a number of representatives of the agricultural press met at a round table conference to discuss the problems of greater production, especially for next year.

The official report that has been furnished the newspapers states that it was admitted that even under normal weather conditions the food stocks of the world could not be replenished to what they were before the war within three years. The agricultural editors pointed out that the present great need was to engage the sympathy of the farming community, and have it understood that the call for increased production was not inconsistent with the enlistment of men for the army, and that the offer of men and boys from town and cities to assist as far as they could in overcoming the shortage of labor was made with a view to be of real help at this time.

The statement was made that the use of high school boys on farms last year had been reasonably satisfactory, and reports went to show that the response to the appeal by those living in the cities to forego their vacations in order that they might be of service in increasing this year's crop had met with results far beyond the expectations of those interested in the movemenrt.

Now that the sesiousness of the situation is being appreciated on all sides, an earnest effort is being made to apply every facility possible to arrive at a solution. The use of power machinery will form an increasingly important part, and farm tractors are being purchased as fast as the manufacturers can turn them out. What had been tried a few weeks ago in this direction as an experiment was now regarded as marking a substantial step towards meeting one phase of the problem, and reports from some sections of the province indicate that if the farmers can be assured of this help along with the necessary labor during the summer they will devote their energies to sowing other crops and thus swell the aggregate in the fall.

TOO MANY HOTELS.

A MAN GOES INTO the hotel business for the same reason that induces people to enter other lines. His object is to make money. If he fails to accomplish his purpose, it is up to him to do as others do under similar conditions, and close his doors. He should not look for any special inducements that are denied other business men. Hotels are a public necessity, and so for that matter are groceries and barber shops. The stores and shops are in competition with their neighbors, and it is perhaps largely a question of the survival of the fittest. If stores and shops are obliged to close down, the fact proves nothing more than that there are too many of the kind in the community.

It is the same with hotels. When there are in the field more than are required, some are forced to the wall. Supply and demand regulates the hotel business just the same as the principle controls other enterprises.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

AND NOW that it is all over, the only marvel is that there were eighty-six of them.

• • • •

ANTI-CONSCRIPTION or Prussianism, it matters not what you call it, it is always dangerous.

• • • •

THERE ARE eighty-six ratepayers in the city who must feel lonely, not to say foolish, today.

• • • •

WHAT THE NEW Russian republic evidently needs is fewer philosophers and more military leaders.

• • • •

SATAN IS STILL able to find an occasional job for the man who poses as a conscientious objector.

• • • •

MR. ROWELL and Premier Murray refuse to deny that they were offered places in the proposed coalition cabinet, the best possible proof that they were.

• • • •

IF MR. ROWELL is taken into the cabinet, there will be no difficulty in locating him on the conscription issue, in which respect he differs vastly from some of the Liberals at Ottawa.

• • • •

GRAIN USED IN MAKING ALCOHOL

Only a small part of the corn raised is used to manufacture alcohol. The grain used to manufacture beer is so small it should not be considered.

This small percentage of poor grade corn used by the distillers is not wasted, as many persons think. After the corn has passed through the distillers' process it is dried and sold for feed for cattle. This is an expensive feed and a big profit is made from it. Sometimes the cattle (select stock) is fed this corn in a liquid form and it brings top price for this kind of cattle on the market. This corn is also used for making bread by the poor class of people in Europe and sometimes in this country.

Alcohol is needed for the manufacture of smokeless powder, paints, varnish and hundreds of other things, to say nothing about its medical use. Fusel oil is needed for our navy to set off high explosives and for other manufacturing purposes.

To stop the manufacturing of alcohol would mean a loss of millions to the government and the farmer, who gets a high price for his corn. The poorest grain of corn is used to make alcohol, and salvage grain is used when it can be bought, which can be used for nothing else, such as grain that was damaged by water. Like other crops for which he can't get a high price, the farmer would not bring this poor grade of corn to the market.

The working conditions around the places where alcohol is manufactured involve a twelve hour day, small wages, and bad accommodation for the men. The distiller, considering the amount of capital invested and the large profits, is the worst business man to work for.

HOW PERCIVAL FOOLED MAMMA

"That," declared Mrs. Stiffun, exhibiting a portrait to her friends, "is old Fightin' George Gray, my grandfather, who was in the war of 1812. He raised and financed his own regiment. They called him 'Fightin' George' because he was always in the thick of it."

"Has Percival enlisted yet?" asked one of the guests.

"No," responded Mrs. Stiffun, proudly. "Percival hasn't enlisted yet, and you know I am so worried about him. They are liable to draft him as a comomn soldier."

The friends shivered.

"I tried to get him in the engineering department and Percy went over to take the examination, but failed to pass, and I think that's awfully funny, because he has done a great deal of marching. He marched in kindergarten and at dancing school and he marched in several parades and participated in the grand march at balls innumerable times and I know he participated in lots of drills. Besides, he went to college and took moral science and ethics and things like that, and I thought they wanted college men. But they told him he didn't pass a satisfactory examination!"

"There must have been some mistake about it!" suggested one of the friends.

"I think they need men for the battery," suggested a third.

"Oh, horrors!" crief Mrs. Stiffun, shudderingly. "I wouldn't let Percival go into the battery for anything. It's so dangerous!" And the poor dear lady started to begin to think about fainting.

"Perhaps," soothed one of the friends as she proffered smelling salts from a very handsome smelling salts bottle, "we could get him into the commissary department."

All the ladies were actively agreeing when a slim youth walked into the room threw his hat on the sofa and announced with enthusiasm: "I've joined the aviation corps."

Then Mrs. Stiffun did faint, sure enough, and Old Fightin' George looked fightin'er than ever, though not so sad, perhaps.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review:—

Now that we have disposed of the Bridge Bylaw, what are we going to do regarding technical education to fit the future ratepayers to fairly compete in the task of earning the money to pay for the bridge, as well as for many other improvements which the city requires.

This city needs, perhaps more than anything else, a thoroughly equipped technical plant, so that over seventy-five per cent of our boys and girls shall cease to drift into occupations for which they were never intended, and in which their earning power will always be of an inferior order.

Yours truly,

V. EASTWOOD.

Editor Review: I am directed to inform you that by recent Order-in-Council, returned soldiers who have served overseas, and who have been honorably discharged, have been granted prior right to re-entry over the general public for a period of one day on the event of lands becoming available for settlement, after the same have been advertised and posted.

It has recently been represented that a considerable length of time sometimes elapses after a soldier has been before a medical board before he obtains his formal certificate of discharge, and during this period of time he may miss an opportunity of entering for homestead.

It is pointed out that a temporary discharge certificate may be issued to a returned soldier who is to be discharged and who desires to make an entry for a homestead, and avail himself of the privileges of the Order-in-Council in question.

A returned soldier for the purposes of this legislation, is defined as a "soldier who has served overseas during the present war with the military or naval forces of Great Britain, or with any of the allies of Great Britain, and who has been honorably discharged."

Temporary certificate issued in in these cases should give sufficient details to positively identify the applicant.

A certificate may be issued by the general officer commanding this district, or by the officer commanding, military hospital commission command.

Wit and Wisdom

"How's the family?" a fond parent was asked.

"Well, my children are at a difficult age now."

"Difficult? Why, they've all passed the measles and teething age, have they not?"

"Long ago! But you don't know a father's troubles. My children are all at the age where, if I use slang, my wife says I'm setting a bad example, and if I speak correctly the youngsters think I'm a back number. Which would you do?"

"The woman of today is a most practical and resourceful creature," said the man who has known a few.

"What makes you think so?" a friend asked.

"The unsentimental attitude of a girl I know. I told her that she had inspired some of my best poems. She didn't say a word about the poems, but she wrote to my publishers for a percentage of the royalties."

of his determination to enlist. Perhaps he may think again before he does it, but for the sake of the boxing game it is hoped his handlers will not be so ill-advised as to urge him to reconsider. Leonard's enlistment at this time would bolster up the boxing game as nothing else could, especially in New York where the game is seemingly in an extremely precarious position. Leonard's enlistment would prove what he has often asserted, that all he was waiting for was to enlist as a champion.

Leonard's victory over Welsh is seen in this part of the country as a tonic to the game. Perhaps Leonard will not be more inclined to take many more chances with his title than was Welsh, but this seems unlikely. Benny is younger, more vigorous and more confident than Welsh has been in the last two years. His sublime confidence in himself will cause him to avoid the cautions in matchmaking and boxing which enabled Welsh to retain his title over so long a period, and he is likely to give all comers a chance at the title.

May Box Behind Trenches

If Leonard enlists, as is expected, the next lightweight championship bout may be decided somewhere behind the firing line, and instead of battling for big purses the contenders may be battling for mere exercise. England's boxing championships are in an extremely chaotic condition at present owing to the number of championship contenders who have been killed in battle, but boxing in England is stronger than ever before, for the game is one of the principal relaxations of the men in the armies in France. Half a dozen bouts have been fought behind the trenches which in peace times would have drawn thousand of pounds at the National Sporting Club of London

RACES SHUT OFF

Officials Declare Ban On Sport At Newmarket

The seeming extreme to which the English Government is going in the matter of curtailment of racing is giving more than the usual concern to followers of the sport and the breeding industry, in view of the opposite action of the allies and enemies alike, who are doing all they can to continue the industry, which, it is agreed, must be furthered through the medium of the race-course test.

The last declaration of the English government is that all racing tests must be declared off, which shuts off the possibility of the holding of the scheduled Newmarket meetings.

In contradistinction to this action the French, Italian, Russian, and Russian Governments are doing all they can to forward the breeding interests by the continuance of racing tests and the award of special prizes for various types of the horse, mounts. Germany, also, has never lost sight of the main chance of race meets and maintaining breeding studs. All of which are contributed toward the upkeep of the army in its needs for horses.

The most recent decision is in line with the declaring off of the principal stake events of the year, several of which have been classics in England since the latter part of the eighteenth century.

FEEDING YOUNG CHICKENS

First Stage of Existence Needs Warmth and Rest

A mistake that even a great many experienced poultrymen make, is the feeding of the chicks too soon. When the chick leaves the shell it comes into the world with a sufficient supply of nourishment, in the form of the egg yolk, to last it for several days. Therefore, what a chick requires at that stage of its existence is not feed, but warmth and rest. It is not wise to be dogmatic about feeding, as, given strong, healthy chicks many systems will prove successful, but the following may be used as a guide. When the chicks are removed to their brooding quarters there should be some coarse sand or fine chick grit scattered where they can have free access to it. They should then be left until they show positive signs of hunger, which would be between two and three days after hatching. They may then be given some bread crumbs that have been very slightly moistened with milk; this may be scattered on clean sand or chick grit. If being brooded by a hen she will see that no food is allowed to lie around, but if in a brooder, feed which the chicks do not pick up in a few minutes should be removed, as nothing in feeding causes so much trouble as leaving food of that nature around until it is sour. The chicks should be fed five times a day. The following system may be adopted or altered to suit conditions: First feed, bread crumbs moistened with milk; second, finely cracked mixed grains; third, rolled oats; fourth, moistened bread crumbs; fifth, finely cracked grains. If too early to get the chicks out onto the grass at once, green food should be supplied in the form of young lettuce, sprouted grains, or any other tender succulent food that is acceptable. After the chicks are ten days to two weeks old, coarser foods may be allowed; all changes should be made gradually.

Many a man who has an exalted opinion of himself is a poor judge of human nature.

In England, 2,000 women are employed by the admiralty in the central office when no women were working before the war.

The Guelph women's citizens' league has been formed to study federal and provincial politics, with a view to intelligent voting without getting information from stereotyped sources of political knowledge.

DRESS AS AN ASSET TO AMBITIOUS COUPLE

Dowdiness and Brains Should Not go Together—Extravagant Men Chastised

Elizabeth S. Chesser, M.D., writes: Extravagance and love of dress are generally considered purely feminine characteristics. Love of dress has been held responsible for much of the evil women are supposed to have wrought since the mother of us all first arrayed herself in leafy garments in the Garden of Eden. The modern bachelor shuns matrimony because he hears so much about the modern girl's extravagance. He spends twice the sum he would provide for his wife's dress in masculine knickknacks and odds and ends; but nobody dreams of accusing him of self love and extravagance. Because women's extravagance is a magnificent excuse for irresponsible bachelors, an unanswerable argument for close fisted husbands, it has provided a stick for the chastisement of our long-suffering sex for centuries, and it is a myth that will survive as long as the human race itself.

Love of Dress Desirable

Let it be granted that most women are fond of dress. There are women who do not care in the least for clothes; in nine cases out of ten they are dowds or slovens. They lack something; they are like the women who openly boast that they dislike children. Love of dress, provided it is not an obsession, is a desirable quality in all women. When it leads to extravagance and waste, it is regrettable, like any other virtue carried to excess. But life must lose something of its savor to those unnatural women uninterested in chiffons.

There is a popular fallacy in existence that the dowdy woman is more economical than the smart, well dressed girl. But ugly clothes cost just as much as pretty ones, as many a poor young man finds out after marriage, when he has to pay for them. The woman who takes an intelligent interest in dress knows how to get the best results for the least expenditure. An eye for color, the knowledge of how to dress according to one's own style, the instinct of suitability in dress, are valuable attributes to all women whose circumstances compel them to dress well on a small allowance.

Dress Helps Husband

Men acknowledge that a smartly dressed wife is a help in many cases to the struggling professional man, to the business man who makes a bid for social and commercial success. Only the very rich can afford to disregard the importance of appearances; but it is an expensive matter for a woman to look well dressed if she has no love of clothes. It means expensive shops; it means paying well to get somebody else's taste in dress. The woman who genuinely loves pretty frocks, who has the artistic feeling for chiffons, studies her subject, and does not suffer so much from the tyranny of fashions. She has individuality and initiative where dress is concerned. She can get her "money's worth" when she goes shopping.

LOUIS LAPOINTE DEAD.

Shot by a Guard Because of Refusal to Show Pass.

BELLEVILLE, June 1. — Louis Lapointe, the employe of the British Chemical Works at Trenton who was shot in the head by a guard on Tuesday because, it is said, he repeatedly refused to show his pass, has died of his injuries, and an inquest has been ordered to take place in that town.

COURT REFUSES TO TAKE CHILD FROM THE FARM

SIR WM. MEREDITH ALLOWS FOSTER PARENTS TO KEEP BOY.

Peterborough Children's Aid Society were much interested in the judgment of the Appellate Court in Toronto yesterday as it had to do with a child made a ward of the society by Police Magistrate Dumble.

The following is the report:

"Do you think in these times that we are going to take a boy off the farm?" asked Mr. Meredith, in the Appellate Court this morning, when Mr. O'Connor, of Peterborough, made application on behalf of the father to have Harold Butcher restored to the home of his parents. At present the boy is living at the home of Albert Moody on a farm near Minden.

"Must wartime overrule parental control?" asked the lawyer.

"The father has not paid any attention to the child in seven years," stated his Lordship, "and there is an absence of showing what the parents propose doing for the child. If the child wishes to stay where he is, why should the court interfere? I have not any sympathy with the father's demand of his rights when he has been indifferent for seven years to the welfare of the child."

The counsel for the applicant argued that a reformation had taken place in the home, and the child would be better off in his own home. The application, however, was dismissed.

SCHOOL PUPILS FINE EXHIBIT OF ART LESSONS

Public School Inspector Mowat is very proud of the Art Exhibit of the pupils of the different schools of the city, which are on exhibition in the old Collegiate Institute building on Murray street. Every grade of the different schools has its display of work, and the gradual development of the idea of the children is well brought out.

Some of the specimens of drawing and water color work are clever and clearly show a natural talent on the part of the artists. It would be very difficult to pick out the leaders in every class, but in all the long line of drawings and water colors the work of Eddie Hall of the Queen Alexandra School, stands out as the clever work of a natural born artist.

The exhibit of the Manual Training Department reflects great credit on the pupils interested in this department. Useful articles, such as shelves, bread boards, bird boxes, etc., are to be seen.

The work of some of the girls interested in the sewing classes is also to be seen, and Mr. Mowat hopes to be able to extend the work of this department.

For the benefit of the parents and others who desire to view this work the exhibit will be open this evening. While at the band concert, take time and see the work of the children and give them every encouragement.

HIGHWAYS BILL IN HOUSE AGAIN

HON. FRANK COCHRANE REINTRODUCES FAMOUS MEASURE.

OTTAWA, June 1.—The introduction by Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, of the Government Highways bill, heretofore a bitterly controversal measure, twice sent back from the Senate with an amendment providing that the moneys voted should be distributed among the Provinces pro rata and left to the Provincial Governments, which have control of roads, to administer, caused a mild sensation, in view of presumably pendng negotiations.

CAPT. BURNHAM STANDS ALONE

A return showing the amounts drawn in pay and separation allowances and expenses by members of the House of Commons while serving as members of the Canadian expeditionary force was laid upon the table in the House of Commons yesterday. In all the long list Capt. Burnham drew neither expenses or maintenance allowance. His pay while in the service totaled $2,111 but this the Captain, as is well known, turned over to the Red Cross as he received it.

MOTHER GIVEN A CHANCE TO KEEP CHILDREN AT SCHOOL

At the police court this morning Truant Officer George Cochrane had the mother of several children up on a charge of not sending her boy to school. The Magistrate pointed the injury she was causing the child and upon making a promise that the boy would be sent to school regularly the case was let stand for two weeks.

WOMAN TRIED TO QUIBBLE AND GETS HEAVY FINE

An Albert street woman was summoned to appear before the Police Magistrate yesterday on a charge of allowing her dog to run at large on Tuesday last and told a very plausible story to the magistrate as to a mistake being made as to the dog being at large, in fact almost convinced the court that it was impossible for her dog to be guilty. Chief Thompson asked for an adjournment till this morning and a witness stated positively that the defendant's dog was at large on Saturday and Monday and chased street cars until after eleven o'clock at night.

The Court, told the woman that it was a dangerous practise to try to fool with the law and imposed a fine of $1.00 and $3.35 costs.

There are other dog owners who will appear in court unless their pets are kept under leash.

S. S. MEN TO TRENTON

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

CAN YOU GUESS RIDDLES?

Some people are very good at guessing. Dr. Fowler never does any of his optical work by guess. he goes by the records shown to him conclusively by his scientific instruments, which tell him exactly the trouble and what to do to correct it. That is why he guarantees all glasses he fits his patrons with to be absolutely satisfactory.

officer; "blessed" means wounded, "medicin" means doctor, etc. I sent over ~~for the~~ bunch and held two of them till all the rest came. I had a conversation with them in French, for they couldn't speak English, and I couldn't speak German. One of the two was a school teacher before the war, and the second was a cartoonist and writer for a paper. He also was a crack footballer, having played against the best English teams in pre-war days. The whole three were of fine physique, but they told me the German army was no good now because the men were either too old or too young, and that we (English) were good. They decided that rather late in the game, didn't they? Believe me, the life is fairly scared out of them. During a comparative lull when shells were dropping fully 100 yards away the two Fritzs were ducking their heads and crouching down, while our boys were as thick as flies on top and quite unconcerned were taking a little rest, for little it was. They certainly havn't got very much back bone left. Here's hoping the rest follow the example of these 60.

Well, sis., I hope you'll have the note framed earliest possible, or keep it away until such time as you can get a frame.

Am feeling fine and enjoying life. Hope you are having as lovely weather as we are here.

FAILURE TO PAY YOUR POLL TAX IS EXPENSIVE

MAGISTRATE REFUSES TO ACCEPT EXCUSES OF DELINQUENTS.

No excuses go with Police Magistrate Dumble when it comes to paying your poll tax. It was made very clear this morning when he fined F. J. Hickey $5.00 for not handing his tax in promptly to the tax collector.

The police have been handed a long list of names of men who have paid no attention to the assessor's notice and unless a prompt payment is made the usual summons to appear in court will be issued and this carries a very heavy penalty with costs in addition.

If you have not paid up do so at once.

CELEBRATING 59th ANNIVERSARY

Canon Loucks, of Kingston, who bears the distinction of being the oldest Anglican clergyman in point of service in the diocese of Ontario, is receiving congratulations on the celebration of the 59th anniversary of his ordination to the ministry. His friends will be glad to know that he is quite well.

WHO WAS IT?

A customer of a certain butcher shop, not many miles from Peterboro, picked up a knife from the counter and handed it to the butcher with a friendly smile. "I don't really want it," he said, "but if you will cut it off, I will take it along with the rest." "Cut what off?" demanded the butcher in blank surprise. "Your hand," was the reply. "You weighed it with the sausages, and I like to get what I pay for."

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Sanol Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

These powders are sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter Street.

	Number of Permits	Value

WAGES RAISED.

The car inspectors employed by the Canadian Pacific Railway from Fort William east have about settled with the management on the question of wages. The present rate is 26 cents an hour. They asked for 35 cents an hour, and it is understood the management have agreed to an increase of six cents an hour, which would mean a scale of [illegible] cents an hour.

LAST CHANCE TO MAKE RETURNS

This is the last day for the returns to be sent to the Provincial Treasurer under the Corporations Act showing the revenues made by the corporations on which the Government can base their tax. The papers required to be filled up have been sent out to all companies and corporations, but some of these have not yet been returned.

The act provides for a penalty of $20 for each day the corporation defaults, and, besides that, the company is liable to pay a tax of double the amount which would be paid if the return was made in time. About $2,000,000 is expected to be collected by the returns of the corporations.

The Otonabee and Peter Robinson Chapters, also the Red Cross Executive were guests of the 57th Chapter to hear Mrs. Clegg speak about the war work the Canadian women are doing in England.

As Mrs. Clegg has spent the last two years in England, she is admirably fitted for the task. Needless to say, her address was very much appreciated and she had many interesting things to tell.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, John Arthur Smith, who departed life on June 1st, 1916:

I mourn for you, dear husband,
But not with outward show,
For the heart that mourns sincerely
Mourns silently and low.

When days are dark, and friends are few,
Dear father, how we long for you.

FAMOUS RACER HERMAN WENGER IS NOW AT KEENE

MR. P. ELMHIRST HAS PURCHASED HALF INTEREST IN FAMOUS SIRE.

Mr. P. Elmhirst of Keene, has purchased, with Mr. T. Hodgson, of Lindsay, the well-known pacing stalion, "Herman Wenger," who has a record of 2.08. The horse is now at the the stable of Mr. Elmhirst at Keene. The Canadian Sportsman in a recent issue says of this purchase: The grandly bred and fast pacing stallion Herman Wenger, 2.08½, was shipped from Buffalo to Lindsay, Ont., last week, Mr. T. Hodgson, of that city, one of the best known supporters of light harness breeders in Canada, having secured him to use in the stud. Herman Wenger is a son of Ed. Custer, 2.10, the handsomest son of Baronmore, 2.14¼, and one of the most successful of the young sires of his age, and his dam was Balpa, 2.09½, dam also of Miss Anita Knight (2), 2.18¼, Printemps, 2.19¼, Bessie Custer, 2.20¼, and Peter Valpa (2), 2.28½, she by Dark Night 2258, son of Alcyone, 2.27. Sadie, the second dam of Herman Wenger was a daughter of Hambletonian Mambrino, 2.21¼. Herman Wenger unites through his sire and dam the two best branches of the Wilkes family, that of Baron Wilkes, 2.18, his paternal grandsire and that of Alcyone, 2.27, his maternal grandsire with a foundation backing made up of the strains of blood coming from Strathmore, Mambrino Patchen, an additional Wilkes strain—through Alcantara—and American Clay. He is a grand looking horse, of extreme speed, game to the core, and in Canada he ought to make the best kind of a cross for well bred mares of any of the good families.

DO TREES HOLD RAIN?

Swiss Experiments Show Value of Forests in Stream Control

Experience has proved that the forest works efficaciously against many dangers resulting from the elements let loose, such as avalanches, falls of stones, erosion, earthslides, inundations. These are facts admitted and indisputable, but how and in what measure does the forest exercise this moderating action upon the destructive power of water. How can it lessen the destruction from inundations? It is in order to attempt an answer to this leading question that the Swiss Federal Station of Forest Research in 1900 installed an observing station in the basin from which two streams of the Bernese Emmental are fed. The geological formation is nasured pudding-stone which decomposes readily.

One of the basins, with an extent of 140 acres, is completely wooded. The other with an area of 175 acres has only a small average of wooded district, about 30 per cent. The forest is composed of spruce and of alder bushes. The measurements of the precipitation, rain and snow, takes place regularly throughout the year. In each of the basins there have been installed three rain gauge stations at diffrent altitudes. At the junction of the two streams with the Hornbach certain apparatus registers automatically every five minutes day and night the volume of the water flowing.

The Research Station has proved that: (1) In case of storms accompanied with heavy rains the maximum outflow in the wooded valley is from 30 to 50 per cent. less than that from the other valley, and there is another beneficial circumstance from the action of the forest, that this maximum flow is produced later in the wooded basin than in the other. (2) In the long periods of drought (the summers of 1904, 1906, 1908 and 1911) the wooded district gave without interruption a flow of water while in the denuded valley the stream dried up and all the springs ceased although at a normal time they have an abundant flow.

BUSY KING EDWARD EXAMPLE OF DEVOTION

Monarch Who Found Work Interesting and Stuck to Duty Until the Last

The serious devotion of King Edward to his work is shown by a story which Lord Redesdale tells in his "Reminiscences." "One night," says his lordship, "I was dining at the club, after King Edward had come to the throne. He knew that I was in London for two or three days alone, so he sent over to ask whether I was at the club, and if so to bid me go across to him. I found him in his private sitting room, and we sat smoking and talking over old times for a couple of hours.

Work at Midnight

Towards midnight he got up and said: 'Now I must bid you good night, for I must set to work'—pointing to a huge pile of familiar red boxes. 'Surely,' I said, 'Your Majesty is not going to tackle all that work to-night.' His answer was: 'Yes, I must. Besides, it is all so interesting'; and then he gave me one of his happy smiles and I left him. So interesting. That was the frame of mind in which he faced his work—he, the man who we are expected to believe could not be brought to attend to business."

Killed With Work

It might almost be said that King Edward killed himself with work. During the closing days of his life, ill as he was, he worked with his accustomed energy at Buckingham Palace, and "on the Wednesday," to quote Lord Redesdale, "when one of the permanent heads of the Civil Service was with him, he was seized with one of those terrible choking fits of coughing. When he got better his visitor ventured to remonstrate with him, and begged him to rest, and even to go to bed, but he ridiculed the idea and said, 'No, I shall not give in; I shall work to the end. Of what use is it to be alive if one cannot work?' That was how he fulfilled his declaration to the Privy Council on his accession, that 'so long as there was breath in his body he would work for the good and amelioration of his people.'"

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

Rats, Dogs, Birds-nests, etc. Form "Dainty" Edibles

From China comes a long list of dainties that would be repugnant to the Western fancy and palate. Birds' nest soup is well known, and so is trepang, the sea slug, in whose capture many Chinese fishermen earn their living. In the streets of Canton there may be seen, exposed for sale to such as care to buy, rats, dogs, crows, piles of the larvæ of bees and moths, and many other edibles of whose origin the Western traveller shuders to think.

Many curious dishes are beloved of the natives of the various republics of South America. The Indians of the Amazon bake and eat snake. Bear meat is enjoyed by those inhabiting the Andes uplands, and has been pronounced excellent by hunters. In the Chilian markets there may be seen heaps of small, immature octopi fated to be made into soup, and also bundles of seaweed, which is stewed and served as a vegetable, and highly esteemed for its valuable tonic and blood cleansing properties.

Like the French, the Chilians eat the legs of large frogs, which may be caught or reared. Prickly sea urchins called by the natives "erizos," are eaten raw, as are also large mussels, called "choros." There are no rabbits indigenous to Chili; but the place of that useful little animal is taken by the common pussy cat, who is frequently made into "cazuela," a native dish, which is something between a soup and a stew. Many a traveller, lunching at some wayside inn of Chili, on inquiring the ingredients of the appetizing dish he has just consumed, has been told, to his horror, "Guto piquante, senor" (savory cat)!

THE PERFECT HOSPITAL

Need Not be Palace, But Must be Very Clean

"The main essential of a hospital," says a well known surgeon, "is that it be so constructed that every room for every patient will at some time of the day get some sunshine. The halls and floors should be as near sound proof as possible, and the doors should be wide enough for a bed to pass through easily. All corners should be rounded, so that the room may be kept perfectly clean and free from dust." These simple specifications do not call for a lavish expenditure of money, and, in the mind of this practical doctor there is no necessity for imposing portals or stately entrance halls.

The palatial modern hotels, some years ago were responsible for the innovation of shifting kitchens from basements to top floors. Now, however, improvements in ventilating methods and kitchen appliances have very largely resulted in the abandonment of this plan, which, from the first, was found oppressive because of elevator expense. In the opinion of the medical man above quoted, all additional cost in locating the kitchen of a hospital at its top instead of at its bottom, is unnecessary.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:—

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

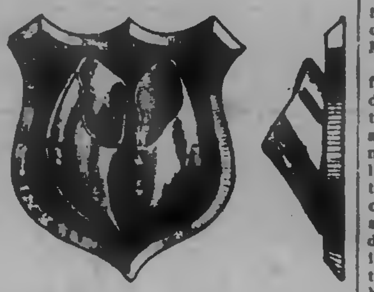
All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

VERY SWEET OF THEM

A Lollipop Manifesto Which Will Please the Children

There is not a child in London who will not endorse a manifesto issued by a body of grown-ups in Manchester, alled the "Confectioners' Association of the United Kingdom." The object of the manifesto is to show, beyond all doubt, that the food value of one pound of lollipops is more than three times greater than, say, one pound of beef. This is made clear by long, learned words to the most obtuse adult intelligence. The Confectioners Association is trying to persuade the Government that it is in the national interest that candy should be treated as a necessary article of food, and that they should not be taxed or restricted.

Ornamental Horn Match Holder



A match holder made of the horn shell of cattle hoofs mounted on a wooden shield, as shown in the sketch, is both ornamental and useful. One of the pockets holds the unused matches and the other the burned ones. The hoofs were cleaned thoroughly and polished and the edge of the shield was beveled off and varnished in the natural color of the wood. The front was lacquered black and also varnished.—Popular Mechanics.

How "Bound Feet" Began

According to Chinese history, the custom of small feet among the females of China originated several centuries back, when a large body of women rose against the Government, and tried to overthrow it. To prevent the recurrence of such an event the use of wooden shoes so small as to disable them from making any effective use of their feet was enforced on all female infants.

PREPARING OPIUM IN LONDON'S FILTHY DENS

How the Deadly Drug is Prepared—Dreams of Blue Butterflies Amid Sordid Quarters

The interior of an actual opium den in London, Eng., is by no means an exhilarating sight. It is smelly and semi-dark. The odor is of the paraffin lamp and the nauseous smell of the burned drug. Frowzy mattresses upon the floor or low couches are about the room, and the light is from lamps covered with oiled paper shades, generally orange or red. The recumbent figures of coolies, lascars, and others look in their death-like sleep as if they were figures of dirty wax that heat had made to run, and the grin of the imbecile is upon the expressionless features of the figures.

Like Black Honey

The Chinaman who prepares the pipe, which in the East End costs fewer shillings than it does pounds in the West, squats down before a spirit lamp upon a little bamboo table, on which are also the pipes and the little dish of opium. The latter is a thick, sticky substance like honey, blackened. The end of a long thin wire is plunged into this filthy mass and a small portion of it taken up and twirled rapidly riund and round until it adheres to the wire in the shape of a ball. This is held in the flame of the spirit lamp and still twirled and twirled while it is roasted, and this is a very necessary and delicate part of the operation and needs the careful watching of the Chinaman.

Then the Pipe!

It is soon done to a turn, and then the opium pipe is picked up and loaded with it. The pipe consists of a long reed stem terminating in a small metal bowl, and the roasted ball of opium is pushed well into the latter. It is enough to last but a little while and may need several renewals before the narcotic state of somnolence and of utter forgetfulness is reached.

The votary takes slow and deliberate whiffs from the pipe, and all energy evaporates by degrees from him, lethargy supervenes, and at last he lies like a log and dreams his dreams—of paradise. It is said by some that one of the most frequent of the dreams is to see clouds upon clouds of brilliant blue butterflies flitting joyously above blue flowers and under a still bluer sky.

"SAFETY FIRST" PIONEER

N. S. Dunlop Introduced Novelties Into Canadian Railroad Life

Mr. N. S. Dunlop, tax and insurance commissioner of the C.P.R., who decided to take a prolonged rest upon the advice of his physician, had been in the service of the company for 29 years. He joined in 1888 at Toronto. The year afterward he was appointed tax and insurance commissioner and claims adjuster. In these capacities Mr. Dunlop did excellent work.

Mr. Dunlop may be said to be the father of Safety First on the Canadian railways; and into this work he threw himself with splendid enthusiasm—doing much to popularize the movement. As far as the outside public is concerned, he is best known as the creator of the floral department of the C.P.R. He began in 1889 to save flower seeds from his own garden; and conceived the idea of spreading the cult of flowers over the system. He was a flower, nature and book lover; and the work was congenial to him. He sent out seeds and bulbs to the agents and others along the system; and soon, from ocean to ocean, the plots in front of hundreds of stations were ablaze with flowers. He gave prizes, and labored in every way to make this feature notable. In this he succeeded abundantly.

Mr. Dunlop is a member of the New York State Stenographic Association, one of the oldest and largest associations of shorthand in the world; but his brochure, "What the Flowers Tell Us," and his work of love in adorning a big railway system with floral beauty, will be Mr. Dunlop's best recognition in connection with his long service with the C.P.R.

When ambition crawls in at the window contentment flies out at the door.

Many a man on the road to fortune doesn't know at what station to get off.

A Quaker's advice to his son on his wedding day: "When thee went a-courting I told thee to keep thy eyes wide open. Now that thee is married, I tell thee to keep them fast shut."

Chipped Beef and Tomato

Peel two solid, ripe tomatoes, cut into small pieces, dust with flour and cook from five to ten minutes in one large tablespoonful of butter. Season with pepper, add one-fourth pound of chipped beef torn into shreds, stir well, cover, let simmer 10 minutes, turn into a heated dish and sprinkle with one teaspoonful of chopped parsley.

Halibut, a la Creole

Four pounds of fish, one cup of water, one pint of stewed tomatoes, one slice of onion, three cloves, two tablespoons of butter, one tablespoon of flour, one teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of pepper. Put the tomatoes, water and cloves and onion on the stove in a stewpan to boil. Mix the butter and flour together, stir them into the sauce.

Fit for the most fastidious

No foreign flavors, no borrowed odors will spoil the success of your cooking. A double flue connection draws off odors from both cooking top and oven.

Black enamel finish, white porcelain enamel trimmings, anti-rust oven coating, are all washable and easily kept dainty and sweet.

KILLING QUACK GRASS

Thorough Tillage is Needed Commencing Right After Haying

All methods of eradicating the troublesome weed, are based on thorough tillage. The implements found on any well equipped farm are sufficient to eradicate quack grass. As the quack roots are found closer to the surface in sod and pasture fields than in cultivated fields, it is often adviseable to utilise a field for pasture or meadow, keeping the grass cut closely or grazed before attempting to kill it. The work should start immediately after haying by ploughing the infested land only deep enough to turn over a furrow containing most of the grass roots. From three to four inches will be deep enough on sod or pasture land. Disk the land thoroughly every ten or twelve days until autumn, when the quack grass will be killed. Plough the land to a good depth the following spring to bury the dead roots which will supply food to the succeeding crop. Plant corn or potatoes and cultivate thoroughly, or sow a smother crop as millet or buckwheat. The process of killing quack grass is not complicated, but one thing must always be borne in mind, the work must be done conscientiously and thoroughly. A half-hearted effort is useless.

WISE POULTRY TALK

Many Hints That Are Always Seasonable and Sound

Health depends much on the care given the fowls. They need close attention daily.

Low vitality should be guarded against by using only strong birds as breeders. Never use a male that is unsound.

If we want chickens with life enough to chase a grasshopper we must avoid inbreeding.

It is difficult to fatten stunted chickens. In feeding market poultry an important point is feeding regularly.

Don't sell all the strong, sturdy birds. The farmer must have that kind to pay him a good profit.

The muslin front house is a necessity for the health of fowls in almost any climate where it doesn't get too cold.

The chicken stunted in growth never becomes what it might have been had the development been continuous.

Perches nailed down tightly are not the right kind if you want to annihilate the frisky hen louse.

GETTING FARM LABOR

Ontario Makes Way Easy From Town to Country

A phase of the labor problem in Ontario is being handled by the Government to secure co-operation between the Labor Bureaux in cities and towns, established by the Department of Labor, and the District Representatives of the Department of Agriculture as a means of meeting to some extent the scarcity of farm help. For years it has been recognised that among the numbers of unskilled laborers in the cities there are men who have drifted in from the farms. In many cases these could be induced to go back to farm work if the opportunity was presented to them. While the Labor Bureaux have not been particularly concerned or sufficiently well posted to deal with this problem under the system now being established the officer in charge of one of these branches will be in close touch with the District Representatives of the Department of Agriculture, with detailed data available he will be in a position to offer an applicant who has had farm experience a choice of positions in the country.

DECLINE IN WHALE FISHING INDUSTRY

Are Whales Becoming Scarce?—Regulation in Killing May Preserve Declining Industry

Whale fishing, like every other industry, has felt the far-reaching economic effects of the war. Glycerine, which is useful in the manufacture of explosives, is obtainable from the oil of the "humpback," "finback" and "sulphur obttom" whales. As Pacific whale oil averages 6 to 10 per cent. of glycerine content, with a maximum 14 per cent., a rise of 10c to 20c per gallon after the outbreak of war gave a very pronounced impetus to whale fishing in Pacific waters.

War Affected Prices

The pursuit of whales for oil and bone has declined very seriously from the high-water mark reached in the middle of last century. While the "right" whale has become so scarce that the price of baleen or "whale bone" has risen from $1,250 per ton in 1835 to about $12,500 to-day, the price of oil, despite the upward trend caused by the war, has seriously declined from the level of former years.

There is a tendency to scout the idea that whales are becoming scarce but the fact that the whalers are going further and further afield demonstrates that the old grounds are becoming depleted. Although whaling is still a flourishing industry in certain quarters of the globe, these enormous profits spell the doom of the whales unless an international agreement can be arrived at to regulate the killing.

Economic Folly

Of course, an increasing scarcity of whales may make the business unprofitable and, as in New England, the majority of the hunters may be driven from the field. Then the whales may get sufficient respite to enable them to re-establish themselves. But, leaving the conservation of natural resources to the blind play of economic forces is both dangerous and unsatisfactory. Not only may it lead to the utter destruction of an irreplaceable resource—as an animal species—but it builds up a huge industry in the boom days—when the principal as well as the interest is being greedily consumed—only to be followed by a wretched decline when large numbers of men lose their livelihood and expensive plants rot through lack of use.

CABINET COUNCILS

How British Affairs of State Are Strictly Guarded

In England Cabinet Councils are conducted in the strict privacy, although very occasionally important officials and other outsiders have attended a meeting for the purpose of giving information or advice on specific matters; while the remarkable step was taken of inviting Sir Robert Borden, as Prime Minister of Canada, to attend one of the meetings while he was in England. Otherwise the most stringent measures are adopted to secure the inviolability of Cabinet proceedings. Trusted janitors keep watch outside to guard against the possibility of eavesdropping, while the very blotting pads are destroyed after each meeting lest they should betray anything that has taken place.

Touching this matter of Cabinet secrets, by the way, Mrs Lloyd-George remarked in a public speech that she, at least, could not disclose any, since her husband never told them to her, but it is well known that other Cabinet Ministers have not always been equally discreet. In this connection it may be recalled that the famous Lady Holland once asked, at one of the Whig consultations at Holland House, why her husband should not be Foreign Secretary. "Why, ma'am," said Lord John Russell, bluntly, "they say you open all Holland's letters." Mr. Gladstone, on the other hand, was of opinion that a Minister need have no secrets from his wife, and how nobly Mrs. Gladstone justified his confidence is well known.

Another aid to the preservation of Cabinet secrets is the system of communication between the members which is adopted. This is effected by the circulation of special despatch boxes, and one of the most important possessions of each Minister is the "key" which unlocks all these boxes. In all memoirs of Ministers will be found constant reference to "sending round a box," groans at the arrival of "piles of boxes" from other departments, and so on. When a Minister wishes to circulate some memorandum among his colleagues for information or comment he does it in this way. Altogether the Cabinet is a very wonderful institution.

Without a conductor the lightning express would thunder along till it struck something.

FAILURE OF POLICY OF LAND GRANTING

Less Than One-third of Granted Prairie Land is Farmed, Says Sir James Aikins

The following is from an address by Sir James Aikins, Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba and President of the Canadian Bar Association, before a joint meeting of credit men, sales managers and commercial travellers at Winnipeg: If the persons who took up homesteads and pre-emptions had been really interested in farming, and qualified to farm, the policy of the Federal Government crystallized forty years ago in the Dominion Lands Act would have shown much better results. Its purpose was to give to actual settlers and their families 160 or 320 acres for residence and continuous cultivation.

Proved by Statistics

Let me give you some figures: As at September 30th, 1916—Tota larea granted in homesteads is 51,012,550 acres. Military homesteads, pre-emptions and purchased homesteads increase this to 62,775,510. The following statement shows estimate of areas under crop in the three prairie provinces in 1916, according to the Census and Statistics Monthly of the Department of Trade and Commerce, July, 1916: Wheat, 10,493,200; oats, 6,283,000; barley, 936,000 and other grains, 487,290; or total acreage, 18,199,490.

In proper farming a portion of the cultivated land should be rested, allow then one-third more for fallow, making a total of 24,265,000. And one-third more of last-mentioned acreage for pasturage, making a total of 32,354,000 acres. Can you estimate the loss to the prairie provinces by reason of the non-use of over thirty millions of acres of the very best land specifically granted to persons for residence and cultivation?

Other Huge Alienations

That is not all of this mistaken policy, for the Crown has alienated other lands: Railways, Hudson's Bay Co., school lands sale, 36,647,996 acres; sales, special and half-breed grants, ',129,066; mining lands sold, 101,701; mounted police, etc., 33,078; or a total of 43,911,841 acres; less H. B. Co. and mining lands, 6,881,691, making a net total of 37,030,150 acres.

The total, without Hudson's Bay Company and mining lands, is 99,805,750 acres; of the estimated arable lands in the three Provinces granted in freehold, only about 32,354,000 acres are used for farming—less than one-third of the granted land.

HOW TO USE PRUNING SHEARS

Double cutter shears used in orchard pruning give good satisfaction when used upon limbs smaller than three inches in diameter. When care is taken to cut through the bark all around the branches to be removed, the wounds heal over much better than when the growing layer of bark and young wood is crushed by being squeezed from opposite sides without being cut around first. One caution is necessary in using this implement.

When making cuts of forking limbs, it is necessary to avoid bearing down because the main branch to be left is likely to split and a heavy load of fruit the following summer is almost sure to break the limb at this point. Effort should always be made to lift when making such cuts. Indeed, it is a good plan always to cut off the branch one foot or so beyond the point where the crotch is, and then to remove the stub with a second cut.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

THE LIFE PRACTICAL.

To skies sublime
Though we may climb
On fancy's aviation
And from the heights
Observe the sights
In placid contemplation,
We hear the call
And downward fall
The ground below to clutter—
The call supreme
For pie and cream
Or common bread and butter.

Enwrapped in art,
We play a part
Alone, serene and chilly
And contemplate
The higher state
And act sublime or silly.
But when it comes
To humble crumbs
To feed our hungry faces
We join the gang,
And, quoting slang,
We get right down to cases.

With fragrant pipe
Where dreams are ripe
We sit around pretending,
But facts are things
Equipped with stings
And we're not made for bending.
We'd like to rest
Among the blest,
Our time to culture giving,
But now and here
It may seem queer
We have to get a living.

What Was That?

Full of faith, hope and ambition, a young woman applied for a position behind the footlights, where she thought the leading part would be about right.

"Ever divorced?" asked the brusque manager.

"No, sir," she replied modestly.

"Had any diamonds stolen?"

"No, and for a good reason."

"What, then, are you qualifications?"

"I can act."

The janitor had to climb a ladder and pick chunks of laughter from the rafters before they could use the stage next day.

Two Splendid Things

One is plenty of open-air exercise.

If you can't get all of that you should, it's all the more important that you should have the other tried-and-true remedy for a torpid liver and bowels that don't act freely and naturally.

Take one pill every night; more only when you're sure it's necessary.

KEEP YOUR FLOWERS.

Bloom May Be Prolonged by Following These Tips.

Some women seem to have a magic way with flowers. They can throw in seed and blooms will spring up. They can wear a corsage bouquet a whole evening and never have it wilt, and, as for cut flowers, they can keep them for weeks, it seems. Some one has said that it is the true flower lover who has such luck, and of course a woman must love flowers to want to have them and keep them, but some times, in spite of the best intentions, they do not know how to give cut flowers long life.

There are several secret methods which flower lovers practice to keep the cut blooms fresh beyond the usual length of time. Every one knows that to cut off a bit of the stems of flowers every day before immersing them in fresh water will prolong their life. Every one does not know, however, that with woody stems it is a good plan to peel or cut away part of the hard bark so that the stem can absorb moisture.

A night bath for sturdy blooms is refreshing. Throw them, flowers and all, into a basin of clean water.

The hot water bath will bring apparently wilted blooms to life. Place the cut stems of the flowers in a jar of steaming hot water and allow them to remain there an hour or so until the water has cooled off. If the flowers are very wilted a lump of camphor in the hot water will sometimes react upon them quicker. Salt water will revive some flowers more quickly than anything else.

A corsage bouquet which cannot be untied can be sprinkled with water and kept in the icebox overnight.

A florist gives the following way of keeping blooming flowers for several weeks: Stick the stalks of the flowers in several inches of damp sand which has been placed in a bowl. Cover them with a glass jar or tumbler and move to a cool place where the sun will not reach them.

Flowers benefit by massage. The Japanese find this a successful way of training blossoms with soft stems in the way they should go.

Never keep flowers in a warm room overnight or in the bedroom either.

Tender Meats.

Quick cooking will not make steak tender; it must be tender in the beginning. But tough meat can be made tender by cooking it very gently in a gravy for an hour or more. By browning it first we give it a good flavor and have seared the surface so that more of the juice will be retained than if raw meat were used. Some scraps of fat are browned and an onion sliced and fried in the fat, a tablespoonful of flour is added, and when it is mixed smoothly with the fat a cupful of water is put in. The meat is put in the gravy and left covered on the back of the stove to cook slowly. Later carrot and turnip cut in cubes are added, and twenty minutes before serving the potatoes are put in. These have been pared, quartered and left in cold water for thirty minutes.

To Mend Holes in Graniteware.

Work a piece of putty until it is soft. Take a piece large enough to cover the hole and put it over both inside and out. Place the utensil in a slow oven and bake until the putty is a deep brown color. The utensil may then be used the same as when new. Even a teakettle may be mended and used as before.

Caustic.

"I am my own boss."

"You are?"

"I certainly am."

"I thought I noticed something lax about your training."

Playing Safe.

A man should always be on guard
To watch his sin besetting,
And when he hasn't got a cinch
He should cut out his betting.

A Boning Process.

Legs and loins of lamb and mutton are the meats ordinarily boned. The butcher will do it, but if it must be done at home wipe the meat and with a sharp knife scrape the meat from the bone, being careful not to cut through the skin.

To bone birds, chickens or turkeys, select undrawn birds, with head and feet left on. Remove pin feathers and singe. Draw tendons from legs by making an incision just below the knee joint, and with a strong skewer draw the tendons out one at a time. Loosen the skin near the feet and cut off the feet. Make an incision through the skin from the neck to the tail the entire length of the backbone. Scrape the flesh from the bones until the shoulder blade is found, then scraping around the wing joint. Scrape down the backbone to the thigh, then around the second joint and leg, cutting tendonous portion when necessary. When one side of backbone is boned, bone the other, then remove flesh from breastbone on either side of bird. When flesh is all separated from bone discard carcass, wipe flesh and skin and arrange in original shape. The birds may be seasoned and broiled or stuffed, sewed into shape and steamed.

Macaroni and Cheese.

Cook macaroni in boiling water until it becomes tender, salted to taste. Drain off water, make a white sauce from butter, flour, milk and seasoning. Add macaroni to white sauce, also grated cheese to taste. Pour into buttered baking pan, cover top with breadcrumbs and bake until crumbs become a golden brown. This makes a delicious dish when served piping hot.

Improvised Ice Chip.

Many people do not know that by taking an ordinary sewing needle they can chip ice from a large cake without breaking the large piece too much. Tap the needle with a thimble or small tack hammer and the ice will break off into small pieces.

A Cheap Dessert.

Take half dozen bananas, slice them into a deep dish, squeeze the juice of half a lemon over them, covering them with water and half cupful of sugar. Stir them with a dessert spoon, place in ice chest one hour before using. They are good without going on ice.

Keep the Machine in Repair.

Think for a moment. A man who would no more run his motorcar on deflated tires or with sand in the gear box than he would use sulphuric acid for motive power will keep going right on at his business when the tread of his own physical mechanism is flattening out and the gear box of his mind is filling with the wrong kind of grit. The impatient optimism that shakes off a vague oppression with the assurance "I'll be all right tomorrow" has had as much to do with lengthening out the list of bankrupts as any other thing that could be named. You can't correct a bad condition by persisting in the things that cause it. You will only make it worse. You can easily enough, if you are obstinate enough, make it so much worse that it will "be the death of you," or, anyway, put you out of business.

Catalogue Your Books.

Have you ever made an alphabetical list of the books in your library?

Why not do it?

Either by title or author, but better by both.

A blank book will answer, but cards are better for the purpose.

It is a great joy to watch the number grow and the only practical way to know just what you have on your own shelves.

Thoreau called books "the treasured wealth of the world," and it were well for us to know at least how much of this treasure we possess.—Exchange.

Why Plates Are Round.

All our plates are circular in shape. Now, a square or oval plate would be just as convenient. Is there any reason why plates should be of their present shape? It seems that if we dip into the far past we may discover the cause. Our remote ancestors ate their food off flat pieces of wood cut from a tree trunk. The tree trunk being cylindrical in shape, the earliest plates were therefore roughly circular, and the shape has been used ever since.

Cautious.

"You never kissed a girl in your life?"

"Never!"

"You don't know what you are missing."

"Yes, I do."

"What?"

"Microbes."

Easy.

"He has resisted every temptation so far."

"My! He must be strong."

"Not necessarily."

"Why not?"

"His special brand hasn't happened along."

ULTRA MILLINERY.

How the Chinese Idea Is Coloring the New Headgear.

This season seems to have brought with it two very different and distinct styles of hats, one in the usual colors and the other a strong Chinese note which dominates everything and produces most weird but wonderful effects.

In the first class there is a hat somewhat small in shape, with round, high crown and narrow brim turned down. This hat is entirely of soft peach colored crape. Directly in the front are two round, flat ornaments meant to represents flowers. One is of crape and the other of satin. Both are pink, but one is slightly deeper in color than the satin one.

On either side of the flowers are leaves made of twisted loops of panne velvet, held in place with tiny invisible stitches. It is a very sweet and dainty hat and one which any home milliner can copy, for the flat flowers are made exactly like flat cardboard pincushions covered with satin or velvet, only it would be better to substitute buckram for cardboard.

After the circles are covered with the material buttonhole stitch around the edge with heavy silk of the same color, making the stitches a quarter of an inch long and the same distance apart.

The wonderful silks used to trim these hats are often dull in color, with here and there a truly oriental design embroidered or printed in the most blazing colors.

A hat will have a crown covered with silk as described and a plain upper brim and the under brim of some soft color near the face and an all over silk pattern near the edge, three entirely different materials—different in texture, design and color—all on one hat, yet in perfect harmony of color.

The conservative woman may not look upon these hats with favor, but sooner or later, being a woman, she will succumb to the charm of these wonderful oriental effects, which are chiefly Chinese in character.

Tassels still demand attention, even on hats. A hat of dull blue straw trimmed with black silk, with here and there a blue, green and gold motif, had a long tassel extending from the center of the crown down over the brim. This tassel was fastened to an odd cord affair partly made of ribbon and partly of straw. It started from the center of a stiff little upright ruffle of black ribbon on the crown, and near the end where the black and gold tassel was attached was an odd tricolored carved bead.

CORRECT FOR SPRING.

The Kind of Useful Suit Every Maiden Needs.

Black and tan wool checkerboard plaids make this modish suit cut finger tip length coat, sash belt and closely plaited skirt. Black buttons close it, and a black velvet collar adds chic. The hat is a black chip trimmed with tan ribbon.

THE TRIM ONE.

Capes of Marabou.

Marabou capes similar to the fur capes of the winter will be worn this spring. They are admirable as accompaniments of the modish straight little one piece frocks. These capes are of white or brown marabou in various styles, and they reach to the hips. There will also be smaller models fashioned in two tones. For instance, there may be a collar and yoke of white marabou finished with a deep border of white feathers striped with gray, or perhaps there will be little tufts of snowy ostrich on a marabou foundation.

Black and white speckled feathers make an effective edging to a plain white boa, the ends of which have enormous tassels of feathers.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Everybody is loyal—to No. 1.

We no sooner get our clutches upon a dollar than we begin to worry how we would best let it go.

Heaven seems a faraway place when the liver isn't working right.

Being honest is hard work under most circumstances. Added to that is the indubitable fact that it is poor pay.

The people who are easily fooled aren't really worth the trouble.

Don't worry about the goodness of other people. It is quite sufficient to see that your own is up to test.

Most men are pessimists before breakfast.

The fellow who hasn't the courage of his convictions never gets into the game worth a cent.

The man who is always on the level seldom finds himself up in the air.

We are poor not because we have never made very much, but because the other fellow was more clever.

The best way to explain to some people is to knock them down first and tell them why before they get up.

CLEANING SHADES

To clean light colored window shades and make them almost like new again take them carefully from the rollers and stretch at full length on the table, pinning them taut with thumbtacks. Then with a pad of coarse white flannel dipped in finely sifted starch treat the shades on both sides to a vigorous dry scrub. Change the pads as frequently as necesary. After a final rubbing with the starch, replace the shades on the rollers and put aside for twenty-four hours. Then give another good rubbing with a clean piece of flannel and your shades are ready to be rehung.

STORING FURS AND WOOLENS

Now is the time to lay away all woolens, furs and similar articles which must be stored during the summer.

Even if we have not seen our friend the moth flying about the larva from which he came may be at work boring into our furs or some of our woolen materials.

The time when the moth does most damage is not when we see him flying around—then it is too late—the mischief has been done by the biting of the little larva or worm from which he came. Therefore we cannot be too early in preventing the damage of this little insect.

The first thing to do in laying clothes away is to see that they are perfectly clean. Everything woolen, like bathrobes, blankets and underwear, should be brushed with a whisk broom, if they cannot be washed first, and exposed to the sun and air.

If the garment cannot be washed in water and we do not care to send it to the cleaner it should never be laid away dirty with spots of grease and food, because these are just the things that will attract the moth worm first.

The little spot on the lapel of the overcoat, the slight dirt on the shield of a child's flannel suit, these are the places that Mr. Moth Worm goes for first. Materials which are not thoroughly washable in water should be given a bath in gasoline and thoroughly aired.

Dresses trimmed with fur should never be laid away with the fur on them, but have the fur ripped off, cleaned in gasoline, brushed and placed in separate packages. In fact, all fur must be thoroughly cleaned, brushed and aired before being laid away.

Now as to the actual packing of various garments: Moth balls and camphor paper have been used for a long time and are still used, but we have modifications of these now in the tar paper bag and camphor bag, which are more efficient in many ways.

We have now especially prepared bags of different sizes which are fitted with a coat hanger inside and which fasten on the outside with metal pieces which make them absolutely insect proof. Moreover, the garment is allowed to keep its shape which is a great advantage.

These bags come in variods sizes; some are very small, for children's coats and sweaters, others half length and others even full length, for evening dresses or for overcoats.

Instead of loose camphor balls or camphor dust we have a new holder which will contain a dozen moth balls. It is simply a thin piece of tin and so perforated at the end that the odor from the balls is present, but we do not have any of the disagreeable consequences of having separate broken balls mixed up with the clothing.

Mock Chop Suey—Slice one onion in a frying pan of iron if possible, with two tablespoons of butter, half a pound of hamburg steak, and fry brown. Add a quarter of a cup of rice, the same of spaghetti, and two cups of tomatoes. Simmer three-quarters of an hour, add a teaspoon of salt, quarter of a teaspoon of pepper, and a pinch of curry powder, and serve. bread crumbs in two cups of hot

Bread Pudding—Soak a cup of milk, when moist add two tablespoons of sugar, one of butter, one egg, and a teaspoon of vanilla. Bake in a slow oven three-quarters of an hour.

Dinner.

Mustard Sauce—Brown half a tablespoon of butter and the same of flour. Add a quarter of a cup of hot water, teaspoon of dry mustard, a tablespoon of lemon juice and cook until thick, stirring all the two tablespoons of cream, and chill time. Remove from fire, beat in well.

Baked Stuffed Potatoes—Bake until done, then break apart, remove the insides, mash and butter, pepper and salt and return to the skins; set in the oven to brown.

Apple Tapioca—Cover a cup of tapioca with cold water and soak overnight. Put half of it with half a cup of sugar, in a buttered pudding dish and add a quart of sliced apples. Then add the other half, with half a cup more of granulated sugar. Cover with water to half an inch over the top of the pudding. Bake slowly until clear.

DROP GINGER CAKES.

One cup molasses, one cup sugar, one cup butter or other shortening, one cup boiling water, one teaspoon soda sifted with five cups flour, one teaspoon cinnamon. Drop from spoon in well greased tins, and bake in a moderate oven.

CARAMEL THAT KEEPS.

Put one pint of granulated sugar into a clean saucepan, set it on the back of the range and stir gently until it browns. Pour into it slowly half a pint of boiling water, and when dissolved put it into a jar for future use. It keeps indefinitely. It is nice served as a sauce with custards, apple dumplings, and so on.

HONEY BRAN COOKIES.

Mix one-half cupful sugar, one-quarter teaspoonful cinnamon, one-quarter teaspoonful ginger, and one-half cupful milk, and one half cupfuls bran, one-half cupful honey, half teaspoonful soda with three cupful melted butter. Drop from a spoon on a buttered pan, and bake fifteen minutes.

HOW TO MAKE CLOTTED CREAM

Put some new milk into a large pan and let it stand for 12 hours, or rather less if the weather is warm, then place pan on side of range and let the milk heat slowly. It should be made quite hot, but on no account allowed to boil. The more slowly it is heated the better. I leave mine sometimes for two hours. When sufficiently scalded remove vessel carefully to a cool place and leave until the following day. Then skim off the cream ready for use. It is delicious with strawberries.

RICE GRIDDLECAKES

One cupful of cooked rice, 1½ cupfuls of hot milk, ¼ cupful of flour, 2 tablespoonfuls of fat, 2 eggs, ½ teaspoonful of salt, 3½ teaspoonfuls of baking powder.

Add the hot milk to the rice, then the fat, flour, salt and baking powder. Beat the eggs until well blended and light and add to the mixture. Mix thoroughly and drop at once on a hot griddle. Serve hot with maple syrup, marmalade or honey.

LABOR TO MAKE UNITED DEMAND

GENERAL ELECTION MAY BE AVOIDED BY NEGOTIATIONS NOW ON BETWEEN LEADERS

Liberals May Name Half the Members of Proposed Coalition Cabinet These to be Selected by Sir Wilfrid---Nothing Definite Until Monday.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, June 2.—The possibility of a general election has been thrust into the background, at least for a day or two, by fresh negotiations now proceeding. In some quarters it is said that the Prime Minister has put forward suggestions that the Liberal representation in the coalition cabinet would be fifty per cent. of its strength, the Liberal members to be selected by Sir Wilfrid. The date when something specific may develop is now set for Monday, when it is thought the result of the feelers sent out by Sir Robert and Sir Wilfrid should become apparent.

If these negotiations go through it is altogether likely that Sir Wilfrid will nominate members of his own immediate following and that Premiers Gouin and Murray and Mr. Rowell will be left out of it.

HUNTER STREET BRIDGE ONE OF LOCAL LANDMARKS

Has Been in Use for Forty-Two Years---Built in 1872, Collapsed Three Years Later---Replaced in 1875.

The bridge at Hunter street that was relegated in effect to the discard by the votes of ratepayers Thursday is one of the historical landmarks in the city. It has been a faithful servant of the public for the past forty-two years, but like many another institution has outlived its usefulness and must make way for a modern improvement.

There was a structure, called by courtesy a bridge, across the Otonabee at Hunter street, ever since the community reached the stage of progress that was no longer satisfied with a ferry service. This was destroyed by fire on the night of July 2, 1871, the residents of the town being unable to do anything to save it. The members of the town council met at once to take steps to rebuild the structure and on November 3 of that year the decision was reached. The town offered to pay one half, the county to meet the rest of the expense and the former generously offered to supply the total at once and give the county all the time required to raise its share of the outlay. The councillors from the county, however, declared that they could do their part at once and the contract for the bridge was accordingly let to White and Davis.

The work was begun at once and completed one year later. On March 19, 1872, the councils of town and county accepted the bridge from the contractors. Everything went well until January 12, 1875, when the east span of the bridge collapsed and communication was again cut off.

In September of that year the two councils decided to repair the bridge and the contract for the work was let to the Canton Bridge Company of Canton, Ohio, the price agreed upon being $8000. Mr. William Toole was mayor of Peterborough at that time and Mr. James Edwards was clerk. The iron work was brought from the United States and when it reached the local customs house it was listed at $3000. Mr. Charles Perry, who was collector at the time, refused to settle the duty on this valuation and the result was a delay in the work until the question of duty was settled.

The bridge as it now stands was finally accepted by the town and county councils on October 13, 1875. The two bodies met and submitted the bridge to a severe test so as to prevent the recurrence of the previous disaster. Nine loads of lumber and one of flour, the total weight of which was forty tons, were driven across the bridge which stood the strain without a creak.

There has been an agitation for a high level bridge ever since the annexation of Ashburnham in 1904. The matter has been brought up at every municipal election. When the villagers voted to become part of the city it was on the understanding that such a bridge would be built and the street car line extended to Ashburnham, although there was no written agreement to that effect.

In 1906 the matter was brought up in the council at the first regular meeting after the election at which it was the leading issue. The city engineer was instructed to prepare an estimate of the probable cost but that is as far as the proposition ever reached. The advocates of a high level bridge in those days contended that the cost of such a structure would not exceed $60,000.

Labor Insists on Eight Hour Day in Munition Plants

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, June 2.—Conference of Labor leaders being held here decided to-day to take definite action in regard to certain allegations which the delegates have lodged against the Imperial Munitions Board by forwarding to local unions and other labor organizations a request that endorsation be given to the demand for reorganization of Board on the basis of equal representation of labor with the employing interests. Unions are asked that endorsation be forwarded by them to Premier Borden and to Federal members representing the constituency in which they happen to be located.

The unions will be supplied with a list of eight specific complaints that the conference has decided can be lodged against the Imperial Munitions Board. Summarized, they deal with the board's alleged hostile attitude to organized labor, violation of sanitary requirements, and negligence of protection of the health of employes in camps and plant constructions, wage lowering, the elimination of the eight-hour work day, and the introduction of 10, 12, and 14 hour days, and seven days per week, the unnecessary dilution of labor by women, non-maintenance of the wage standards for male and female labor, the substitution of cheap semi-skilled labor from rural districts for construction work, refusal to recognize trades union re-

Capt. Burnham's Offer

The following letter refers to Capt. Burnham's offer to serve in any military capacity, abroad or in Canada, without pay. Although paid up to the time of his return to Canada, it is well known that his pay went to the Red Cross, aids to soldiers, and other means of assisting those whose dependents were left behind, as well as in endeavoring to further the interests of the Canadian soldiers in England, all of which he promised in a letter to the press when he accepted his position in the battalion in December, 1915:

Headquarters, Military District No. 3.
Kingston, Ontario, May 30, 1917.

My dear Captain Burnham:

I have your letter of the 25th inst., and thank you for your kind offer. As soon as anything crops up you will be notified.

Sincerely yours,
T. D. R. HEMMING.

ENEMY FORCE ON WESTERN FRONT IS EXHAUSTED

Thirty-three Divisions Have Been Withdraw in Order to Rest.

BATTALIONS ARE REDUCED

Not More Than a Million Men Now Ready for Duty in France.

(By Stewart Lyon.)

Canadian Headquarters in France, June 2. — Germans on this part of the front are keenly on the alert, and at night on the slightest sign of an unusual movement they turn on a heavy barrage. Early this morning one of their S. O. S. signals set the whole front in an uproar, barrages coming from both sides. The enemy's experiences early Friday morning probably have made him more nervous.

Several hundred gas drums about the size and shape of a six-inch water pipe and four feet in length were throw by mortars into his trenches at La Coulotte.

The effect is not known, but the gas was still visible in the German lines at daybreak. Gas is much heavier than air, and wherever the drums burst the gas would seek the lowest available levels, such as the bottoms of trenches or deep dugouts.

Another form of warfare which efficiently increases is the use of bombs discharged from aeroplanes. A squadron of fifteen airplanes visited points on the German railway system east of Lens and dropped one bomb of two hundred and thirty pounds and twenty of one hundred and twelve pounds. The effect was reported as most satisfactory.

The technical difficulty of dropping a bomb weighing over two hundred weight from an airplane is great because of the disposition of aircraft to get out of control at the moment of release. The explosion also of a bomb so large causes disturbances in the air, which has an effect on airplanes. In this case, however, all the machines returned safely.

At the end of the month a calculation of the enemy's wastage is now available. On the Western front, the German army consists of 157½ divisions, of which 107½ are holding the line, with fifty in reserve. Of the latter, 33 divisions are the exhausted troops withdrawn from the front after a period of service there. More than half of the divisions at the front are probably tired and in need of rest.

After the heavy fighting of the past two months on the various parts of the line, more than thirty divisions were withdrawn from the German facing the British front. This wastage is greater than had been hoped for when the campaign opened. It must be remembered that the German divisions are now reduced in numbers, few battalions having more than seven hundred

French Submarine Sinks Enemy Sub. That Was Escorted by Torpedo Boat and Escapes Attack by Airplanes---Artillery Active on Western Front.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 2.—Official statement: "The enemy's artillery was active during the night against our positions in the neighborhood of Bullecourt and Vimy Village. There is nothing further of special interest."

"An airplane attack was made upon the enemy airdrome at St. Denis yesterday morning," says the official announcement of the raid, "and last night naval airplanes and seaplanes attacked the German bases at Zeebrugge, Ostend and Bruges, dropping several tons of explosives."

ENEMY SUB SUNK.

ROME, June 2.—The French submarine, Circe, has torpedoed and sunk a large enemy submarine as it was coming out from Cattaro escorted by a torpedo boat. Although attacced by airplanes the Circe returned undamaged.

WITH THE FRENCH.

PARIS, June 2.—"On the Chemin Des Dames there was active artillery fighting in the sectors of Hurtebise, Craonne and Chevreux. Feeble German attacks at various points particularly northwest of the Froidmont farm, west of Cerny and against a small post which we captured yesterday south of Chevreux, were repulsed easily.

In the region of the Heights of the Meuse we made a surprise attack east of La Fieveters and southeast of Damloup and brought back prisoners. Elsewhere the night was comparatively quiet.

ROUMANIAN ARMY READY.

JASSY, ROUMANIA, June 2.—Roumania's national feast was celebrated with enthusiasm behind the front. Visitors to various districts where the new army has been reorganized, and were astonished at the quick recovery of the much tried troops. The units visited were those placed under the severest ordeal in the autumn campaign, and since exposed to pestilences during the winter. It would be almost impossible to guess they were the same troops. They are longing to be sent as soon as possible to the front. The enemy will have to face a new army adequately equipped and seasoned, and imbued with deep hatred for the invaders of their homes.

BERLIN'S STATEMENT.

BERLIN, June 2.—French positions over a front of about one thousand yards northeast of Soisson were captured by the Germans in a surprise attack yesterday, the war office announces. The Portuguese soldiers were taken prisoners by Germans on the western front, according to an official statement.

KAISER CLAIMS ALLIES DRIVE IS A FAILURE

Hindenburg Assures Him the German Forces Have Nothing More to Fear.

THANKS GOD FOR HELP.

Sends Congratulations to Austrians for Holding Out Against Italians.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, June 2.—The French and British offensive on the western front has come to a definite conclusion according to a report from Von Hindenburg to Emperor William. The official announcement is made that the Emperor has sent the following telegram to the Empress at Hamburg Castle. "According to report from Von Hindenburg the great British and French spring offensive has come to a certain conclusion. Prepared since autumn and announced since winter the attacks of the British and French armies supported by powerful masses of artillery and technical resources of all kinds has failed after seven weeks of hard struggle. God's aid has granted our incomparable troops superhuman force to accomplish these excellent acts and endure successfully the mightiest battles ever seen in the history of the war. All our heroes by their deeds command the respect and gratitude which every German feels. The Lord be praised. Glory for His help and thanks for such magnificent people in arms."

The Kaiser also has sent a telegram of congratulations to Emperor Charles on the Austrian resistance to the Italian attack on the Isonzo front. He says "In a tenacious struggle the Isonzo army defied the mighty and stubborn enemy and caused him to fall. I congratulate you and your brave troops on this great success. God will be with us further."

MORNING FIRE AT THE C.G.E. CO GIVES TROUBLE

TRANSFORMER DEPT. DAMAGED TO EXTENT OF ABOUT $10,000.

The residents of the South end were roused out of their sleep about four o'clock this morning by the tooting of the whistle of the Canadian General Electric Co. Soon after the fire alarm told of a fire being in progress at the works.

The blaze was found to be in the transformer department and the damage done amounts to about from $7,000 to $10,000.

Just what caused the fire is not known.

The Fire Department made a quick response to the alarm and soon had the fire under control.

Y.M.C.A. DIRECTORS HEAR VIEWS OF TORONTO MAN

Secretary Hopkins Tells Them Work Among the Boys is Needed Now as Never Before to Fit Them for Life's Duties

The third of a series of conferences between the Y.M.C.A. Board of Directors and other friends of the Y.M.C.A. was held last evening. As far as progress was concerned, this third conference seemed in advance of any of the previous ones. The gathering was favored with the presence of Captain H. A. Pearson, a former Peterborough man who spent two years in France in connection with Y.M.C.A. work for soldiers, also Mr. J. W. Hopkins, secretary of the Central Department of the Toronto Y.M.C.A. Both of these men were called upon to address the gathering and their words were most inspiring. Captain Pearson reminded the men of the fact that Canada's best young men have laid down their lives at the front and that the real cost of the war to Canada is the loss of these young men, the future leaders of the Dominion. The problem at the present time is that of training boys to take up the burdens of Canada's future. This work is the Y.M.C.A.'s call and the most important thing that the Association can do at the present time is to conserve the young manhood of Canada.

Money Is Needed.

Mr. Hopkins said that he had not come to Peterborough because he had no problems of his own but because of the fact that he was called upon to face problems in his own work and sympathized with others who were also seeking the solution to grave questions. Mr. Hopkins says in reference to the Y.M.C.A. budget 'We at Toronto Central must dig up one thousand dollars per week for salaries and wages and $12,000 a month must be secured in cash to cover our current expenses.' The budget of $9,500 that the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. had adopted seemed to him to be very modest in view of the increasing value that must be placed on the young manhood of the community. He said "one can scarcely run a corner cigar store for the amount that you are asking for your current expenses this year." A well-known student of economics in Toronto has very carefully computed that the worth of a normal boy to the state was $100,000.' He said 'Capitalize your boys department at $100,000 per boy and figure the earning power of this capital and see if it would not be much greater than the amount you are asking the public to give in order to conserve the manhood of your city.'

Real Sacrifice Now.

Mr. Hopkins also said that nearly everyone saw life from a new viewpoint than before the war. Before the war we did not know what sacrifice was, although we had talked of sacrifice in vague terms but now mothers have learned what it was to give their boys, wives have learned what it was to sacrifice their husbands and communities have learned to give their best red blooded manhood to the Empire's need.

We did not know what service was before the war but now almost everyone is seeking the best way of serving their fellows, their municipalities and their country.

We did not know what giving was before the war. Toronto had always been known for the liberality of its gifts to benevolent causes and the

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, JUNE 2, 1917

THE SOLDIER'S FRIEND.

Another thing, I must confess, appears to me to be extraordinary. When a man is discharged from the Expeditionary Force he gets 15 days' pay and then he goes into the domain or the zone of the province, which is supposed to find him employment. I say that that is wrong. This man is taken out of the life of the country, in which, perhaps, he was earning a very comfortable salary. He may have been a plumber, a coal dealer, a man of that description, making money hand over fist. He dropped it all, dropped his prospects, dislocated his whole domestic system and went abroad to fight. Having done these things, he is told, when he comes back: we will give you 15 days' notice, to enable you to get into your proper sphere of civil life. That is my understanding of the procedure, and I certainly think is is improper.—Extract from speech of J. H. Burnham, M. P., in Parliamens on pension question.

LOCAL LIBERALS AND AN ELECTION.

THE LOCAL LIBERAL leaders are not enthusiastic over the outlook. If there is an early election the contest will find them in desperate case. The very stars in their courses seem to have been against them, and just at present there is a matter before the public in which scores of voters in the riding have more than a passing interest and in which some of the leaders of the party are involved up to their eyes. That this affair should be revived just at the time when there is an election in prospect is nothing short of calamitous for the party.

There is discord among the leaders. One prominent lawyer in this city, with political aspirations, past and in prospect, has openly declared his intention of bolting the party. However dismal may be the prospects of success, there exists an ambition to head the party on the chance that if the Government is defeated the patronage will fall to the victor in this riding. There would have been a convention called long ago if there had been the slightest hope of selecting a candidate without precipitating something like a riot.

The party in this riding, if there is an election this summer, will be forced to face the people not only with an unsavory local record, but without a platform. The local organ has added to the general confusion by its stupidity in alienating the vote of the farmers, without which the party cannot even dream of victory. The paper has in the past taken the stand that everything the farmer has to sell should be taken over by the Government at a fixed price. It would have made it a crime for any farmer to send his produce to a foreign market, a vastly different stand from that taken by the same paper five years ago. The local organ has also threatened the local producers with the terrors of free trade, a ghost that has been laid for years.

The soldiers' vote alone is sufficient to swamp the Liberal party in this riding. Beyond all doubt the majority of the people are in favor of conscription, the soldiers, whether they be returned from the fray, in the training camps or in the trenches, especially so. At best, the party and their organ have temporized on this issue. Taking their cue from the chieftain, they feel that it would not be safe to turn against them the only province in the Dominion where they are sure of a majority.

It is reported that Mr. Gillespie will not be a candidate for the Local House again. The private business in which he is now engaged is to be reorganized, and the understanding is that he is to drop politics and devote all his time to the management of the concern in which he has had so long an experience and of which he possesses so much expert knowledge. His withdrawal would be another firebrand thrown into the Liberal camp. It would mean new discord in the scramble certain to ensue to capture the honor.

CAPT. BURNHAM'S MILITARY RECORD.

J. H. BURNHAM, M.P. for West Peterborough, holds the unique position of being the only member of the Canadian Parliament who entered the service of his country and who during that service has never drawn one cent for expenses or other allowances. In the long list published yesterday he stands alone in this regard. The $2,111 which he drew as pay has been turned over to the Red Cross just as he received it. His patriotism was disinterested, and as such presents a marked contrast to the service that has been rendered by others who entered the army.

By reason of his office in public life, Capt. Burnham was in a position to befriend the soldiers, and he has made the most of his opportunities. He has done everything that he promised to do in a letter sent to the press when he was appointed paymaster of the 93rd Battalion in December, 1915. The dependents left in Canada by the men in France have always had a friend in Capt. Burnham, and many of these have received from him substantial aid. The men themselves have in him had a champion not only in the training camps, but in Parliament. But for his term of service, Capt. Burnham would never have been able to realise what sacrifices these men are making, and what the country owes them when they return sick or disabled. That effective speech which he made in Parliament on the pension question would have been impossible without the first-hand knowledge which he possesses.

When Capt. Burnham returned from Europe on leave to take up his Parliamentary duties, he did so without pay. He offers now, when the session is over, to serve his country again in any capacity without compensation, and his offer is likely to be accepted. He would have relinquished his rank and gone into the trenches as a private when he was in Europe had the age limit not intervened. Canada's soldiers may well hope that Capt. Burnham's services will be utilized, for wherever he is, he is their friend, and his influence on their behalf is greater when he is one of themselves.

HAVE YOU NOTICED?

ADOPTING its own peculiar catechising style for the time being, have you ever noticed The Examiner do other than snarl at the Government not only as regards its management of the war, but on any other questions? No.

Have you ever noticed it criticize or do other than apologize for a member of its own party, standing by him through thick and thin, whatever his record? No.

Have you noticed in the past that The Examiner demanded that authority be given the municipalities to investigate the high cost of living, and that now that this has been done it is not satisfied Yes.

Have you noticed its line of argument, its naive contention that this would tend to make trouble in the community by setting neighbor against neighbor? Yes.

Have you noticed that this is of a part with the policy of The Examiner to leave all unpleasant local topics alone? Yes.

The municipalities have just as much power in this regard as they have in the enforcement of any other law. This city has the police to see that the laws against theft, murder and the like are not violated. Setting the machinery in motion may stir up ill-feeling in the community, but that is only natural. Peace in a neighborhood is desirable, but not at the price of human security and justice. The argument of The Examiner, if applied broadly, would call upon the Government to send a special agent from Ottawaa every time the suspicion was aroused here that a man had exceeded the speed limit, that he was ignoring the dog bylaw, or had not paid his poll tax.

The food question is not a little thing, either, as our contemporary lightly affects to believe. It is a matter of tremendous importance, and governments in the past have essayed to grapple with it, in vain. The law of supply and demand is as inexorable as ever. The Canadian Government is not responsible for the war, nor should it be held accountable for what are clearly and unmistakedly the acts of Providence in the matter of light crops for the past two years.

OH, WHAT'S THE USE!

"THE WORDS Liberal and Conservative should be erased for the moment from the national lexicon," says The Examiner, and adds something to the effect that the term "patriot" should be used to supply the places of the others.

Only for a moment. This indicates the measure of the spirit of our contemporary. But what is the use? The moment would fly away and The Examiner would be as rampant as ever.

Talking of lexicons and spelling reform, the dictionary used by our neighbor may hold to the orthography of the ancients, but with it partyism and patriotism are synonymous terms. The spelling is, after all, a matter of as little moment as the truce which it proposes.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

FRANCE, TOO, wants peace, but it must be the honorable variety.

● ● ● ●

CONSCRIPTION seems to be needed, too, for the man who has poll tax to pay.

● ● ● ●

IT IS APPARENT that in Quebec they are willing to fight for almost anything but their country.

● ● ● ●

HOW LONG will the Liberals halt between two opinions? Whom will they follow, Borden or Bourassa

● ● ● ●

ONE DISADVANTAGE of the secret ballot is that it places a ratepayer under the suspicion of belonging to that bunch of eighty-six.

● ● ● ●

IT CAN AT LEAST be said of the local Liberals that what they lack in the shape of a platform they more than make up in record.

● ● ● ●

A GENERAL ELECTION just now would find local Liberals in the same position as a family whose dwelling took fire while a funeral was in progress.

● ● ● ●

THE METHODIST Conference and the Presbyterian General Assembly will soon be in session, and unless signs fail, the selective draft will receive support from both bodies.

HOW TO HELP WIN THE WAR

Only one who has recently visited Great Britain or France can realise the contrast between the grim, determined "Win the-war" attitude prevalent in those countries, and the somewhat detached interest so large a proportion of the people of Canada show in the struggle. To arouse the whole nation—to enlist the whole-hearted, practical cooperation of every Canadian—the National Service Board of Canada announce that a systematic campaign of education will begin at once in the press throughout the country.

Canada was by no means slow to grasp the importance of military service, and our production of munitions has far exceeded the most optimistic predictions. But far more than that is required if our whole power is to be exerted in the empire's fight. Those who can neither fight nor make munitions, can each in his own way render valuable service.

With the slogan, "Fight, Work and Pay," the publicity campaign planned by the National Service Board combines an earnest appeal for this universal service, with practical suggestions for giving it. Increased production, conservation of food, thrift and the purchase of war savings certificates—these are the key notes of the advertising, which it is hoped will have results comparable with those which have been secured by similar publicity in Great Britain. The nature of the appeal, and its vital importance should win for the National messages the closest attention and heartiest response.

PROHIBITION THAT IS AIR TIGHT

Under the provisions of the prohibition law which went into effect in Nebraska recently the only chap who can legally take a drink is he who has a personal supply of liquor in his home. He may take a dozen drinks of liquor a day, but if his best friend comes to call he cannot lawfully give him a drink.

There will be nothing to prevent a man going to Missouri or Wyoming for a drink or two, but he cannot legally bring back a supply. Intoxication is made a misdemeanor under the law, but the intoxicated one may gain immunity by telling from whom he got the liquor. The presence of any quantity of liquor in a man's office, store or even his automobile is made prima facie evidence of an intent to violate the law.

No liquor may be advertised in any way, in newspapers, by circulars pamphlets or otherwise. No one may socilit for liquor or contract for delivery for beverage purposes. No one may transport liquor either into or within the state for use as a beverage. No one may take a drink in any public place. No one may inform another as to where liquor may be obtained. Liquor may not be kept in any club, not even in a private locker for personal use.

"Poor old sailor?" said the lady at work over the washtub.

"Yes; I followed the water for sixteen years."

The two landladies were comparing notes.

"I find it pays, now things are so awfully dear, to serve the breakfast piping hot," said one. "Except on Sundays. Then I serve it cold."

"Why do you do that?" asked the other.

"Well, on weekdays my boarders have to eat breakfast in a hurry, and if it is hot they don't have time to wait for it to cool off, so they eat very little. Sundays they eat less because it is cold. I assure you, Mrs. Jones, but for this discovery I should have lost money these last twelve months."

MASON'S MELODIES

There was a wondrous war machine, the most tremendous ever seen, with cannon, gun and submarine, and it was made in Germany. "A place we're seeking in the sun and with our sword and bomb and gun we'll rule the planet ere we're done"; the boast was made in Germany. The ruler stalked with haughty tread, his eyes were ever seeing red and bats were buzzing in his head; the bats were made in Germany. He kicked up war and for long years he bathed the world in blood and tears and startled all adjoining spheres with weapons made in Germany. He took on enemies each day and hailed them gladly in the fray and shot them up with bales of hay and sauerkraut made in Germany. Great Britain, Italy and France and Russia—these he saw advance and held them level with his lance and bludgeon made in Germany. And minor countries, group by group, went at the kaiser with a whoop; he handed each a bowl of soup, which broth was made in Germany. "Since I am whipping all these skates," the ruler gayly cried, "wie gehts! I'll take on the United States!" This break was made in Germany. Soon Uncle Sam, incensed by wrongs, will seize him with a pair of tongs and put him where his nobs belong—in durance there in Germany.

After Doctors Failed

A Well-known Resident of Port Hawkesbury Is Restored to Health and Strength.

One of the best known men in the town of Port Hawkesbury, N.S., is Mr. William Duff. He has been a member of the municipal council for 16 years, chairman of the school board, and held other responsible positions. Mr. Duff's words, therefore, can be taken as coming from a man who has the esteem and respect of his fellow townsmen. He makes no secret of the fact that he believes Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved his life, and that they restored him to good health, after several medical men had failed to cure him. Mr Duff tells of his illness and cure as follows: "About four years ago I was attacked with la grippe, which left me in a condition difficult to describe I was attacked with general weakness, and a constant dull pain in the stomach. I became so weak that I could not walk a hundred yards without sitting down to rest. The food I ate continually soured on my stomach. My nerves were all gone, and palpitation of the heart and a fluttering sensation all through my chest, especially at night was almost unbearable. I was finally compelled to go to bed, and called in a doctor, who said my heart was affected, and treated me for that trouble After three months' attendance, and feeling no better, I called in another doctor. His treatment also failed to help me, and I tried a third doctor. This one said there was nothing wrong with my heart, that the trouble was due to my stomach After treating me for a time he advised that I go to a hospital at Halifax. On a previous occasion when I had an attack of rheumatism, I had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided that rather than go to a hospital I would again try this medicine. I got a supply of the pills and began taking them. In a few weeks I could feel my strength returning, my stomach giving me less trouble, the palpitation of the heart disappeared, and after a further use of the pills I felt as well as ever I did in my life I can truly say that I feel more thankful than words can express for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me"

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Y.M.C.A. Directors

first year of the war very readily subscribed $800,000 to their patriotic funds. This was giving but not as we know it today. In Toronto in three days $3,500,000 was subscribed to patriotic purposes.

The Work of the Y.

The work of the Y.M.C.A. was appreciated before the war but no one realized that it was being prepared to meet the needs of a time like this. One man has said as he considered the training that our battalions receive before they are fit to go to the front, that if all the past seventy years of Y.M.C.A. history had simply been to train and prepare the association for service in the present great war that it would have been money and time well invested for the service now being rendered was worth all the money that had ever been invested in this movement.

Program Outlined.

In answer to the question as to what he would do if he were launching a campaign in behalf of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. this year, Mr. Hopkins said that the public first should be fully informed as to what the Association had accomplished and regarding its programme for the future. Second, he would confer with men and women of means who held large interests in the community and who would appreciate the value of the right type of manhood, to start the fund with a number of liberal contributions, that would be an expression of their appreciation for the effort that is being made to conserve manhood which is really the one big asset of the community today. Third, Mr. Hopkins thought that an outside leader would be necessary if the campaign was to be a success. Local members of Board are likely to be too busy in their own affairs to do more than ordinary routine work in connection with the campaign. Members of the staff should continue their regular programme of work so it seemed to him that an experienced man from the outside should be brought in for at least two weeks to study the field and direct the setting up of the campaign.

Mr. Hopkins strongly urged the Board of Directors and the other men present to leave no stone unturned in the effort to provide for every need of the local association this year. There will be a period of readjustment after the war and money may be secured more easily at the present time than for several years after the war closes.

The Board of Directors adjourned to meet on Tuesday evening, June 5th, on which occasion all the advice received from the various conferences held will be reviewed and final plans for a financial campaign will be made. The Directors believe that the public in general is in sympathy with them as they undertake this great work of building manhood in our city and that our citizens will back up any effort that may seem wise to be made this year.

MOTOR ENGINE SIMPLY FLEW THROUGH CITY

La France Fire Fighting Apparatus Gives Satisfactory Test Today.

NO DOUBT AS TO POWER.

Climbed Steepest Hill Without Eoffrt, and Pumping Outfit Perfect.

The City Council and a representation of the leading manufacturers of the city witnessed a test of the American La France combination motor hose truck and pumper this afternoon and to say the least it was a surprise to a great many of our citizens.

Previous to being tested for pumping water a few of the aldermen and manufacturers were taken on board for a trial run. The huge machine simply flew up George street until Antrim street was reached and then it climbed to the top of Smith town hill on high gear as easily as it travelled the paved streets. This was a great demonstration of strength as there is no rougher or steeper hill in the city than the Antrim street climb.

Returning to the creek at Murray street the suction hose was placed in the stream and four lines of hose stretched from the pumper. It again amply made good in everything that the representatives of the American La France Co. claimed the apparatus would do.

Later the Smith town hill was climbed and about 750 feet of hose laid from the hydrant at this point and a test made of the ordinary water pressure there. The test guage registered about 62 lbs. Later the same stream was attached to the pumper and the pressure placed at nearly 200 lbs. and the stream shot skywards about three times the height of the straight water test. Of course the pressure on the water main could have been made much greater by calling up the pumping station but this test was simply to demonstrate what the pumper could do under ordinary water conditions.

The manufacturers expressed themselves as pleased with the demonstration.. The machine was taken to the market scales and weighed. The weight wak 9130 pounds without any hose or driver on it.

A chemical engine can be placed on the apparatus at an additional weight of 350 lbs.

Overland

Overland success is so eclipsing that one might take it as a matter of course.

But make it have a personal application to you,

—because the cost of any car is too much money to be carelessly spent.

There need be no confusion in selecting the sound value at the same price—make comparisons and see if Willys-Overland does not spell the answer with mathematical correctness.

Do not miss the significance of the overwhelming production that makes it possible for us to give better cars at lower prices.

More than 400,000 owners have been guided to Willys-Overland by their desire for beauty, comfort and luxury in addition to utility.

Due to its gigantic facilities the Willys-Overland industry effects millions in economies; has never found it necessary to skimp or rob a car of value in order to compete; but is able to give surplus value throughout the entire car for far less money.

Might may not make right, but right has made Overland might.

The Overland Light Four from the standpoint of mechanical excellence, easy riding comfort, roominess and beauty is incomparably a better car than can be had in any other make at anything like so low a price.

Come in and see the Willys-Overland Motor Cars—the Light Four and the most comprehensive line of cars ever built by any one producer.

Lantic Sugar

Has Nothing to Hide

Now that the Government has absolutely prohibited the use of any artificial coloring matter in sugar,

We tell you again that we have

NEVER USED BEETS
NEVER USED ULTRAMARINE BLUE
NEVER USED ANILINE DYES
NEVER USED VEGETABLE DYES
in refining any of our Sugars.

The Lantic Pure Cane Sugar you buy today is exactly the same high quality as what you bought when our refinery started two years ago. This means every pound in the hands of your grocer is pure and uncolored.

So why take chances? Why not insist on having Lantic—the Sugars that have always been pure—and cost no more than any other?

You should exercise the same care and discrimination in buying sugar as in choosing any other food.

The way to guard against inferior quality is to demand Lantic Pure Cane Sugar which is guaranteed pure and wholesome.

Lantic Sugar has nothing to hide. It comes from the most modern refinery in the world. So great is the demand for Lantic Sugar that we are now refining over three quarters of a million pounds a day.

This shows what the people of Canada—and particularly those who want pure food—think of this absolutely pure food product.

The Standard of Lantic Sugar is now the Standard of Canada

HEAVY FARM LOSS TO VERULAM FARMER

BOBCAYGEON, May 31. — Mr. Robert Junkin, Lot 22, Con. 5, Verulam, a prosperous farmer of North Berulam, met with a serious loss this morning, when his fine large barn, 112 x 45 feet, and straw barn, 31 x 32; also a pig pen 20 x 24 caught fire. The driving shed was partly destroyed, besides four tons of hay, 200 bushels of oats, 1 calf burned to death, and another so severely burned it will die; a number of hens and other perquisites around the outbuildings. The amount of insurance is not known. The hen-house was being fumigated with burning sulphur when it caught fire, presumably from that source. Beside the barn Mr. Junkin lost a seeder, roller, harrows, fanning mill, and weigh scales, besides other valuable articles. The loss will be fully $3,000, insured in the Farmers' Mutual. Mr. Junkin was seriously burned about the hands in trying to save as much as possible from the burning buildings. The whole community sympathizes with him in his loss

WILL INVESTIGATE

Provincial Fire Marshal E. P. Heaton is in Pembroke to investigate the fire which did $140,000 damage to the Colonial Lumber Company's plant there. Most of the insurance on the plant is said to be in companies unlicensed in Ontario, and on which the Government will collect one per cent.

Motoring Minus Fatigue

HERE IS A CAR you can drive for hours without effort or fatigue. The control is as simple as that of an electric, responding like a flash to the merest touch. You can shift the gears with your finger tips. The slightest pressure operates the clutch and brake pedals. In congested traffic, where frequent stops are necessary, you can hold out the clutch with the car in gear without tiring your foot. The clutch engages so effectively that you can move the car forward or backward an eighth of an inch at a time if you wish. And the brakes are just as responsive—no need to throw your full weight on the brake pedal—just a gentle pressure and the brakes take hold.

Inspectors are urged to insist upon a more strict obedience of the regulations requiring a secure bolt on the inner side of every guest room door, in addition to lock; also that in each room must be posted prominently a card stating rates to be charged for room and meals.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Enough potato parings are being saved by the chef of a popular uptown restaurant to plant one-fourth of an acre of ground on Staten Island as a experiment to determine the kind of crop that can be obtained from such seed, the mayor's committee on food supply announced today. The experiment will be in charge of a park department farmer.

TWO PAY DAYS A MONTH FOR RAILROAD EMPLOYES

Railway employes on all roads in Canada are to be paid semi-monthly if an amendment which was put into the General Railway Act yesterday at Ottawa by a special committee of the house becomes law. There was a unanimous vote in favor of the proposal, though counsel for the railways has objected and pointed out difficulties. Representatives of the railway brotherhoods urged that in the United States Canadian roads pay fortnightly in such states as they are required to do so. They were willing to give a few months' delay, after the passage of the act, to allow the companies to adjust their systems.

SMALL CAMP AT BARRIEFIELD

Barriefield Camp opened officially yesterday when the headquarters staff commenced their summer work. The tents of the staff have been pitched by the Special Service Company and the officers are assuming a businesslike aspect. The camp this year is a small one and there is no prospect of it enlarging unless conscription comes into force. It is not likely that the 230th Battalion of Brockville will go to Barriefield as they are constantly sending drafts to the front. The companies which are in camp at the present time are: No. 3 Special Service Company Army Medical Corps training depot, the 5th F. C. C. E., I.S. of I. while the Forestry Draft and the Railway Construction Battalion will proceed to camp this week. Altogether there are not more than four hundred men in the camp at the present time, and the staff officers are anxiously awaiting the result of the conscription bill.

LIEUTENANTS MUST RESIGN.

Word has gone forth from militia headquarters, that all provisional (unqualified) lieutenants in the active militia, except those actually attending schools of instruction, will be asked to hand in their resignations. Notice to this effect was received by the G.O.C. of Military District No. 2, from the adjutant-general at Ottawa, and immediate action will be taken to obtain the resignations required. No more first appointments to commissions will be made until further orders, except in the case of medical units.

MARKET PRICES

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

Eggs were sold at all prices starting at 40c and going up to 44 asked. The bulk of the market sold at 42c.

Butter was sold at from 42 to 45c with the average price being 43c. Some of the farmer ladies thought that they should have got more.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE.

A further decline of $1 per barrel was registered in the price of Manitoba flour during the week, which now makes the selling price $3 per barrel under the recent highest point. Ontario winter wheat flour also showed a similar decline. There is now considerable flour going into the United States for use by the army. Millfeeds declined $2 per ton quite generally. There is a lighter demand for these products now that grass for stock is more abundant.

Sugar held in steady market during the week. Reports from Cuba continue to be favorable toward a fairly heavy production. Demand for sugar is somewhat light at present.

Hams were slightly easier in price during the week and prices being paid for live hogs were at lower levels than last week. Production of eggs is stated to be mounting up well as compared with last year, but prices have not been much lower as yet. Butter held steady in the Ontario market, but was lower in the Quebec markets. There is expectation among commission men that both butter and cheese will be lower in price. Cheese is in a waiting condition, due to the fact that the new purchasing commission has not yet set the price at which they will buy.

Pineapples were higher during the week, but there is every possibility they will be lower in price in the near future. A strike which has been in progress in Havana has been settled and shipments of Cuban pineapples are now permitted to proceed. It is anticipated that the second week in June will see about the heaviest arrivals of the season at which time prices will in all probability be the lowest. Advances have been made in such lines as soaps, peanut butter, condensed milk, ammonia, ice cream salt, shelled walnuts. In spite of the holiday breaking into the week, business with wholesale houses was quite satisfactory.

When to Lubricate

People who ride their bicycles in all kinds of weather ought, if they desire to obtain the best running results, to give the matter of lubrication fairly constant attention. In fine weather a bicycle only wants oiling about every 300 miles, with the exception of the chain, which should always be kept moist with lubricant. But when one does "mixed" riding, and takes a fair quantity of mud aboard, then the oil can should be more lavishly and frequently used, especially on the hubs, bracket, and pedal bearings, which very quickly stiffen under caked mud.

Italy, Spain, and Turkey are the only countries in Europe which do not pay their M.P.'s.

GOOD PARK LUNCHES

Allow each individual two date sandwiches. Add to these two chopped cold meat sandwiches and an orange apiece. Then complete the lunch by putting in several olives for each person and several sugar cookies. One lunch may be: Three lettuce sandwiches, one with brown sugar and butter; three tiny sweet pickles, ginger cookies, fresh plums; and still another allowance for each is: Two fig sandwiches, two of whole wheat bread with chopped ham or peanut butter, a deviled egg, a little scalloped cake, a tomato.

Fixing the Valve Stem

A bent valve stem on an automobile engine invariably will cause trouble by sticking open and thus causing misfiring of the cylinder in which it is operating. In testing for a bent stem, which hardly is noticeable to the eye, place the valve in its guide and with the forefinger gently lift the stem. It should move freely and drop back to normal position of its own weight. If it does not, clean the stem and guide and try again. If the stem and guide are clean the former may be bent.

Don't fill an oil or gasoline stove after dark, nor do so while the stove is lighted, as the flame might set fire to the vapour in the air, causing an explosion.

A new silencer for motorboat engines works on the principle of taking the pressure out of the exhaust gases by cooling them with a water jacket.

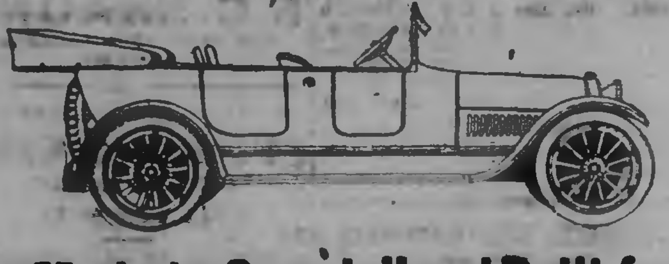
Studebaker
Established 1852



"Made-in-Canada" and Built for Canadian Roads

Studebaker cars are designed and built to meet all the emergencies and difficulties of driving which motorists in Canada are sure to encounter.

Studebaker cars predominate in the eastern Provinces, where style and appearance are the chief requisites.

Studebaker cars have made good in the prairie Provinces, where ability of a car to stand up under long, hard, continual service on the "gumbo" roads is the chief requirement.

And Studebaker cars have proven satisfactory in service in the mountains on the Coast, where endurance and grade-conquering power are the chief requisites.

That's because Studebaker cars are made in Canada—with the built-in stability that such a car requires in order to give the best of service on Canadian roads.

LONGEST GAME ON RECORD

On May 31, 1909, the longest baseball game on record in any major or minor league was played on the Three Eye League, when Decatur defeated Bloomington by 2 to 1. Burns was the pitcher for Decatur and Clark had to take the short end of the game for Bloomington. The game was played in the latter city, which, by the way, was the home of Clark Griffith, manager of the Washington American League baseball team, and the town in which he pitched his first professional ball. The Bloomington-Decatur game went 26 innings. A 25-innings game was played at Devil's Lake, North Dakota, between Grand Forks and Fargo, neither team scoring. It occurred on July 18, 1891. The next longest game was that between Burlington and Keokuk, Central Association, on the 27th February, 1915. It was a no-score game. Jersey City and Toronto went twenty innings without scoring on August 12, 1913. Thompson and Brandon hurled for Jersey City and Hearne for Toronto. Another twenty-innings game which was tied at 1 to 1 occurred at Adrian, Mich., on July 17, 1913, Battle Creek having played the home team, Loomis, was Adrian's moundsmaan, while McDonald adorned the hillock for Battle Creek.

PARENTS TO PAY FOR BOY'S KEEP IN REFORMATORY

FINANCE COMMITTEE DEAL WITH MANY MATTERS OF INTEREST.

The City Finance Committee met yesterday afternoon and besides passing the monthly accounts dealt with a number of matters that had been referred to it.

The City Solicitor will write the parents of a number of boys confined in the St. John's Industrial School by the order of the police magistrate and will demand an immediate settlement of their maintenance account.

Davis Thompson and Co. wanted the Bond of the tax collector renewed with their firm but as the council had already dealt with the transfer no action could be taken.

Crown Attorney Hatton sent in an account for services rendered at the Police Court in the prosecution of breaches of the Ontario Temperance Act. The city solicitor reported against the city paying the account as they were not liable. The matter was left over so that the Chief of Police could be consulted as to who ordered the crown attorney to prosecute.

The communication of the Canadian National Sanitarium informing the city that the rate of board for indigent patients was raised from $1.00 to $1.25 per day. The notice was placed on file.

Chairman Stratton reported that he had purchased a typewriter for the city clerk's office as authorized by the council and that it would be here in a few days.

The account of the Dominion Dustless Sweeper Co. was referred to the City Engineer to find out the number of days that the machine worked and to order the payment at the rate of $25.00 per day.

For billiard parlors there has been invented apparatus operated by clockwork to record the time a table is in use and the number of games played in a giving period.

The new roll is ready to be handed to Mr. Green and a lot of ratepayers want to pay this year before going on their summer vacation.

As soon as the roll is returned to the city treasurer the rate of interest to those in arrears jumps to 10 per cent.

men. The battalions on the Western front probably do not muster much more than a million bayonets available for the holding of the trenches. This, of course, is exclusive of artillery, army service transports and other troops. Of cavalry the Germans have only two divisions on the Western front, as horses are very scarce in all enemy countries.

WORK OF THE RED CROSS

Dear Sir,—We have just received the latest instructions from London in regard to prisoners' parcels.

The instructions are so clear and so explicit that we would feel obliged it you will kindly insert them in the Review.

The Canadian Red Cross is the only official cord of communication between Canada and our men who are prisoners.

If those who have continued sending private parcels only knew how every parcel sent to them hitherto has had to be repacked and censored in London by the Canadian Red Cross they would be willing to forego the personal touch so loved by us all and send their gifts in money to our Prisoners' Department.

Yours faithfully,
ANNIE FORBES ALLAN
E. MORROW

Prisoners' Of War Department

The Canadian Red Cross Society send every fortnight three 10s. parcels of provisions, weighing 10 lbs. each to every prisoner of war in the Canadian Contingents, this under the new regulations is the maximum amount which may be sent.

The C.R.C.S. send 13 lbs. of bread fortnightly, and 1 2 lb of tobacco or 20 cigarettes

The present regulations forbid private people sending to prisoners of war any parcels containing food, clothing, tobacco, cigarettes, anything that might conceal secret writing, or anything mentioned in the prohibited list appended, neither may the Red Cross accept any such parcels to forward to Germany.

It will be seen, therefore, that there is really very little that may be sent by private people, and under the circumstances it is the only plan for people to order any special food, tobacco or comforts through the Red Cross. The society will order and despatch parcels to any particular man with any money contributed for him, and will do its best to carry out any wishes expressed by the subscriber as to the contents of the parcel, within the prescribed limits.

Owing to the very strict regulations issued by the War Office extra clothing may not be sent. The following outfit, as authorized, is sent by the society to each prisoner of war, and is repeated every six months:—

Greatcoat (every 12 months), jacket, trousers, cap, pair boots, 2 shirts, 2 pair socks, canvas shoes, 2 vests, 2 pair drawers, cardigan gloves, kitbag, 3 handkerchiefs, 2 towels.

A parcel of toilet requisites—brush, comb, tooth paste, and brush, hussif, etc., is sent at intervals.

Books, games, gramaphones, etc., are sent occasionally and seem very acceptable.

Books, music, playing cards, may be ordered by private people through an authorized firm, such as Messrs. W. H. Smith, Strand, London, or the Camps' Library, Horseferry Road, London, S. W.

Books of an educational nature will be sent free if application is made in writing to A. T. Davis, Esq., Board of Education, Whitehall, London.

The Canadian Red Cross will order (if requested) medicine or other medical comforts through the Invalid Comforts Fund, Hove.

Many people are glad to "adopt" prisoners, either wholly or partially, by subscribing towards their 30s. worth of provisions fortnightly. These parcels are then sent in the name of the subscriber and the receipt acknowledged by the prisoner direct to them. Any sums are gratefully received for these purposes, as are any contributions to the General Fund of this department.

There are no regulations regarding letters or post cards.

If prisoners express a wish for mony to be sent them, this can be done through the Post Office by International Money Order.

Tennis balls, footballs, boxing, gloves, gramaphone records may only be sent if specially asked for by a prisoner. The letter containing such requests should be sent to the Canadian Red Cross Society, who will make the necessary arrangements.

The Canadian Red Cross Society will gladly give any further information that it possibly can.

CANADIANS MEET WITH REVERSE

DAMPER PUT ON CITY'S HOPE FOR EARLY OPENING TRENT CANAL TO LAKE ONTARIO

Minister of Railways Cochrane Seems to Take Side of Grand Trunk Rather Than That of Public---Mayor Duffus Calls Meeting for Thursday to Protest.

Mayor Duffus has called a meeting of the mayors of the municipalities on the Trent canal and in the valley from Orillia to the lake front, for Thursday afternoon in the Council chamber in this city to draw up a program, the object of which will be to bring pressure to bear upon the government for the immediate opening of the canal to Lake Ontario. All citizens interested in this important matter are invited to be present, and the result will probably be another influential deputation will be appointed to confer with the authorities at Ottawa.

The only obstacle in the way of an early opening of the canal to the lake is the Grand Trunk bridge at Campbellford. If a high bridge is erected at that point, the canal can be put in commission at once. Mayor Duffus and Alderman Dobbin recently visited Ottawa with regard to this matter, and, in company with Mr. Burnham, had a conference with Sir Robert Borden. The Premier assured the deputation that the matter would have early and serious consideration. The representatives from this city were encouraged to hope that their mission had been successful, that the Grand Trunk people would be required to put up the required bridge, and that Peterborough would soon have an outlet by the canal to Lake Ontario.

These hopes have been dashed, as the following correspondence will show, but Peterborough will not give up the fight, as the prompt action of the Mayor indicates. Premier Borden, it seems, was as good as his word, and took the matter up at once with Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals. The latter replied, setting forth the situation and expressing what must be regarded as in a measure his own sentiments. The Premier then sent a copy of Mr. Cochrane's letter to Capt. Burnham who, in turn, forwarded a draft to Mayor Duffus. The letters explain themselves:

To Mayor Duffus.

May 30th, 1917.

Mayor of Peterborough.
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,

I enclose you a letter from Sir Robert Borden with a copy of one to him from the Minister of Railways and Canals. You will see that the representations made by yourself, Alderman Dobbin and myself with regard to the Campbellford bridge are unsatisfactory. You are aware that this whole matter was brought to the Minister's attention three years ago, and has been constantly urged upon him and that he himself promised to have the matter attended to, and that the low bridge should not be allowed to stand in the way of opening the canal. We must therefore accuse him of neglect in this particular.

Yours very truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

From Premier Borden.

Ottawa, May 29th, 1917.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P.,
House of Commons,
Ottawa, Ont.

Dear Capt. Burnham:

I brought to the attention of Mr. Cochrane the representations made by the delegation from Peterborough with regard to the bridge at Campbellford. Herewith is a copy of a letter I have received from Mr. Cochrane, which explains the situation.

Yours faithfully,
R. L. BORDEN.

Minister Cochrane's Statement.

Office of the Minister of Railways and Canals,
Ottawa, May 26, 1917

To Rt. Hon. Sir R. L. Borden,
Prime Minister of Canada,
Ottawa, Ont.

Dear Sir Robert:

I have yours of May 25th in reference to the bridge at Campbellford on the Trent Canal, which the Mayor of Peterborough states prevents the Trent Canal from performing any useful purpose at present. Aside from this bridge the canal is not yet completed, and I may say that the original plans provided for

CANADIANS WERE FORCED TO GIVE UP CAPTURED-STATION

Impossible to Send Reinforcements on Account of Confined Space in Which Battle Was Proceeding---Enemy Active Today.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Headquarters, June 4.—The troops that captured the electrical station southwest of Lens are back in their own trenches and the enemy once more occupies the ruins of the station as well as his trench in the vicinity temporarily in possession of the Canadians. After eighteen hours of endurance of heavy shell fire in an effort to hold the grounds which proved untenable the men were withdrawn as a course preferable to sending in more men to the confined area in which battle was proceeding.

Throughout Sunday, with very little shelter from the German positions occupied in the early morning the westerners tenaciously held their ground under a gruelling fire. When in the evening a strong German counter attack was directed upon the electric station it was evacuated under pressure, the Alberta men returning to their former outposts in a group of ruined miners' houses seventy-five yards to the west.

The enemy undoubtedly lost heavily in his attack, but he has a distinct advantage in the shelter of numerous fortified points on the slopes leading up to Avion and Lens, in which his men gathered for an advance. Prisoners taken during engagement numbered 112, of whom ninety are unwounded. They belong to three enemy battalions.

This would indicate that when our men attacked on Sunday morning the enemy had available immediately for defence a larger force than that which he made attack. During the day the Germans added materially to this number and there was much activity this Monday morning all along the front, particularly on the part of snipers and the machine guns.

THREATEN TO LAND FORCE AT PETROGRAD AND ATTACK CITY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

PEAROGRAD, June 4.—It is reported that sailors from Kronstadt, whose garrison recently declared its independence of the Central Government, have landed at Gutuye Island, port of Petrograd, and begun an attack.

Later it was reported sailors had landed at Gutuyeff Island, Port of Petrograd, and begun an attack. A visit to Gutuyeff Port Quarter showed the story of the landing and attack was untrue. However it was sufficiently alarming to provoke intense excitement in the city and cause the despatch to the spot of a military force.

The city waited today for the threatened demonstrations by Kronstadt warships and as time passed with no such incidents, the announcement of the sailors who reached here last night came to be regarded by the majority as merely boastful talk on the part of extremists acting in defiance of the orders of Anatole Lamanoff, president of the Kronstadt Council of workmen and soldiers deputies.

FORMER LOCAL MAN IN LIST OF KING'S HONORS

Sir Joseph Flavelle, Bart., Spent Early Years of His Life in This City.

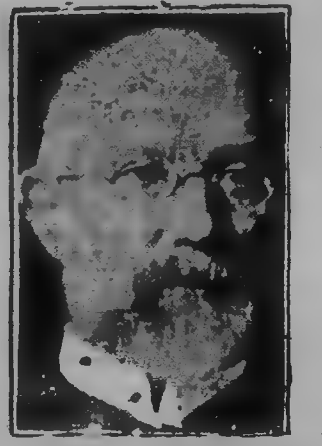
BANKERS ARE KNIGHTED.

Vice-President Bury of C. P. R., Is Also One of Canada's New Knights.

TORONTO, June 4.—Among the King's birthday honors are a number of new Canadian knights, Sir Joseph Wesley Flavelle, Sir Robert A. Falconer, Sir George Bury, Sir John Aird, Sir George Burn, Sir Eugene Fleet, Sir Augustus Meredith Nanton, Major General Sir Richard Ernest William Turner, V.C., D.S.O. and Lieu.-Col. Sir Arthur William Currie.

Sir Joseph Wesley Flavelle, Bart., of Toronto was born of Irish parents, near Peterborough, Ont., n Feb. 14, 1853. He was educated at the public and gramar schools of Peterborough. During his career in Toronto he has held many public offices. Besides being a prominent business man, he has identified himself with a large number of religious and philantrophic organizations, which extend from missionary enterprises to medical commissions.

Before the "shell investigation," he was known principally as the President of the William Davies Company, Ltd., Toronto, but since Lord Rhondda—Mr. D. A. Thomas—organized the British Munitions business in Canada, he has served as the Chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board in Canada. To him is very largely attributed the credit for speeding up the manufacture of munnitions in Canada, and cleaning up the difficulties inherited from the Shell Commission. Sir Joseph Flavelle, Bart., possesses great capacity as an organizer of industries, and the touch of business genius is declared to have revived many large concerns.



SIR JOSEPH FLAVELLE BART.

Leaders in the Methodist Church of Canada claim him as a pillar of that denomination. He is one of its leading laymen, and takes a prominent part in the General Conference. The misionary interests of the Methodist Church have received a great deal of support from him.

A great deal of the success which characterized the reorganization and construction of the new General Hospital in Toronto is due to his painstaking interest in the institution. It is declared that he, with his colleagues on the board, threw themselves into this work with so much energy and zeal that success was assured from the outset. The institution has passed through many trying periods, and but for the Board of Directors the city would probably not have possessed the magnificent pile of buildings it possesses today.

He is a member of many prominent clubs and politically is listed as an "Independent Conservative."

Airships Drop Bombs on Docks and Canals at Bruges---Enemy Rests After Sanguinary Repulse by French---More Civilians Killed by German Air Craft.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, June 4.—An official statement says the post south of Cherisy mentioned in Sunday morning's communique which remained in the enemy's hands at the conclusion of fighting in that neighborhood was recaptured by British troops last night. Hostile raids were repulsed during the night southwest of La Bassee and in the neighborhood of Neuve Chapelle. Enemy trenches were entered by us east of Vermelles.

Another official statement reports bombing attack on the Bruges docks and canals last night with good results.

CIVILIANS KILLED BY BOMBS.

PARIS, June 4.—Artillery fighting became violent late yesterday on the front northwest of Froidmont Farm. An attack at about 10 p.m. against the salient in our line enabled the enemy to gain a footing in advanced positions on the front of the Vauclerc and Californie plateaus. The Germans did not renew their attacks after their sanguinary repulse yesterday, confining their efforts to rather heavy bombardment.

In the Champagne we made a surprise attack on the German trenches west of Teton taking prisoners and capturing three machine guns.

On June 2 and 3 pilots brought down six German airplanes and one captive baloon. Our anti aircraft guns brought down three machines whose occupants, of whom three were officers, were made prisoners. Enemy machines dropped bombs in the region of Nancy and on Dunkirk. It is reported that there were several victims among the civilian population of Dunkirk.

NO PRISONERS ON FIRING LINE

GERMANS CONSENT TO WITHDRAW CAPTIVES TO THE REAR.

LONDON, June 4.—Arrangements have been completed with the German Government for the withdrawal of all British war prisoners from the firing line, according to an official announcement tonight. The prisoners will be kept a minimum distance of 18½ miles from the actual front, both in the eastern and western zones.

SEDITION AT TORONTO.

Anti-Conscription Meeting Broken Up By Soldiers.

TORONTO, June 4.—Socialists and anti-conscriptionists discovered last night that the citizens of Toronto were in no humor to tolerate any of their doctrines. They had planned to hold a meeting at the Labor Temple to protest against the Government proposals for compulsory military service, but the meeting did not materialize, for some two hundred soldiers and an equal number of loyal citizens took possession of the hall and stopped it being held.

IN THE MORNING.

When you wake up, do you find that you still have that headache, and wonder how you are going to get through another day? There is absolutely no need to suffer with it any longer, all you need do is to call and see Dr. Lacy and let him cure you. 410 George street.

LEADERS CONFER AGAIN ON CABINET CRISIS AND COALITION NOW HOPED FOR BY MEMBERS OF BOTH PARTIES

Sir Wilfrid Asked for Further Information and it is Now Believed He Will Give Definite Answer Within Twenty-Fours Hours

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, June 4. Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier conferred again this morning. It is understood Sir Wilfrid was not ready to reply as to a coalition government but asked for certain information on a number of points which it is understood was supplied him. It is believed the end of negotiations is approaching and that a definite reply from Sir Wilfrid is to be expected within the next twenty-four hours.

Prominent men of both political parties here were hopeful this morning that coalition ministry would be formed.

Movements At Ottawa.

Chief Whip Pardee's departure for Montreal on Friday afternoon immediately after an interview in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's office, between the Liberal chieftain and the prime minister, was interpreted to mean that Mr. Pardee had been sent upon a mission to Sir Lomer Gouin and the Liberal leaders of Quebec, but to every one's surprise, Mr. Pardee was back in Ottawa before noon Saturday. Hon Robert Rogers made even a more flying trip to the metropolis, leaving here after the cabinet meeting Saturday afternoon, and returning to Ottawa shortly after midnight on Sunday morning.

THREE YOUNG MEN WHO WILL NEVER BE CONSCRIPTS

Enlisted Today With 57th Regiment---All Give up Well Paid Positions in City to Get to Front

Recruiting at the local armouries for the 57th draft of the C E F. started off this morning with so much vim that the officers were so much encouraged. Three recruits were taken on the strength and are ready for duty. The men who attested were:—

Private Harry E. Lear, 105 Romaine Street, formerly foreman of the Brinton Carpet Co.

Private James Henry Firth, 189 River Road, foreman at the Auburn Woolen Mills.

Private Ernest Jackson, 189 River Road, spinner at the Auburn Woolen Mills.

FORMER 252nd OFFICERS

Captains G H Potts and W. H. Watson, Lieutenants G Fleming, H Hartle, A. McEachran, and Harty Morden were in the city to-day, and lunched at the Empress. They were all formerly of the 252nd Battalion.

BETTER RETURNS

Recruiting returns for the Third Military District for the past two weeks show a large increase over the returns for the previous period, and staff officers at Barriefield camp are well satisfied with the result of the efforts of the various recruiting officers in the district. A total of 536 men was enrolled during the period being an increase of 200 over the previous period. That this is due in a large measure to the conscription talk is acknowledged on all sides. All the recruits are of good physique and will make good soldiers.

SELLING TWO PER CENT

At the Petawawa Camp, the R.C.H.A., and the other batteries there have been given permision to sell 2 per cent. temperance drinks in their canteens. This permission has just been granted and it is very probable that the same privilege will be extended to Barriefield camp and the other camps in Canada

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, JUNE 4. 1917

GOD SAVE THE KING.

KING GEORGE was born fifty-two years ago, the second son of the late King Edward. The death of his elder brother, the Duke of Clarence, placed him in line for the throne, a position for which previous to that he had received no special training. He was in the navy when a boy, and made an excellent sailor. It has always been an open secret that he would prefer a life at sea to his present position, although few sovereigns Great Britain has ever had have been more popular with all classes of the people.

King George, unlike his father, is not fond of society, and does practically no entertaining; none at all, in fact, since the war broke out. All his public duties are performed in a most conscientious manner. He has a voice of extraordinary strength and clearness, and if he should desire, there is no doubt he could become one of the finest royal orators in Europe.

Ever since the commencement of the war the ruler of the Empire has been a splendid type of the democracy which places his country above the monarchies of Europe. He has set his people an example in abstinence and in economy. He has taken a personal interest in the welfare of the army, and has encouraged the soldiers by visiting them at the battle front. The royal bounty has made the lot of the sick and wounded happier than it otherwise could have been. No man strove more earnestly than he to avert the calamity of war; none will welcome peace more gratefully than King George.

WORKING ON SUNDAY.

REV. W. L. H. ROWAND, the new minister in charge at St. Andrew's Church, preached a forceful sermon yesterda morning on the observance of the Sabbath, dwelling upon it as an essential to the welfare of the individual, the church and the nation. The individual cannot retain his efficiency in the field of endeavor unless he is given one day of rest in seven. The cause of religion will suffer if Sunday is spent in frivolity rather than in worship, and if the people spent the day in autos, on bicycles, or in other forms of amusement, rather than by attending church. If the individual and the church deteriorate, then the nation as a whole suffers as a result.

The Divine principles with regard to the observance of the day of rest appeal to all classes. But man has developed a tendency to juggle these teachings and to interpret or arrange them according to his own ideas, and the result has been controversy. The Son of Man is Lord also of the Sabbath, but His functions have been usurped to a great extent bw an interdenominational organization that has assumed control of this question. Arbitrary enactments have been the result, and unreasonable conditions insisted upon.

In the matter of Sunday street cars, one standard of public morality has been set up for the smaller cities and another for the larger. The rights accorded the one are denied the others on the slim excuse that in a municipality of fifty thousand or more of a population the street cars are needed for the purpose of carrying the people to and from the churches. It is a well-known fact that wherever Sunday cars are operated they are used for a purpose almost altogether the reverse.

The livery rig and the automobile are allowed to run seven days a week. Their operation means Sunday labor. It is the poor man's carriage, the street car, that is alone put under the ban. Is there any justice in such an arrangement?

The church insists on one day of rest in seven for the workingman. When organized labor makes the same demand, even in war time, and as applied to the making of munitions, they use the same arguments as are employed by the religious bodies—that greater efficiency can be maintained by an observance of the Sunday labor law. In spite of this, some men prominently connected with the church declare that the workingmen, in taking such a stand, are no better than anarchists and traitors. One of them was quoted to that effect in the Toronto papers no later than last Saturday.

It is the boast of modern civilization that all secular laws are based on Divine precepts. That may be true, but it is certain that such laws are not always administered in the same spirit. The Master and His disciples on a certain memorable occasion, were on a Sunday journey. The disciples were hungry and helped themselves to the products of the farmers' fields along the roadside. The Pharisees objected, and were rebuked by the Highest Authority, who cited to them the case of David, who, when he was in need of food, helped himfise to bread that was designed for others.

A resident in the suburbs of this city, with a family of small children looking to him for sustenance, was unable to secure fuel last winter to cook them food or to keep them warm. The dealers put him off. Perhaps he was not familiar with the stories of David and of the hunger of the disciples, but at all events he acted on the same principle, and helped himself to the property of his neighbors. The fence rails of another were seized and used as fuel.

The man who fails to provide for the members of his own household, we have it on indisputable authority, is worse than an infidel. The police, however, cannot see it that way. The man referred to was arrested and fined in the police court. Earthly affairs seldom work out according to the maxims upon which modern religion is supposed to be based.

Mr. Rowand is evidently a preacher who believes in dealing with the sins of the present day rather than with those of the trangressors in Bible times. Last night he preached on the grafter in public life, basing his discourse on the victim of robbery and assault whose case enlisted the services of the Good Samaritan, and related that case to present-day stealings in high places.

Mr. Rowand is right. The robbery on the Jericho road was at least no worse than modern graft. The thug who waylaid the traveller was a professional who was at least without the sin of hypocrisy. All in all, he is more of a heroic figure in history than the present-day exploiter who makes "ungodly profits out of his country's pain," or who fiddles away at his political ragtime while the Empirei s threatened with a conflagratime while the Empire is threatened with a conflagration.

AS FAR OFF AS EVER.

WHEN LLOYD GEORGE turns the Irish question over to the people of that island themselves he simply follows the course so popular with the different governments, provincial or federal, in Canada when, in order to escape responsibility for a grave situation, they refer the problem to a commission. Government in this country is fast becoming government, not by the people, but government by order-in-council and by commission, the members of which cannot be held to direct account by the voters. The Ontario License Commission is an outstanding illustration, and numbers of others could be cited.

England says that when the Irish agree as to what they want, they can have it. Agreement implies unanimity. The settlement of the Home Rule problem is as far off as ever. The Irish can meet in convention for the next twenty years without getting any nearer an agreement than they are today. The majority and the minority have been at odds for years. Home Rule is one of the problems that the verdict of the majority has not been permitted to decide. Until there is a unanimous expression of views, the British Parliament can delay settlement under the present agreement. Home Rule is as far in the distance as ever.

When will there ever be a government, in Canada or elsewhere, with moral courage enough to pursue a policy that it is convinced is right, regardless of consequences to itself.

SIR J. W. FLAVELLE.

PETERBOROUGH has a personal interest in birthaay honors that have been distributed by King George. Mr. J. W. Flavelle, who was born in this city, who was educated in the local schools, and who spent here the first years of his business career, has been created a baronet. He was one of the first superintendents of the George Street Methodist Sunday School, and during his residence in this city was always active in church and social work. Peterborough has always had a lively interest in his successful career, the citizens regarding him as one of themselves, and the honor conferred upon him by his Sovereign will be generally regarded as a compliment to this city. All will join in congratulating Sir J. W. Flavelle on the distinction that has come to him as a recognition of the inestimable service he has rendered the country, especially since the war broke out.

WHAT WILL HE SUPPORT?

SIR WILFRID LAURIER was asked to identify himself with the National Service Commission in order to help develop the voluntary system of raising recruits, and be refused.

He has been asked to co-operate with the Government in introducing conscription, but he hangs back. If he favors neither voluntaryism nor conscription, then what does he stand for? Probably the neutrality that appealed to him at the time of the Boer war, when he refused aid to the Empire until an indignant nation forced him into action.

Worse Than Autocrats.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

Czars and kaisers are bad enough, heaven knows, but it is a question whether the extreme socialists and their kindred cranks are not worse. Tyrants at least know how to take care of their own, but the other extreme does not seem to know how to take care of anything.

WHY THE DRUGGIST FAILED

"I heard to-day that Mr. Hylow, the druggist, is in financial difficulties," said the landlady. "He is a fine man, and I hope his reverses are not serious."

"I have long anticipated that Mr. Hylow would take a header sooner or later," observed the star boarder. "He is, as you say, a man of charming characteristics, but he lacks business accumen, Mrs. Jiggers. His Methods are not those of the man who lands in Easy Street with both feet.

"I have owed him 95 cents for three years. The debt was contracted at a time when he was trying to attract patronage by selling a dollar bottle of hair restorer for 95 cents. This move alone showed that he lacks business sense. If a man I going to have a reduced price sale he should make the reduction something worth while.

"At that period I was worrying greatly over the bald territory on my dome of thought. When a man first becomes bald he will do anything to alleviate his condition, and will believe any pharmacist who claims to have discovered a hair grower. As time goes on, however, the patient discovers that hair growers don't grow hair, and then he becomes reconciled to his baldness, and eventually takes pride in it and feels sorry for people who lack the distinction.

"However, as I was saying, I was at the worying stage at that epoch when Mr. Hylow announced his great reduced price sale, so I bought a bottle of his remarkable remedy, saying I would pay him as soon as I received a remittance from my brokess in Wall Street. I fully intended to keep my word; but when I applied the remedy to my scalp it not only failed to produce new hair, but it caused an unsightly and painful rash, so that I was ashamed to take off my hat for days together.

"I felt that I didn't owe Mr Hylow anything, under the circumstances. I believed, and still believe, that if money was due at all it was due to me, for a man should not be called upon to endure mental and physical anguish merely as a sporting proposition. There should be something in it for him.

"I presented this argument to Mr. Hylow when he presented his bill for the sixteenth time, but he accused me of being a swindler and faker, and said he would collect that 95 cents if he spent $100 and the rest of his life doing it. He has been trying to make good ever since, and you, Mrs. Jiggers, who understand how I stand up for a principle, must realize that he is far from his goal.

"I suppose he has worn out two pairs of shoes chasing me around town to collect that money. He has mailed me innumerable statements and bills, and upon each one there was a 2 cent stamp. He has written me many leters, some of them of a threatening and some of a beseeching nature, and those letters all called for more postage stamps. The value of the stationery should also be considered. He has caused his clerk to wast much valuable time pursuing me, and I suppose he pays that hireling at least $15 a week.

When I last saw him he said he was going to engage lawers to pursue the futile quest.. Is it any wonder that such a man is up against it? The marvel is that he has been in busines so long."

TRIALS LIKELY TO BESET THE MAN WITH THE BACKYARD GARDEN

"The man who operates a backyard garden this year," remarked the Bolivar street resident, "may or may not help solve the production problem, but one thing is certain—he is laying up no end of troubles for himself. I tried it last year and I ought to know."

"The police had to separate the neighbors on both sides from me, because they became accustomed to leaning over the fence and jeering at the garden—and when people cast aspersions on your garden you feel as if they had slandered your child. I'd like to know when a man asks whether something you're grown is intended to be corn or just spinach what a man can do to justiy his efforts except punch his face?

"The neighbors' wives would come to call on my wife and ask to see the garden and nearly laugh themselves to death. Many a happy afternoon they spent on guessing games. They would guess whether the fifth row was green peas or turnips planted upside down—and I had great difficulty restraining all the children in the block from choosing the spot for their little games of hide and seek. They said it was the nicest jungle anywhere around, and really, I hadn't the heart to blame them.

"I planted ten rows of corn and we plucked two ears during the summer. I had marvelous tomatoes! They actually were tropical in effect, but the three marbles they produced wouldn't even make one salad for the family. You simply couldn't imagine all the ways a simple, inoffensive vegetable can conjure up to go wrong when its heart is set on it. I believe the Swiss chard grew to look like leghorn hats just to spite me. Surely it could have attained no personal happiness by splaying out and turning yellow.

"I grew so melancholy over the vagaries of my garden that I managed to develop nervous prostration in the fall and had to take a lovely trip to cheer up. So when I think of all the trouble ahead of these unsuspecting amateurs—"

MASON'S MELODIES

Though days of strife be drawing near, though war may last for many a year, it is not well to yield to fear; cheer up! Don't let your optimism fade; you give the foe untimley aid when of your fears you make parade; cheer up! I have three uncles bearing arms; nine cousins went to war's alarms, and yet my smile retains its charms; cheer up! They say we'll soon be short of meat, we'll be deprived of corn and wheat, but, while we have enough to eat, cheer up! They say we'll bear upon our backs the burden of a frightful tax; just now no man that burden packs; cheer up! They're saying this and saying that, designed to knock our spirits flat, and "they" are talking through a hat—cheer up! Don't cross a bridge until you're there; don't look ahead to borrow care; don't starve until your cupboard's bare; cheer up! Don't try to chill the hopeful chap; you'll never help him win a scrap by having tears upon your map; cheer up! Just now we need no talk of gloom, no prophecies of dole and doom; be cheerful as the flowers in bloom—cheer up!

NEGLECT SMALL FRUIT

Eighty Per Cent. of Farmers in One Ontario County

Among the 400 farmers visited in 1916 in an Ontario county in connection with an agricultural survey conducted by the commission of conservation, it was found that 80 per cent. of the farmers were growing no small fruits. Bush fruits, such as the currants, raspberries, gooseberries, etc., could be easily grown and would yield an abundant supply of wholesome, fresh fruit for the table and for canning purposes. There are farmers who are successfully growing small fruits in their gardens in parts of Canada where the difficulties are great, while thousands of farmers who are more favorably situated and who would grow small fruits with the greatest ease, are neglecting to do so. This is a matter which should receive the earnest attention of all. It is poor business for the farmer to be paying out his money for canned fruits or for fresh fruit to be canned at home when a sufficient supply of most of the varieties desired can easily be grown in the home garden.

"AMERICAN DIVISION" A MYTH.

Total Number Fighting in Canadian Units Placed at About 3,750.

The ridiculous suggestion that there are enough Americans fighting in the Canadian units to enable an American division of 30,000 to 40,000 men to take the field at any time on the western front now, is riddled by the following facts in a letter written by Brigadier-General the Hon. James Mason, chief organizer of the Reserve Militia of Canada:

"While not for a moment thinking of detracting in any way from the credit due to those American citizens who are gallantly assisting us, I think, in justice to our own men, the following facts should be made known:

"I had occasion to make speeches in the Senate towards the end of the last session of Parliament on recruiting, and also on registration, and the figures I obtained in connection with the preparing of these speeches were official in every instance.

"Up to March 31st, 1916, out of a total of some 300,000 enlistments, the foreign born numbered 10,000; from this total of 10,000 there must be deducted Russians, French, Greeks, Italians, and other foreign reservists or patriots, who naturally preferred the facilities given in the Canadian army to those in their own distant forces, so probably not more than 5,000 of this total were Americans, and as the proportion of native Canadians enlisting increased after March, 1916, the outside total of Americans in our 400,000 men training in Canada and England or fighting at the front would be barely 7,500, with less than half that number actually in France.

"In view of this it is difficult to understand why such statements should be made, and I trust the press of Canada will do its best to correct this erroneous American impression, more especially as I am told New York papers the other day were sold on the streets to the cry of 'Great American Victory at Vimy.'"

Mushrooms.

We sometimes hear the complaint that by neglecting to use the mushrooms that grow wild in the woods and the fields, Canadians are wasting an important food. The would-be economists tell us that it is easy to distinguish the edible from the poisonous varieties, and urge us not to despise this food supply, which, like the manna of old, comes overnight. They sometimes attempt to show that in nutritive value a pound of mushrooms is equal to a pound of beefsteak. That is an exaggeration that the chemist easily disproves.

As a matter of fact mushrooms contain no more nourishment than any other of the green vegetables, and do contain as much or more indigestible material. Protein, which is the muscle-building and waste-repairing element of food, contains nitrogen; and so food analysts formerly assumed that they could estimate the protein content of any food by the amount of nitrogen it contained. That is how the mistake came about. Mushrooms contain, it is true, a considerable proportion of nitrogen, but so do crab shells.

Some of the nitrogenous constituents of mushrooms, furthermore, are substances related to protein, but readily converted through putrefactive changes within or without the body into active poisons. The amount of actual utilizable protein is perhaps as much as is contained to cabbage or in other greens, but scarcely more.

A good mushroom, properly cooked, is a very luscious morsel and as such is a welcome addition to the dietary. If you are absolutely sure that the variety that grows on your lawn or in the neighboring fields is of the edible kind, by all means cook it and eat it; it will do you good and start the secretion of the gastric juice by reason of its palatability. But if you have the least doubt of the innocuousness of the growth—and many poisonous kinds look attractively innocent—you had better leave it alone; the risk is too great and the possible gain in nutriment is too slight.

Frank About It.

"See here, madam, when are you going to pay up?"

"Pay up?"

"Yes; pay up."

"As soon as my husband concludes to settle down and bring around his pay envelope."

Nothing Overlooked.

"Whom were you talking with?"

"The iceman."

"What did he charge you for it?"

"Nothing."

"It will be in the bill, all right."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

CROUPY BABIES.

TO AN INEXPERIENCED MOTHER nothing is more alarming than to be awakened in the middle of the night by the struggles for breath and the choking cough of a croupy child. In the first place there is the fear that the disease may be diphtheria. In the second, there is the fear that the child may choke to death.

If the attack is the first the child has had the mother has a right to suspect diphtheria. She may look in the child's throat and find no membrane, but then she is not certain of herself. The only way to know with certainty is to send for a physician and have the throat examined and a culture made.

But mothers soon lose the alarm occasioned by croup, because the child who has had croup once will have it again. Some children never have croup; others, commencing when they are six months old and continuing until they are ten years old, have croup with every bad cold.

An attack of croup starts in as does an ordinary cold. Toward evening the cough changes from the ordinary to a typical croupy cough. The croupiness continues through the evening until bedtime. The child goes to sleep, but wakes up an hour or two later fighting for breath. The mother gives a dose of sirup of ipecac, rubs the chest with goose grease, and gets through the night. During the day the cough is better, but as night approaches the croupiness of the cough increases, and again sleep is disturbed by the onset of an attack of choking.

There must be some essential difference between children, which difference makes the same infection in some cause ordinary colds and in others croup. It is children with spasmophilic diathesis who have croup. Some people call it nervousness, but that is a very comprehensive and at the same time a very loosely used term.

Is there any way to tell whether a child is likely to develop into a croupy child? In the first place, there is the family history. Croup runs in families. In the second place, there is a history of convulsions or other nervous disorders in babyhood.

What can be done to prevent croup? A course of a month or two of calcium chloride each autumn is advisable. Three to fifteen grains of calcium chloride in water three times a day, according to the age of the child, should be given.

Spasmophilic children should be out of doors as much as possible. They should live in well-ventilated rooms. They do best when they are fed plenty of starches, breads, cereals, potatoes, and sweets, and a limited amount of lean meat, eggs, milk, and proteids generally. Their bowels must be kept regular.

NIGHT TERRORS.

A child, after sleeping somewhat fitfully for some hours, awakens screaming from fright. The mother gathers him in her arms and draws from him a story of some ogre or wild animal which would have reached him in a moment had he not screamed and tried to escape.

The difference between night terror and sleep walking or somnambulism is that in the latter the dream is fully acted out by most of the muscles of the body; in night terror it is only acted out by the vocal organs, and by them only in part. When a somnambulist dreams that a lion is after him he gets up and tries to run. The subject of night terror dreams about yelling and running. He puts the yell part of the dream into execution, but the running muscles are not awakened out of their sleep.

If the fault does not lie with some violent bedtime impression it may be found in some vivid experience of the earlier hours of the day. Kerley tells of a boy who had night terrors because he wore himself out during the day trying to keep up with a strenuous older brother. A girl had night terrors because she wore herself out making glass eyes. The staring eyes got on her nerves and her dreams about them would bring her up out of sleep in a frenzy of fear.

Now, practically, what is to be done with a child subject to night terrors? Give him worm medicine and let it go at that? Not in this generation. Why the trouble? Intense fear from violent dreams. Can fear be controlled, and how? By mental training. The child must not be told stories about goblins and ghosts. He must be taught that darkness has no terrors.

Next the study must be made of the habits of the child. Kerley thinks that indigestion due to bad eating habits is a frequent cause. He describes three cases in children with heavily-coated tongues, foul breaths, and intestinal indigestion. Such children are cured by changing the diet, changing the eating habits, and keeping the bowels open.

Night terror calls for change in habits, not for medicine.

AN AMERICAN TRIBUTE.

Words of Admiration Appeared in New York Tribune.

One of the warmest tributes that the Canadians have received from United States writers is that which appeared in The New York Tribune after the recent Battle of Vimy Ridge. It was all the more acceptable because during the early days of the war Americans, with the exception of a few men like Roosevelt, hardly gave any indication in their writings that they knew Canada was trying to do a fair share in the fight for liberty. The Tribune said:

"Every American will feel a thrill of admiration and a touch of honest envy at the achievement of the Canadian troops about Arras on Easter Sunday and the following day.

"The glory of the Canadian fight at Ypres salient has been too little appreciated on our side of the northern frontier. Rarely in history have troops, volunteer troops, suddenly exposed to a flank attack through no fault of their own, but by the collapse of their neighbors, had to bear a more terrific blow than that which followed the first gas attack. Yet in the midst of confusion, assailed by the appalling poison of German making, the Canadian volunteers stood and died as the British regulars had stood and died in the greater battle of Ypres of 1914.

"And now the Canadians have swept up the famous Vimy Ridge, which halted the French veterans of Foch and proved too great an obstacle for the genius of the greatest offensive fighter France has yet produced in the war. After long months of waiting the Canadians have had their hour. They have had a chance to avenge their comrades, crucified by German brutes in Flanders; they have had the opportunity to write the name of Canada upon the war map of Europe, and their imprint will be remembered in Germany quite as much as in America.

"We shall know later at what price this achievement was accomplished, but no price will be too high, and for Canada this day of victory will have a lasting value. For Canada, too, its value will be no less than for the British Empire.

"Nearly three-quarters of a million of Canadian and Australian troops have responded to the call of the British Empire, more than half of them wearing the Canadian maple leaf. German plotting, German scheming, the plans of the professors on paper and of the German soldiers on the map, have been answered in the only fashion in which it is possible to speak to Germany. . . .

"Americans will feel a certain envy in the thought that Canada has out-distanced us in reaching the battle line, which is the frontier of our common civilization. We shall take what comfort we may from the knowledge that among the Canadian forces are a small contingent of citizens of the United States, an unofficial vanguard, we shall trust, of that American army which is, in due course, to take its place along the French front. They are serving in worthy company.

"No praise of Canadian achievement can be excessive. From the plains and from the mountains, from the cities and from the prairies, Canada has poured out her thousands and her hundreds of thousands; she has sent across the ocean an army greater than Napoleon ever commanded on any battlefield; her volunteer regiments have shown the same stubborn and tenacious quality which is the glory of the British army.

"Canada's sons have won for liberty not merely a few square miles of French territory, but a victory which makes answer to the German idea that the world can be reconstructed without regard to the spirit of man: merely by material force.

"Our entrance into the war should make a new bond between the Canadians and ourselves."

Will Improve Relations.

Participation by the United States in the war will have one result in which all good Americans can rejoice without misgivings and without qualifications. It will help enormously to remove misunderstanding between the Canadian and American nations and to lay an indispensable foundation for their future co-operation. If the United States had refused to come in our Canadian neighbors would, rightly or wrongly, have always considered us as recreant to the ideals which underlie their institutions as well as ours, and they would have cherished a resentment which would have interfered with their future ability to act and think along common lines. Let us be thankful we have been saved from such a calamity. Of all the disasters which could have overtaken the foreign relationship of the United States, permanent or radical estrangement from Canada would have been the worst.—The New Republic.

Marie, the Medal
A French Model

IT was between Chaton and Bongival, near Grenouillere, that Marcellin, the engraver of medals, first met his model, Marie, in the year 1870. Perhaps there never were two human beings more fitted to understand one another. He with his reddish beard, his velvet clothes, his great soft felt hat and his clay pipe, seemed a dauber or collector of romantic old lithographs; she with her little sailor hat, trimmed with a two-cent ribbon, shod in low shoes and dressed in a printed calico skirt, had all the liveliness, charm, and grace of those last grisettes painted by Courbet, a little before the time when he painted them lying on the banks of streams, lying among the rushes simply dressed in cornflowers, above which fluttered dragon flies.

"A girl on the banks of the Seine," such was Marie in those days; and the trips in rowboats near Asnieres, the parties in the out-of-door restaurants, these innocent amusements Marie adored in her childish way, never dreaming of being shut up in a studio in Batignolles.

Marcellin did not only love the sunlight and gold of the grain, but also when it crowned a woman's head. He was astonished, he went up to her and spoke; and in those happy days artists were not proud, but gay and frank. Marcellin and Marie talked under a green arbor, and there before a little table with Argenteuil wine and Manterre cakes they formed a friendship.

A word, which Gustave Courbet, the gifted artist, had formerly said, then possessed him, and notwithstanding the enticing smell of the luncheon, the dancing couples under the trees, it sang in his memory: "Ah! my old one! When we shall have excavated all the world. . . . we shall then need other money than theirs. . . . Then there will no longer be an emperor crowned with laurels and pretended victories, but a beautiful young girl, a daughter of the people, with an ample brow, a straight nose, a little chin and on her hair the Phrygian cap—"!

It was in 1873—the prophesied days had come, the days foreseen by the man in his leather belt and clay pipe, the bold Jean-Comtois, Gustave Courbet, who in his beautiful dream had thought to revolutionize the world, as he had revolutionized painting. It was a tryng moment, certainly, and the last groans of the enemies' cannon, the last bursting discharge of musketry silenced the insurrection, and echoed still mingling with booming bells and drums in Marcellin's brain.

He was quickly asked, as the most capable artist, during those first days, to make the designs for the money of the republic. Marcellin, fired with zeal for the work, began to work at once.

He sought, meditated, tried and tried for a long time; then suddenly in a few days with all the application, love, and inspiration of his art, he engraved that perfect medal, which bears that sweet profile, crowned with ears of corn, so pure—the living profile of Marie.

The great success was not alone for Marcellin; but Marie also had her part in the hour of glory and joy. "Marie—the medal!" That was the name given to the young girl by the last habitues of that Bohemia. The deadly winter of "l'annee terrible," worse than any she had ever experienced, aggravated that mysterious pain, which already shook the delicate chest, turned the thin arms and sometimes suddenly colored Marie's high cheek bones.

Then during the first beautiful days of the new-born summer, guided by an obscure instinct, which predicted the future, the poor little, ill Marie wished, in remembrance of years gone by, that the medalist should take her to Bongival, near Grenouillere. But returning, when both of them walked slowly, Marcellin realized that never again could Marie be dressed as "la jeune fille au Vords de la Seine," crowned with golden grain, leaning on his arms under the shady trees. The time had come for her, who was but twenty years old, to pay for those long years of deprivation and sadness in her childhood, those luncheons for two cents, all those terrible hours, when her lovely face did not glow with the happiness brought by the engraved medal for the money of the republic.

The morning when Marie's body was taken to the cemetery was several weeks later. All her friends of Montmartre were there. All those who, like the birds, have their nests and studios on the "Butte," near the mills; those from Batignolles, accustomed to the people and their sonorous songs; those from Montparnasse hung about silently. All in that long procession wore only velvet trousers, large berets of cloth, ample cloaks, and carried natty canes. Here and there were good-natured little women, models with pale, powdered faces, children of the ball, just as Marie had been formerly, they followed the long line as it wound away to the cemetery.

Leading that melancholy procession Marcellin walked, bowed with genuine grief. And as the sun mounted in the sky and flooded the procession with its joyous light, the artist, lover, and medalist thought of the dear, silent young girl, and consoled himself with the thought that she could never entirely disappear from the world, for in the coming ages men would seek for the medal bearing her profile, respect, honor, and admire it, as the savants of his day did the wonderful medal of the Greek goddess Athena. The unchangeable bronze medal of his beloved Marie, crowned with the ears of golden corn and the blue corn flowers of France.—Translated from the French of Pilon.

The Cadi and the Thief.

The Cadi, having a man before him charged with stealing two sheep and having given the thief a fair hearing and found him guilty, imposed a sentence of six months. The man at first seemed satisfied, but of a sudden he threw up his hand and cried out:

"O Cadi, thou art called a wise and just man, but injustice has been done me in this affair."

"How so?" was asked.

"I have been tried and sentenced for stealing two sheep."

"And the evidence all goes to show that you are guilty."

"But, O Cadi, when I had driven the sheep away I found that they had suffered the loss of their tails. Sheep are born with tails. Cut them off and the sheep are still sheep, but they are not whole sheep. I should have been tried for stealing portions of two sheep, and the sentence could not have been so great. I petition for a new trial."

"You petition is denied," replied the Cadi, "and I add two months to the sentence."

"But for why?"

"For not stealing two long tailed calves in place of two bob tailed sheep."

Moral.—The man who is not satisfied with a little law can always get more. That's about the only liberal thing in this country.

The Wolf and the Fox.

The Wolf and the Fox, having met in the forest one day, agreed upon a truce between them while they should hunt the Rabbit in company. Presently the burrow of a bunny was discovered, and, knowing by the scent that she was home, the Wolf took his station on one side of the mouth of the burrow and the Fox on the other. After a silence of five minutes the Wolf observed:

"I presume she is an old Rabbit."

"I should say she was rather young," replied the Fox.

"And I think she is a little deaf."

"And I think her hearing is all right."

"We might as well decide now as to who has the head and who the body—that is, it's already decided that I have the latter."

"Hardly, Mr. Wolf. This is to be a square deal. The body is to be divided lengthways."

"It will be just as I say about it."

"I guess not."

"What, you defy me?"

"And you think you can bamboozle me!"

And thereupon a fight took place, during which the Rabbit escaped unseen. The Wolf was the stronger and finally drove the Fox away, and as he limped off himself the Owl, who had witnessed the affair from her perch, remarked:

"Moral.—The thieves who divide their plunder beforehand seldom get any to divide."

It would be all right to make haste slowly if that were the way haste is made.

We are getting older every day, but so are the rest of human creatures, so what's the difference?

The reason why there are so many persons dead sure that they know how to run the world is because they never have a chance to prove themselves wrong.

We have to do some things because we want to and a lot of others because our better half wants to.

We are always waiting to get an opportunity instead of going out and making one out of hand.

Popular King of Spain Is One European Ru'er Whose People Adm're Him

THERE is no more popular monarch in all Europe today than King Alfonso of Spain. Republicans and Conservatives, Clericals and anti-Clericals, hold a place of affection for him in their hearts. He is referred to fondly as Alfonsito, "dear Alfonso," because he is the King of the people. The posthumous child of Alfonso XII., he was born their king, and grew up familiarly among them. His infant portrait adorned their postage stamps. The citizens of Madrid were so accustomed to see him in his daily promenades with his admirable mother, the Queen Regent, a blond, curly-haired, smiling child, that they paid little heed to him.

On the Plaza of San Sebastian, he romped and tossed a ball and played like any other human child. Never did he show any wilfulness or ill temper. He bore a remarkable likeness to his attractive mother, who accompanied him always, in his walks, on his drives, at play, and to divine service. Now that he is king he is a republican among monarchs, a friend of the people and their popular idol. They have laughed at the pranks of his youth, and now they praise and sympathize with the serious work of humanity which he has taken upon his shoulders since the world's war has deluged the rest of Europe with blood.

KING ALFONSO

According to correspondence from Madrid, King Alfonso has under his personal direction one of the most stupendous humanitarian works created by the war. In addition to looking after the interests of those nations which have broken with the Central Empires, through his legations in the latter countries, he has organized in his own palace at Madrid a system of research for the lost, missing, or wounded on the battle front, besides interceding for those in the hands of the Huns who may yet be saved.

The published cablegram of an agonized mother and father appealing to His Majesty to obtain information of their son of the British Royal Aviation Corps, who was last seen flying over the English Channel, is given as a single example of the two hundred thousand cases which have come before him. Of these, one hundred and fifty thousand are reported as disposed of, while fifty thousand are still under investigation. Many of the soldiers reported missing have been found alive in prison camps, while thirty thousand civilians in the invaded sections of Belgium and France have been located for their families. Nor is this all. A great number of seriously wounded have been returned to their respective Governments through his intercession, at least forty-four pardons have been granted at his request, of which nearly half were death sentences, mostly of women accused of being spies.

It is a vast amount of work that this monarch is doing, showing how seriously he can take a grave task to heart. It may be remembered that it was not long ago that in the exuberance of youth he rode his horse up the palace stairs. Now in that same palace it is hurry, worry and work with him.

With such a King, revolution in Spain is a dead issue. That country is already a democracy with a democratic monarch at its head. Proof of this was given not long ago when Alfonso refused to accept the resignation of his ministry, which was a Liberal one, and now that the same cabinet has again resigned because of the division in public opinion with regard to its foreign policy, the King still favors a continuance of Spanish democracy as is shown by the new cabinet, which continues to be a Liberal one.

BOWSER IS TENDER

He Comes Home and Finds Mrs. Bowser With a Headache.

When Mrs. Bowser arose the other morning she found herself heavy headed, and black specks floated before her eyes. It was a billious attack, and she knew that she was in for a long day's headache. She said nothing to Mr. Bowser, knowing how he regarded such things, but went down to breakfast with false cheerfulness. The sight of food nauseated her, and he, being busy thinking of a deal he had on hand and being in a hurry to get away from the house, noticed nothing unusual.

Ten minutes after Mr. Bowser had departed Mrs. Bowser was in bed again with throbbing temples. The cook came up to say:

"It is what you call appendiceetus, ma'am. I had a brother who was seized with the mortal ailment, and he looked just like you do."

"It is nothing but a headache, Maggie," was the reply.

"Are you sure it is not typhoid fever? I had a sister who came down with typhoid fever, and her eyes had the same glare yours have got."

"I told you it was only a billious headache, and after you have laid a wet towel on my forehead I wish you would go down and leave me alone. It almost cracks my head open to talk."

"POOR GIRL! POOR GIRL!"

"I will do as you say, ma'am, and I hope it won't be a case of consumption. I had a cousin who was tooken down with consumption, and we who stood watching over his bedside saw his ears twitch. I don't think yours are twitching any, however, and you may recover from it. There you are with the wet towel, and here I go, and I will come up every half hour to see if you are dead or living. If I find you dead I will run for the coroner and the police and the fire department. I have studied to be a trained nurse, and I know just what to do."

Mrs. Bowser dozed at intervals all day, and she had a bad day of it. One of the things that she worried about, sleeping or waking, was the return of Mr. Bowser at dinner time. She knew just how he would act and just what he would say. He would declare that it was all her fault; that she had gone around barefooted and caught cold; that she had eaten a whole cocoanut and thus upset her stomach, that she had done a dozen things no sensible woman would do. Having brought the headache on herself she must get over it by herself. He could have no sympathy for such a careless woman. Then he would go downstairs to eat his dinner alone and grow more vexed every minute, and when he was through with the meal he would go down to the furnace and slam and bang the door and toss the poker across the cellar to make all the noise he could. Mr Bowser wouldn't do these things to be mean, but just as a moral lesson to teach her to be more careful of her health.

Mr. Bowser came home.

Mrs. Bowser heard him open the door and shivered.

The cook heard him come in and saw that the way was clear across the back yard to the alley in case she had to make a skip for it.

Not seeing Mrs. Bowser in the hall or the sitting room Mr. Bowser descended to the kitchen and asked:

"Has Mrs. Bowser gone shopping?"

"No, sir," replied the cook. "Mrs. Bowser is lying on her dying bed upstairs and has been ever since you left the house this morning. If I knew how to work that telephone I should have had at least four doctors here hours ago."

Having said this, she prepared herself for the impending outburst, but none came. Mr. Bowser turned pale and walked softly up two pairs of stairs and still more softly opened the bedroom door. Mrs. Bowser lay with closed eyes, and he tiptoed to the bed and kissed her and smoothed down her hair and whispered:

"Poor girl! Poor girl! I am so sorry for you. I'll go down at once and telephone for the doctor and tell him to let nothing interfere with coming at once."

"I wouldn't do it, my dear," replied Mrs. Bowser as she opened her eyes. "I have had one of those beastly billious headaches all day, but I am getting the better of it now."

"Thank heavens!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he raised his hands. "Maggie told me that you were as good as dead, and it took all my courage to come up here. Ah, yes, you are better, and probably by tomorrow you can be out of bed again. I am not a trained nurse, of course, but as any doctor will tell you, the first thing is for you to get some food in your stomach. Mrs. Bowser, how would you like some fried pork sausages?"

The invalid managed to restrain the smile which was coming to her face and the shudder which was going to shake the bed and feebly shook her head in reply.

"My grandmother always wanted fried pork sausages when she had a headache, but of course things have changed since her day. I wish Maggie had known enough to have a corned beef dinner. With a choice among the meat, cabbage, carrots, beets and grains you could probably have found something to tickle your palate."

"We will have such a dinner some day next week," replied Mrs. Bowser. "I do not want anything to eat tonight."

"But a doctor would insist," persisted Mr. Bowser. "I will run downstairs and counsel with Maggie."

Maggie was of the opinion when gravely consulted that a cocoanut pie would be much better than anything in the meat line, and Mr. Bowser was not more than a minute in getting under his hat and inside his overcoat and starting on a run for the bakery. He was back in less than ten minutes with a bland and good natured look and cocoanut pie, and with his own hands he cut it in halves and hastened upstairs. Mrs. Bowser thanked him very sweetly, but declined to eat. She said that in about three days she would eat three cocoanut pies all at once if he asked her to.

"But there must be something," he went on as he scratched his head in a puzzled way. "How about chicken soup? I can get the chicken at the butcher's in five minutes."

"Let it go this evening, dear."

"But mutton broth?"

"You are very kind, Mr. Bowser, but we won't talk of anything more in the food line. You may wet and wring out the towel, if you will, and then I will try to sleep again."

Mr. Bowser hastened to do as she wanted and then patted her cheek in a loving way and walked softly out of the room. He went down into the kitchen and told Maggie that he had pulled Mrs. Bowser through the crisis and was quite sure she would live. He warned her against rattling the dishes or the stove lids and then went up to the sitting room and took a seat and folded his arms and waited. He felt a glad relief and did not kick at the cat when she came around to rub against his leg. He thought of telephoning to the doctor. But what could the doctor do more than he had done if he should respond? He thought of the way he had conducted himself on previous occasions, and he felt ashamed of himself.

Mr. Bowser heard autos and wagons going past the house with a rattling and a banging, and he wanted to rush out and throw frozen potatoes at the heads of the drivers.

A cat wailed out in the back yard, and he softly raised a window and made use of such words as promptly sent her jumping over a seven foot fence.

There was a boy yelled out in front of the house, and he wished that that boy had no less than six boils on his legs.

There came a long interval of silence, and Mr. Bowser was dozing off to sleep when there came a sharp ring at the door. He started up with muttered imprecations on the head of whoever it might be and tiptoed down the hall and opened the door. There stood a man who whiningly asked:

"Boss, can you give a poor fellow 10 cents for a night's lodging?"

"I will give you ten, twenty, fifty, a hundred!" shouted Mr. Bowser as loud as he dared, and he surprised that poor unfortunate by throwing him off the steps headfirst into a snowdrift and then picking him out again and throwing him over the fence. Neither of them enjoyed the performance very much—the tramp because he was the victim and Mr. Bowser because he had to be quiet about it.

The tender hearted guardian and protector of Mrs. Bowser returned to the house and his watch, and nothing further occurred to create a disturbance. Even the cricket on the hearth buttoned up his lips, as they used to term it.

Bowser nodded. Bowser slept. In his dreams he saw Mrs. Bowser dancing around the room and declaring that she had never felt so good in ten years.

The bells struck midnight. Bowser awoke. Mrs. Bowser stood before him and was saying:

"My headache is all gone, Mr. Bowser, and I want to thank you for your kindness."

"Y-e-s," he replied, with blinking eyes. "You had one of your durned old headaches and made me no end of trouble. You brought it on yourself by some careless act, and if you ever do it again it will mean but one thing—divorce!"

Bowser had recovered from his tenderheartedness. He was Bowser again.

Getting Even.

"When I left home twenty years ago nobody thought I would ever amount to anything," said the prosperous manufacturer.

"You fooled 'em, eh?"

"I should say so! Just for spite I leased every available billboard and plastered my name all over my native village."

Save the Food and Serve the Empire !

The Average Canadian Family Wastes Enough to Feed a Soldier

"The Kitchen must help as well as the Workshop and the Trenches"
Lloyd George.

INTELLIGENT economy in the kitchen can do much to prevent the threatened world famine—can counteract the effect of high prices—and can replace growing debt with systematic saving.

Careful investigations show that before the war the average British family wasted 25% of their food—and we Canadians were even more extravagant.

This waste is not in a few big things, but in many little ones, each, we used to think, too small to bother about—such as careless peeling of vegetables and fruit—failure to make good use of dripping and "left-overs"—and such others as will occur to every thrifty housekeeper.

For the Empire's sake as well as your own, hunt up and cut out these leaks ! You'll be helping to relieve the food shortage—saving your own money—and putting yourself in a position to buy Canadian War Savings Certificates and help win the war.

War Savings Certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, to be repaid in three years at full face value. They cost $21.50, $43 and $86 respectively, at all Money Order Post-Offices and Banks, thus yielding over 5% Interest. Should you need it, you can get your money back at any time. 19

RETURNED EXILE

"Grandmother of the Russian Revolution" Is 73 Years Old.

WOMAN WHO DEFIED A CZAR.

The New Russian Minister of Justice, M. Kerenski, Has Invited "Baboushka," as She Is Affectionately Known, to Return to Petrograd.

Ekaterina Breshkovskaya was only eighteen when, by her own confession, she began to "think." She is now seventy-three, and she has been doing brave and noble thinking throughout the interval.

The fruit of her thinking is a message which she has received from Petrograd. That message she awaited through forty years of exile, the last few years in the frozen city of Yakutsk. The coming of democracy in Russia brought her home from exile.

Her prison place is so near the arctic circle that the daylight is only twilight for two-thirds of the year and the blazing hot summer lasts only two months. There is no spring and no autumn. The snow is on the ground up to the middle of May, and heavy frost falls in August. To this hell she was sent because she had learned to "think."

One of the first telegrams that throbbed their way across Siberia after the initial success of the upheaval at Petrograd was the message to the "Grandmother of the Russian Revolution," informing her that the cause for which she had worked since she was a young girl had triumphed; that the imperial throne had tottered to its fall and that the Russian people wanted her to return to them.

The first time Ekaterina Breshkovskaya was sent to Siberia was in 1874. She has twice been sentenced to the silver mines of [illegible] who was ever sent there. The daughter of a nobleman and an official, she has swung the pick and pushed the barrow in a mine for years. Her last sentence was carried out less than three years ago, when she was transferred at seventy-one from noisome Kirensk a full 2,000 versts farther north and east to frozen Yakutsk.

Some idea of the misery to which Mme. Breshkovskaya has been condemned for more than half her long lifetime may be gathered from her own grim statement, "Every place in Siberia has its own peculiar poison."

To a friend whose affection she had gained on her visit to America in 1904 this grand old woman of Russian liberty and of world liberty wrote a few months ago a letter which breathes an indomitable spirit. It also discloses the pathos of a great tragedy. She wrote in this letter:

"Every minute when I am out of doors I am followed by a row of policemen, and one of them enters the house and even the apartments where I am staying.

"It is not difficult to wait. There are so many excellent moments in my life. They are a part of my existence.

"Do not be sorry for my eyes. The oculists say my eyes will serve me long enough when carefully used."

Long enough for what? Long enough to see the wonder for which she has been waiting and working since she began to "think." Long enough to see her people free—that vast gray mass which had suffered silence for so many centuries that it had sunk into a semi-[illegible]

[illegible]

We have learned in the sharpest of schools that certain things are bad: the lust of power, the cult of physical domination, the scheming of dynasties, the perverting of the national will, secret and selfish diplomacy, the privileges of special castes. We have learned that all these things breed death; and that with bad system things must be worse before they become better.

We must register a high vow to make the total force of Canada count for open and above board diplomacy, for the brotherhood of mankind, for democratic control that will institutionalize the aspirations of the plain people who suffer, who toil, who pay. Coming upon us at a time when we were yet in a condition of loosely formative national consciousness, we must demonstrate at the close of the war that Canada stands for the policy of a world organized on the basis, not of war but of peace, not of pillage but of co-operation, not of aggrandisement, but of human service.—The Winnipeg Free Press.

The Wood Oil Tree.

The Chinese wood-oil tree is probably not very long-lived, and in this respect may be compared to the silver maple. The flowers come out before the leaves, and are about as large as catalpa flowers. As an ornamental tree it is likely to be about as desirable as the catalpa, but the soft wood is of little value. The real value of this tree lies in the fact that the nuts contain one of the best drying oils, called wood or tung oil. In recent years the oil has revolutionized the varnish industry, for it has made possible the manufacture of a quick-drying varnish that is less liable to crack than that made from kauri gum. Tung oil has also been found of special value in waterproof priming for cement.

Chinese Paper.

A factor in the ultimate relief of the paper shortage may be the action of the Chinese Government which has decided to have paper making [illegible] in Government [illegible] schools.

Crosswise Strips

If a thing is worth doing at all it is worth doing right. To cut crosswise strips so that they will measure the same width throughout see that the cut edge of the material is quite even, and in the case of double width material open it to its full width and place it flat on the table without [illegible]. Take the cut edge and lay it evenly along the right hand selvedge in a straight line across the material and a diagonal fold running from left to right, pin to keep fold sharp and even, cut through the fold, measure the width of strip required and mark at a distance of a few inches with chalk, then cut with a pair of sharp scissors to line. It will be wise to mark width needed on a piece of cardboard and measure with this, then the width is sure to be the same throughout.

SUNDAY STORY OF WAR

The official statement announces an enemy attack repulsed with loss south of Oppy. Enemy's positions south of the Souchez River were attacked. Good progress was made and a number prisoners captured. During Saturday night the enemy attacked British advanced posts south of Cherisy and at first made some progress but counter attacks regained all ground lost except one post.

Five heavy attacks by Germans on French positions on the Vauclere and Californe Plateaus were all repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy.

Since April first the British and French captured one thousand officers and over fifty-one thousand men, 446 heavy and field cannon, one thousand machine ghns and a considerable number of trench guns.

The official statement records destruction of 147 Turkish loaded sailing vessels on the Black Sea besides many depots and other posts.

The American mission to Russia headed by Elihu Root, has arrived at a Russian port.

Russian troops on the Caucasus front occupied three heights near Sakis after a battle with the Turks. The Turkish force which attacked southeast of Erzingan was repulsed. Kurds continue attacking the Russian rear.

Some concern is felt at Washington over reported German attempts to secure an island off the Venezulean coast for a submarine base.

BARRIEFIELD CAMP NOTES.

The various schools of instruction will start heir work this week.

Lt. "Vin" Bullis has been appointed adjutant of the Special Service Company, vice Lt. Granam, who has been transferred to guard duty at Trenton.

The I. S. of I. is making preparations to go into camfp. Lt.-Col. Barragar and staff are already in camp, and the school will be conducted at Barriefield.

The C.A D.C. under Major Wilson is preparing a dental office at the camp.

The mechanical transport unit is in camp, and the big "Kelly" trucks are busy transferring supplies from the city to the camp.

Capt. McCulla's men of the O.S.C. have opened their stores at the camp and are issuing necessary camp requisites.

Staff-Sergt. Robbs of the A. S. C. has opened the butcher shop of the A. S. C., and it is a credit to the butcher.

All units in camp this year will occupy the grounds north of the headquarters. The grounds along the Gananoque road will not be used this year.

The new road built by the engineers last year is used this year as the main entrance to camp headquarters.

The Kingston Veterans' Association is making arrangements to supply the soldiers at the camp with newspapers, magazines and all general reading matter along with a good circulating library.

Brig.-Gen. T. D. R. Hemming will occupy a large and roomy bungalow adjacent to the headquarters mess. The bungalow was built with wood picked up at the end of the camp season last year and is no expense to the Government.

The Engineers are busy building a tile pipe drain from the headquarters through the lines, thus doing away with the usual drainage nuisance.

Lt.-Col. Sharpe, late of the 136th Battalion, who returned recently from the front for the second time, will be brigade officer at the camp this year. Capt. McManus will be camp adjutant.

It is understood that all fruit and refreshment stands on the Gananoque road will be out of bounds this year, as last year, and the soldiers will patronize the camp canteens only.

Trophies From Vimy.

A varied assortment of Vimy trophies, machine guns, mortars, and field guns, are being prepared to be shipped out to Canada. These will be a feature of the fall fairs.

From the dugouts of Vimy ridge and from prisoners taken there were obtained many letters, diaries, and other documents indicating the efficiency of our preparatory artillery fire, as well as the accuracy of our information on which it was based. Some of these have been translated. They prove that the enemy had heavy losses in man and material before the infantry were loosed upon him, and that even more serious was his loss of confidence as he saw his trenches blown away and his guns buried.

"Hell is let loose." In this phrase a German gunner chronicled on March 31st the opening of our artillery attack.

The record of a trench mortar battery shows that day after day the mortars were buried. Day after day the patient gunners dug out their weapons only to have them buried again deeper than before. In despair, the day before the assault, a gunner writes:

"Everything is buried, the entrance to our shelter, the gun emplacements, the whole trench ammunition supply and fuses—all buried."

Just before the assault an infantryman made this record:

"Nobody imagines how frantic it is here. It is almost worse than the Somme. There is no longer a trench; only shellholes and mine craters. Losses on losses. We are now only a third, and two-thirds are missing. Here one can only give up hope, as if this lasts a fortnight longer nothing will remain of the division, and one is up to the middle in mud and filth. One almost despairs, but there is nothing one can do, unless one wishes to ———." Here the diary ends.

ATTRACTIVE DINING CAR SERVICE

Probably nothing helps more to make a railway journey really enjoyable than a visit to the "Dining Car," especially if it be a Canadian Pacific Dining Car, where the passenger is assured of the highest form of efficiency in the culinary art; the choicest provisions that the market affords prepared on the scientific principle known as "Dietetic Blending."

Your favorite dish, as you like it, may be enjoyed at reasonable cost, amidst ideal surroundings, while travelling on the Canadian Pacific.

Fighting the Pirates.

In all 376 Canadians are now engaged in combatting the German submarines, as members of the Royal Naval Auxiliary Patrol, and, according to reports which have come to the Naval Service Department at Ottawa, all have acquitted themselves well and have reflected credit upon the Dominion. Of the number 264 are sub-lieutenants or officers of the submarine-chasers and 112 are chief motorboat men, or motorboatmen, the mechanics of the craft. Of the 112 motorboatmen 43 are from British Columbia; 32 from Ontario, of whom 11 are from Toronto and six from Ottawa; 21 from the Province of Quebec, of whom 15 are Montreal men, nine from Alberta, four from Saskatchewan, and three from Manitoba.

Quail Fad in Japan.

The latest fancy among the wealthy people of Japan is the collecting and breeding of rare species of quails. It threatens to rival the mania for tulip bulbs that once seized the Hollanders. Enormous prices are paid for rare birds. Mr. Yoshida, a millionaire, recently gave 17,000 yen ($8,500) for a white quail—king of the race in beauty and price. One of the large Tokio shops has caught on the idea as a fashion novelty and is selling kimonos embroidered with white and golden-hued quail designs. The modiste had Mr. Yoshida's king quail sketched and is reproducing the splendid bird in high-priced garments.

VINES FOR SHADE.

What to Choose to Screen Your Porch or Your Back Fence.

Vines for shading purposes require dense growth. One of the ways to get this after the proper ones have been selected is to insure good soil, plenty of water and frequent cultivation Vines must make their growth quickly and uninterruptedly to make good screening or shading, and for this reason hardy perennial ones are best.

To show rapid top growth a vine must have a large root mass. This can be assured by planting in a specially prepared trench or pit excavated to a depth of eighteen inches If the subsoil is hardpan or sticky clay, drainage material consisting of broken stones, large clinkers from the furnace or other mineral rubbish should be put in the bottom to a depth of three inches.

Dense growing vines are gross feeders and soon exhaust the soil in the trenches if it is not naturally good and kept up yearly. All those recommended prefer a soil with an alkaline reaction, which is secured by the use of lime. If a good soil is not available make one from chopped up sods or good garden loam, adding one-third the bulk of well rotted horse manure

For screening a north porch there is nothing better than the Dutchman's pipe vine (aristolochia), a vigorous and rapidly growing vine, bearing when grown in sunshine brownish flowers resembling a pipe.

Another good vine for the north porch is the new form of the Virginia creeper, known as Ampelopsis engelmanni, with very dense foliage of a light green color turning to crimson in the fall.

Both these vines for shaded places should be cut off a foot from the ground every winter and new shoots run up every spring, as this insures a more dense growth of foliage.

The bignoria when grown semi-dwarf is a good vine for the trellis. It bears profusely large trumpet flowers and is a rank grower. It should be cut back to a foot in height annually as it tends to make coarse stems if allowed to grow at will.

The hop vines (Humulus bepulus) are very good for screening from the sun, growing very luxuriantly.

The euonymus is especially good for low porches, where a dense shade is desired. It is evergreen and of a deep green color

Many persons like honeysuckle for shade, and it is good if properly grown so that the foliage is well distributed all over the vines. In order to accomplish this it should be grown on a trellis of wide mesh so that it can be cut back to the porch floor each winter and the old growth removed. Frequent clippings during the season will insure a continuance of bloom during a longer period. The best variety for screening is halleana, yellow and white and very fragrant.

Afternoon Togs.

Combinations of afternoon blouses on the elaborate type made to wear with separate skirts that may be made at home or bought in the shops are very successful. They give the appearance of a whole dress and are all right for ordinary afternoon social occasions.

Lingerie Gowns.

A striking feature of many Paris lingerie gowns of net is the knee length blouse worn over a narrow underskirt, and the blouse in most instances is elaborately embroidered by hand.

Sir Oliver Lodge Says

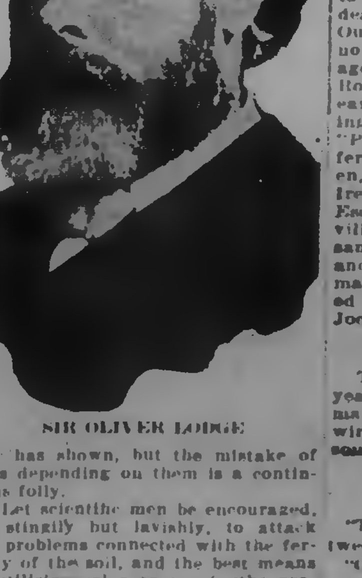
England Can Grow Food

Necessary For People

SIR OLIVER LODGE, in an appeal for greater state aid of scientific research, declares his belief that England can grow all the food necessary for her people, if proper scientific methods are employed. He says:

"People state that the area of the British isles is too small to feed the inhabitants. The effort has never been made. The area is certainly inadequate if in the twentieth century we use the methods of the twelfth. But it must be known that of late years discoveries of the utmost importance have cropped up in sporadic manner through individual enterprise and at private cost, though application of these discoveries on a large scale has still to be made. And no one can doubt that a multitude of other vital truths are awaiting discovery at the hands of biologists and chemists.

"Either we must grow our own food, or we must labor at other things to provide the wherewithal to purchase it from abroad. How dependent we are on other lands the war has shown, but the mistake of thus depending on them is a continuous folly.



SIR OLIVER LODGE

"Let scientific men be encouraged, not stingily but lavishly, to attack the problems connected with the fertility of the soil, and the best means of utilizing solar energy in the production of the right kind of vegetation, and good results are bound to follow. What the nation chiefly lacks in this matter is faith.

"The satisfactory promotion of scientific discovery is an affair of millions of pounds sterling. The nation can afford to be lavish. The young energy and the brains are ready; the means and equipment are lacking. Even now, in war time, the ancient strangle-hold of official parsimony is tight in many instances, and not even now is official expenditure authorized which would enable schemes to move in the right direction. Private purses have to be appealed to, or we have to take refuge in other work of a less expensive character.

"So it has always been in the history of science. Poverty and self-sacrifice are writ large on the portals of every scientific and educational establishment.

"Has the nation learned that it can afford a great deal more in these directions than it thought it could? If it has, the result will be brilliant beyond all expectation."

The Famous Proclamation.

The now famous proclamation of Sir Stanley Maude to the people of Bagdad, which was issued shortly after the occupation of the great city of the kalifs by the British forces, occasioned much speculation as to its authorship. It was clearly the work, as was pointed out at the time, of one to whom the East was an open book, and whilst it had "all the flowery echoings of the language of Haroun al-Raschid and of the 'Arabian Nights,'" it was, none the less, in fact and in purpose, a great document. Many people were inclined to look in the direction of Lord Curzon; but it now appears that the proclamation was drawn up by Sir Mark Sykes, who is, of course, a famous traveler in Persia and the East.

An Irish-English Peerage.

One of the many quaint byways of the peerage which render British honors and distinctions so puzzling to foreigners is recalled by the recent death of the Earl of Roden, says The Outlook. The Jocelyn family was ennobled under that title, "in the peerage of Ireland," in 1771, when Robert Jocelyn was created an Irish earl "Earl of Roden, of High Roding, Co. Tipperary," as the various "Peerages" and other books of reference show. But where is "Roden," or "High Roding"? Not in Ireland, "Co. Tipperary," but in Essex, where there are eight Roding villages on the little river of the same name. Between High Roding and Aythorp Roding still exist the remains of a once stately mansion called "New Hall," built by Sir Thomas Jocelyn about 1550.

Lifetime of Wire.

Telegraph wires will last for forty years near the seashore, but in the manufacturing districts the same wires will last only ten years, and sometimes less.

The Difference.

"There isn't much difference between a bachelor and a married man"

"Oh, isn't there?"

"No."

"You bet your life there is."

"What is it?"

"A bachelor tries to please nobody, and a married man has to please his wife."

POOR APPLE CROP.

According to advices received by Mr. P. W. Hodgetts, director of the fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture, Toronto, the 1917 apple crop will be no larger than that of 1916. Prince Edward County reports a bumper crop outlook, but practically all the other large orchards of the province predict that the crop will be light. Abundant bloom on cherry, pear and plum trees is reported from all sections.

BILL SIKES' GRIEVANCE

"Holiday Thief" Was Caught For Trying Luck Too Often

A certain prominent British prison official used to take his annual holiday regularly during the first weeks in September, when he would lock up his house and hand the key to a local agent. For two years in succession the holiday burglar had paid the premises a visit, and when his third year's holiday became due, knowing something of the rogue's fondness for returning constantly to the same spot, he decided to remain and see whether he could lay a trap for the intruder.

His house was, as usual, shut up and deserted, but he returned home stealthily. On the fourth day, when he should, in the ordinary course of events, have been well out of town, he discovered two men entering his premises through a back window. He waited until they were busily engaged indoors, and then, summoning help, he caught them redhanded.

When the rascals were brought before the magistrate, one of them remarked in surly tones that "it was jolly hard lines that Government officials did not take their holidays at the same time every year!"

RURAL CREDIT FOR PRAIRIE PROVINCES

Long Agitation Led to Fruitful and Historic Conferences of Three Governments at Winnipeg

After agreeing with the representatives of the Manitoba Cabinet on the principal features of the interprovincial rural credits system the members of the Alberta and Saskatchewan Cabinets delegated to the conference returned home. The conference was concluded late at night after a thorough discussion which lasted two days. The conference was a momentous one, being the first of its kind where three provinces enter simultaneously into the establishment of a system which is designed to mean a great deal to the farmers, who are the principal factor in the populations of all three provinces.

Uniformity Desired

The rural credits movement is the result of an agitation of long standing on the part of the organized farmers for some system by which the agriculturists could get cheaper money when they wished to borrow. The demand came from all the prairie provinces. The united action of the governments in seeking to establish a system which would be uniform in its main features is considered to be one of the most striking and momentous developments in Canadian history and bound to mean much to the West.

Very "Brown" Indeed

The system approved at the conference was largely rounded into shape by Hon. Edward Brown and has been explained by him to various representative bodies. The Brown scheme will form the basis for the rural credits acts in the other two provinces, but there will be minor differences in regard to the part to be played in the working out of the system by the municipalities. A rather curious coincidence was that the conference discussed the Brown proposals in the brown room of the Fort Garry hotel.

Hon. Edward Brown and Premier Norris met other members of the Legislative Committee and reported the progress which had been made at the conference. The Legislative Committee sanctioned what had been done. The other members present were Geo. W. Prout, member for Kildonan and St. Andrews; Arthur Lobb, member for Rockwood, and Jacques Parent, member for Morris.

GRAIN VERSUS STOCK

Test on Two Farms Showed Grain Land More Fertile

If the fertility of the soil on the stock farm is to be increased or even maintained, wise management in connection with the rotation of crops, the care and use of the manure, and the tillage operations must accompany the keeping of the stock. Meat and the various dairy products cannot be made from nothing any more than can grain and hay, and, if these are sold from the farm, the fertility taken from the soil in their production must be restored.

A test conducted on two farms, one a grain farm and the other a stock farm, where pure-bred stock was kept, showed that the soil on the grain farm was more fertile than on the stock farm. This was largely due to the rotation followed and judicious management by the grain farmer. The live stock farmer, however, made $799 over the five per cent. interest on his investment, while the grain farmer lacked $380 of even making interest on his investment. It must be remembered, also, that the stock farmer had a larger investment upon which to allow interest.

These men were both good farmers and it was not poor management that led to the difference in profits. The man who made the greater profits could afford to invest a part of same in purchasing and applying to his soil what is required to maintain fertility and still be ahead, or he could arrange his rotation in such a way that his soil would not become impoverished.

FIRES COST ONLY $500

Modern Forest Protection Saved Oregon Huge Valuable Areas

Oregon, which enjoys modern forest protection, suffered practically no loss from forest fires in one year, according to State Forester Elliott, despite the fact that the timbered and brush area owned by the government and private individuals and companies comprised approximately 22,000,000 acres. The entire damage from fires, Mr. Elliott said was less than $500. The year previously the loss on privately-owned timber lands totalled $29,000.

Oregon then had 13,125,000 acres [illegible] about 10,000,000 acres was commercial timber land. There were 10,000,000 acres of privately-owned timber land patroled by the state and timber owners. In addition to this area there were approximately 2,000,000 acres of brush land in the southern part of the state. A total of 114 fires were reported to our office in July and the first part of August, 52 of them being in Jackson and Josephine counties. These fires were extinguished without damage of consequence."

EVOLUTION OF GROCER ONE ESSENTIAL TRADE

"Engrosser" Was First a Dealer in Merchandise of Every Conceivable Kind

Nothing is so necessary in any community, nothing so unescapable as the grocer. It is the first business of the frontier settlement, and it plays the most important role in the business drama of any town. One can hardly imagine a city, in any age, in which there were no grocery stores, and yet the institution is a comparatively modern one. Do you know how groceries originated?

Only a few hundred years ago certain foresighted tradesmen in France went about the country buying up bargain lots of merchandise. They bought fire damaged goods, bankrupt stocks, all sorts of commodities. They bought these things "en gros" and made money out of them.

Replaced the "Spicers"

The trade was carried to England, where a man who bought hardware, thread, furniture, vegetables "en gros," or in large quantities, called himself an "engrosser." This was later shortened to "grocer," but the term was still applied to the proprietor of a general business. The grocery was a sort of racket shop, like the modern 10-cent store.

Gradually, it appears, the "grocer" found it more profitable to deal in tea, coffee, spices, fruits and non-perishable foodstuffs, and he confined his attention to these things. He took over the business of the "spicer"—in France the shop which we call a grocery is still known as an "epicerie." So far was the original meaning of the term lost sight of that a man who deals exclusively in fresh vegetables came to be known as a "green grocer."

As Saloonkeeper

The dealer in foodstuffs has not long been a grocer. Out on the Western frontier the saloon was formerly known as the grocery. It sounds strange to read in the border letters of 75 years ago, "The groceries are the curse of our camp." Perhaps the proprietor of such a place adopted that name as a blind for his relatives back East—but this is a mere supposition.

MOTOR OILS AND COLD

Proper Kinds of Oil and Anti-Freezing Solutions

Many anti-freezing compounds use alcohol, glycerine, water and calcium chloride. The best of the three sets is that using alcohol, glycerine and water, but for really cold weather, more alcohol and glycerine and less water should be used. When these solutions are used and evaporation occurs it is not necessary to add make-up solution to compensate for the evaporation. The alcohol evaporates much faster than either of the other liquids, so it is necessary to add only alcohol to bring the radiator to capacity.

During cold weather it is necessary that the owner pay attention to oil changes in the gear cases. In cold weather lighter oil should be used than in summer because of the affect of cold on the viscosity of oil. Some use a medium cylinder oil for the rear axle, while others prefer a semi-fluid oil. Heavy oil or grease should not be used. Before the oil is placed in the case, the latter should be thoroughly cleansed and flushed twice with kerosene.

BASEBALL IS STILL POPULAR

The idea advanced in some quarters that sports are neither necessary nor desirable in time of war has not been borne out by the attendance at the various cities of the two major leagues up to date. Record turnouts on decoration day were no surprise in view of the fact that the crowds had been unexpectedly large during the first six weeks of the campaign, and the weather unusually poor for baseball. Only a few real baseball days have been experienced this spring, yet the attendance has been better, averaged day by day, than in recent years under better conditions.

In the American league the attendance at the intersectional games have ben especially gratifying. According to figures compiled by a Boston writer, the Red Sox played to 112,900 people in the four western cities. The Athletics played to 86,000 fans in the west, and the Senators to 81,2000.

Chicago led the other western cities in home crowds during the series with the eastern clubs. Close to 125,000 people paid toll at Cominkey park; in Cleveland, the crowd reached the 100,000 mark; in Detroit about 90,000, and in St. Louis more than 50,000. This shows a total considerable in excess of normal for the first western tour, and has brought joy to the hearts of the moguls. The optimistic feeling prevailing among the club owners in both major leagues were voiced today by John K. Tenor, president of the National League.

"The great crowds that witnessed the games on Decoration day put an end to the talk about the poor outlook for baseball this year." said President Tener. "The game is more popular than for several seasons, and all that is necessary to keep the crowds large is warm weather. We have passed through six weeks of unusual weather conditions, yet the clubs in both leagues have done remarkably well financially."

BASEBALL

FIREMEN WON AGAIN

A very interesting game of baseball was played between the King Street and Fire Hall teams, and resulted in a score of 8 to 11 in favor of the latter. Batteries: King Street, McLelland and Thompson; Fire Hall, Parrington and Main Umpire, "Doc" Kelly.

Keep Cold to Yourself

If some one else in your house has a cold make it your business to see that it is not passed on to you. If on the other hand, you are the first person in the house to develop a cold, see that you do not transmit the infection to some one else. Keep your fingers away from the nose and mouth. Do not use a drinking glass in common with anyone else. Do not kiss anyone. Change your handkerchief frequently. Cough and sneeze as little as possible, and always into your handkerchief. In short, keep your mouth and nose secretions to yourself and insist on other people doing the same.

Child Exchange With Russia

An exchange of children was suggested by Mr. Pardoe Thomas, president of the Newport, England, Chamber of Commerce, at a meeting of the Chamber as a solution of the language and other difficulties, in promoting commercial relations and good feeling between England and Russia. "Let a hundred thousand British children be sent annually to live in Russia, and vice versa," he said

UNCLE WILBERT

Wilbert Robinson who has had some narrow escapes during his baseball career with the Brooklyns, from winning a pennant, is 48 years of age, and he is flying flags on his port and starboard sides which indicate that he will live to be twice as old. If there ever was a picture of positively vulgar health, Bobbie is that. He is so well that he seems to radiate physical prosperity. At the age of 15 Wilbert began playing baseball for a living at Haverhill, Mass. If there had been any anti-child-labor laws at that time Wilbert's parents might have been jailed, but there weren't ony, so he played ball at so much per diem. From 1888 to 1890 be caught for the Athletics, then an American Association aggregation. It was in 1891 he went to the Orioles, then a National League team. There he shared in the glory of three pennants, such distinguished diamond gems as Dan Brouthers, McGraw, Jennings, Joe Kelly and Willie Keeler sharing it with him. He kept his batting average well around 350 those days. He later scouted for Ned Hanlon's team, and then for McGraw, and the latter gave Bobbie credit for hypnotizing Rube Marquard into a stellar pitcher when he looked like an $11 000 lemon. While helping the Giants to win pennants, and also running a cafe in Baltimore, Robinson kept in mind his great ambition to become a big league pilot: His national league victory in 1916 was the nearest he ever came to his own personal pennant aspirations, but with McGraw he received equal credit for the Giant's victories. In dealing with players Robinson methods are entirely different from those of McGraw "Muggsy" rules by fear, "Bobby" by love. When a player inserts an error into his play, Robinson condoles with him and is so kindly and parental that the player takes a solemn resolution to avoid a repetition. If Robinson doesn't cure the Dodgers of their pennant-escaping proclivities they might as well not have waited for conscription. A good deal more could be said about Mr. Robinson, and it may be remarked in passing that there is a good deal of the aforesaid Wilbert to talk about.

ALUMINUM KITCHENWARE

Aluminum utensils for the kitchen cost more, than enameled, tin, or granite kitchenware, but are more economical and satisfactory in the long run because of their wearing quality. The initial cost of aluminum is double that of enameled ware, but it will last more than twice as long. Tin, tinned iron, or agate lined utensils wear out much more rapidly. The enameled or agate wear chips off, whereas aluminum cannot be injured by being dropped or knocked against some object. Fruit and vegetable acids will have no effect on aluminum, but alkalis are harmful. Alkaline solutions, such as solutions of soda, should not be heated in aluminum utensils. The lime residue on the inside of an aluminum teakettle may be removed with nitric acid, which forms a thin coating of aluminum oxide and protects the kettle against further action. Hydrochloric or sulphuric acid cannot be used for this purpose, as either one would dissolve the aluminum.

FOR BABY'S MOTHER

How to Make a Nice Crocheted Lap Pad

A useful gift that will be appreciated by a mother with a small baby is a lap or carriage pad. It is a crocheted affair, made of rather coarse but [illegible] knitting cotton without a decided twist. Two sixteen inch squares of solid shell-stitch are first required. This is perhaps one of the easiest of crochet stitches to make. You begin by crocheting a sixteen-inch chain and go back, running four double crochets in about every fourth chain, with no chains between the doubles. For the next row, you merely take four chains for the turn and make your four doubles between the second and third of each underlying group, and so on.

When the two squares are finished join them together, with the exception of one side, with single crochets. To this single crochet edge now make a beading by using a double crochet in every other stitch with one chain between each double. Finish with a shell of six doubles with a chain between each, in every third mesh of the beading, holding the ends of each shell by a single crochet on top of the second double following the mesh in which the shell centres.

When this pad has been finished, slip through its open end a piece of rubber sheeting of good quality and thickness. This is an invaluable articles for nursing or bathing time, and may be used whenever the baby is to be laid down for any length of time. Ribbon should be run through the beading in the pad if it is to be given for a gift. If a mother is making one of these for herself she will hardly bother with the ribbon, and may, therefore, omit the beading. They launder quickly, and may be crocheted almost in an afternoon

TOURING THE WEST BEAUTY AND DANGER

Fraser River Canyon—Niagara Gorge Multiplied in Marvellous Scenery —A Racy Description

An easterner, touring British Columbia, writes: Greenhorns going west and not familiar with the infinite capacity of British Columbia to tilt itself on end, think that Sicamous is the beginning of normal country. It ought to be, for at that placid junction both the Rockies and the Selkirks have been passed. The geography text books say merely that the rest of the Province is diversified by hills. It is an understatement. Sicamous lies on an arm of Shuswap Lake—a name not to be pronounced safely except by prohibitionists. For 30 or 40 miles onward there are reaches of level land, but always on the opposite side of the lake there are bold and arrogant hills which in any other land would be called mountains.

Like the Old Country

The guide book says the scenery is reminiscent of Scotland and Scottish poets have intimated that Caledonia is wild and impressive. You can draw your own conclusions. Soon the most westerly arm of Shuswap narrows and becomes the Thompson River, blue clear and in a continuous hurry. The hills rise higher and higher still until they form the Thompson River canyon —perhaps 2,000 feet deep, and shaped like a huge V. There are really two sorts of hills on each side of the V. Close to the river and upwards for perhaps 600 feet are immense deposits of gravel and white clay, much of it reminiscent of the clay formations at Scarborough Heights, Ontario. Above that again are rock hills, some naked, some covered sparsely with spruce and all of a reddish tint much more surly in appearance than the peaks of the ranges we have passed. The task of building a railway on the slanting side of a gravel pit 100 miles long is not as easy as picking potato bugs. The danger of disastrous slides may be understood, but by cribwork and artful aids of this sort, the engineers have triumphed.

Niagara Gorge Multiplied

Then comes the high moment when the Thompson joins the Fraser River. The hills are mountains now, stark precipices sweeping to an incredible height and clothed, where there is footing, with an infinity of spruces. Multiply the Niagara gorge by ten—perhaps sometimes, by 20, and you may have a dim notion of this stupendous chasm. The river is not clear. Glacial mud makes it a dull pea green and it boils so constantly in its narrow path that it has no time to clarify itself. In the train, perhaps 200 feet above the river, one frequently must lean closely towards the window to see the top of the opposite bank. Not infrequently this bank lifts itself into a peak with traces of snow in the upmost crevices. For 130 miles this canyon yawns before the traveller, and, if he be timid, gives him nervous prostration. If he be wise he merely admires and looks, looks and admires until the hinder hinges of the neck grow rusty and give warning by ominous creaks. Even when the track leaves the margin of the Fraser and strikes across country to Vancouver the mountains do not cease. In the city, when one looks about, it is plain that these same mountains have chased one into town and now wait languidly across the bay until the time shell come for chasing one eastward again.

BURMA GRASS FOR PAPER

Kaing Grass May Form a Good Paper Material

The possibilities of utilising the kaing grass of Burma for paper making have for some years past been investigated by interested persons, in [illegible] paper manufacturers in England, and it is now announced that the conversion of this grass into pulp and subsequently into paper can be accomplished in a simple and economical manner.

The yield of unbleached pulp is 39 per cent., calculated on the air-dry grass. This does not compare badly with esparto grass, from which about 43 per cent. of unbleached pulp is obtained. Kaing grass grows in great profusion in all parts of Burma, frequently reaching a height of ten feet. As a paper making material it may be classed with esparto grass, and is much cheaper, though the quality of the pulp is not quite so good as that obtained with esparto. Esparto grass is to a large extent cultivated, whereas kaing grass grows wild and is sometimes rank and coarse. By systematic cutting, however, over properly preserved areas, a finer grass of uniform quality can be obtained in a very short time.

BRIGHTEN THE KITCHEN

Should be Most Cheerful Room in the House

One wonders at the housekeepers who choose for their kitchen walls and woodwork a dingy grey or brown or some other dark, dull color that will not show the dirt. Are they better housekeepers because the dirt, which is surely there, does not show? Would these same women wear black dresses and aprons when doing the cooking and feel that they were clean because they did not look soiled? The kitchen should be the cleanest, sunniest, and most cheerful room in the house. It is here the housekeeper spends most of her time, and it is here the food is prepared and often served.

A dark room may be much improved by using the proper colors. If there is much sunshine in the kitchen, white or blue may be used; but on the north side of the house use buff or warm, yellowish tan. The increased cheerfulness and better spirits of the housekeeper will mean much to the entire family, and her work will be increased by the new color scheme because a sunny, pleasant workshop lightens every task.

FIRES FROM AEROPLANE

Can Detect Forest Dangers When Many Miles Away

A fire ranger who works from an aeroplane says: At an elevation of 1,500 feet on a clear day, a fire 60 miles away in any direction is visible to the naked eye. It is not a case of finding the fire, but to locate it correctly is the job. Smoke will show up very plainly from the air. Mr. Vilas reports that during a flight across Lake Michigan from St Joseph to Chicago, he was completely out of sight of land or anything for that matter for over three-quarters of an hour at an altitude of 4,600 feet. The first thing that he saw was the smoke from the Chicago rolling mills. This was in sight over ten minutes before any shore line was visible at all

People often ask what a country looks like from the air. It is difficult to describe it except that it looks like a large painted map on a small scale without section lines. The efficiency of an aeroplane in spotting a forest fire is without doubt as practicable as any use to which it could be put. I was very much surprised with what ease a fire could be spotted and located, and there is no question in my mind but what the aeroplane will practically do away with some of the observation towers.

Lightning Hits Chestnuts

Lightning shows a marked preference for chestnut trees, according to data based on reports submitted by foresters. Of a total of about 2,000 trees struck by lightning in four years, 655 were chestnut. Pitch pine comes next with 327 trees struck, and then follow in order rock oak, white pine, hemlock, red oak, white oak, black oak, locust, and sugar maple. Black birch is at the foot of the list with only one tree struck in four years. Poplar and walnut come next, only two of each being struck.

PICTURESQUE ISLES OF SOUTHERN ENGLAND

Scilly Islands are Rich in History and Legend—Rugged Nature Gives Great Strategic Value

Those who recall the scenic effects in "The Pirates of Penzance" retain some idea of the nature of the Scillonian panorama—wild and picturesque, sheer cliffs and yawning caverns hollowed out by the ceaseless action of the ocean waves, a perilous approach in stormy weather. The first mention of Scilly in English history was when the islands were subdued by Athelstan early in the tenth century. He is supposed to have granted the islands to the monks; and in the reign of Henry I. there were granted to Osbert, abbot of Tavistock, all the churches of Sully, with their appurtenances and all the land the monks or hermits held in the time of Edward the Confessor and Burgald, bishop of Cornwall. Various transfers of titles took place until, in the reign of Elizabeth, the islands passed to the Godolphin family, in whose possession they rested until 1831, when they were transferred in leasehold to the most famous of all Anglo-Saxon families, the Smiths.

Formed Refuge for Prince

Recognizing the strategic value of the islands, Elizabeth caused to be erected on St. Mary's fort, known as the Star Castle, in 1593, an eight-pointed structure with guns in embrasures at each point. This is one of the chief sights of Scilly. During the civil wars it was a place of imprisonment for some and of refuge for others. In 1645 it was the temporary asylum for Prince Charles and his friends, Lords Hopton and Capel. In 1649 Sir Richard Grenville fortified here and held the islands for Charles II. Parliament, finding their trading vessels much annoyed by Grenville's frigates, sent Admiral Blake and Sir John Ayscue to take the islands. Admiral von Tromp offered his services to Grenville, who refused them, surrendered and was delivered up to Parliament.

Infested with Pirates

In early days the islands were infested with pirates and smugglers, while many of the inhabitants picked up a living as wreckers. It was on Gilston Rock that Sir Cloudesley Shovel perished with 800 men, in 1707, and in the graveyard of St. Mary's repose the bodies of 311 victims of the wreck of the Schiller, in 1875. So treacherous is the sea in these parts that there is an old proverb that for every man who dies a natural death, the sea takes nine. Through dour of aspect, the islands are rich in legend, and they have left some small record on the scroll of history. For centuries there was a persistent tradition that dry land once connected Cornwall with the Scilly islands. Legendary accounts have it that this champaign was strewn with villages and hallowed by 140 churches, known to the Cornish of ancient days as Pethowsow, or Lyonesse; and on this fair land great and gallant deeds were wrought which for ages were kept alive by wandering minstrels.

APOSTLE-SPOONS

Apostle-spoons, called also gossip-spoons, were gilt spoons given in Great Britain by the sponsors or "god-sibs," to a child at its christening. They were so called because each spoon had a figure of an apostle on the handle. Wealthy people gave the whole Twelve Apostles; those of less means and generosity gave the Four Evangelists; while poorer persons had to be contented with one, bearing generally the figure of the donor's or of the child's patron saint. It is noticeable that each apostle seems to wear a broad-brimmed hat—the hat being, in fact, a plate of metal which was put on the head to preserve the features from injury, and which is to be seen on all genuine apostle-spoons.

A SUNDAY FIRE DESTROYS BARN IN OTONABEE

FRANK WALSH LOSES IMPLEMENTS AND LIVE STOCK.

The barn of Mr. Frank Walsh, lot 5, Concession 13, of Otonabee near Keene, was completely destroyed by fire yesterday morning when most of the family were at church. Mr. Walsh's father and some of the smaller children were in the house when an explosion of something or other drew their attention to the barn, and soon flames were seen shooting out in all directions. Neighbors quickly gathered, but nothing could stop the mad onrush of the flames.

All of Mr. Walsh's implements, together with two calves, a pig and a number of hens, turkeys and geese, were destroyed.

There is some insurance.

COAL SITUATION IS BAD

Little In Bins And Small Amount Arriving

Despite the reassuring utterances of coal dealers that the coal situation will soon ease up officials in the Toronto Harbour Master's officers are less optimistic and state that another coal crisis will arise of more serious proportions than that of last winter. They state that there is very little coal in the bins and that the quantities arriving in the city are much less than they were last summer. The miners say that help cannot be had to mine the coal. Another unfortunate circumstance is large boats which operated last year between American ports and Toronto are now out of commission.

NATIONAL ANTHEMS COMPOSED TO ORDER

Will Australia get a national anthem out of this empire crisis? Who can say? Are national anthems ever written to order? We doubt it. If, like Topsy, they don't "just grow," there's something artificial and unsatisfactory about them, something like paper roses. Portugal, on the establishment of the republic, asked for a new national anthem, but we have not heard she has got one to suit. Like poets, national anthems are born, not made.

The fact is, that it is not always the official national anthem which is the real one. For instance, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," sung to our own "God Save" tune, is the official anthem of the United States, but it takes secondary place to "The Star Spangled Banner," "Yanke Doodie," "John Brown's Body," and, in the south, "Dixie Land." These were all anthems hot from the heart in times of crisis.

Even the "Marseillaise," which is the official anthem of the French Republic, used to be anathema to the Government. It is an anthem of revolt, not of loyalty. It was a song of revolution. But now that a republic has ousted royalty it is shown in at the front door.

Really our own "God Save the King" was the merest accident. Who commissioned it? It simply happened. But, even so, it is not the best of our great national songs. That place is undoubtedly held by "Rule, Britannia!" Morover, that old Jacobite song, written to an exiled monarch, is really much better in every way than our official anthem—"Here's a Health Unto His Majesty."

It is surprising how seldom Scots sing the National Anthem. What do they sing when they foregather either at home or at the far ends of the earth? Why, "Au' Lang Syne," of course! That's the Scottish national anthem!

a low level bridge at the Grand Trunk crossing of the canal at Campbellford, where we are raising the water to within three or four feet of the tracks. A swing bridge was planned, but as it would be located at the bottom of a very severe sag in the line, the Grand Trunk Railway proposed a scheme for a high level crossing, which, unfortunately, involves the remodelling of the line for half a mile on each side of the bridge, the building of a new station, approaches and yards. This department is contributing $153,000 towards the cost of the scheme, and have been using our utmost endeavors to get the work under way. You are fairly familiar with the attitude of the Grand Trunk on improvement matters generally in recent years, but our chief engineer assures me that the work should go forward now with reasonable dispatch.

Faithfully yours,
F. COCHRANE.

Mr. Cochrane's Position.

The stand that Mr. Cochrane has been pleased to take on this matter is an enigma to the citizens of Peterborough who have been urging the early opening of the canal. They are of the opinion that the sympathies of the Minister have been enlisted by the corporations rather than by the people. The question of the bridge at Campbellford was brought to his attention three years ago, and he promised at that time that it would not be allowed to stand in the way of a public improvement of so much importance. It has been kept constantly before him ever since.

The Grand Trunk Company is naturally opposed to expenditure which will be so much aid rendered a business rival. No one wonders at the stand that the corporation takes, but they are certainly surprised at the fact that Mr. Cochrane appears to hold a brief for the company and to uphold their contention. That at least is the meaning that is taken from his letter to Premier Borden published above. Whatever Mr. Cochrane may decide in favor of the company will not be accepted by the people. The canal must be opened, and the Grand Trunk will not be permitted to stand in the way. A high bridge at Campbelford means a waterway from this city to the lake and from other points north. Mr. Cochrane's argument that aside from the bridge the canal is not complete does not hold.

MONSTER DEPUTATION URGES CITY COUNCIL TO TAKE SOME ACTION ON FUEL PROBLEM

Open Air Meeting on Market Square Adjourn in Body to Council Chamber and Discuss Situation With City Fathers---Many Explanations Are Offered.

A huge deputation arrived at the Council Chamber last night, and when they were asked to address the Board stated that they were there to find out what action, if any, the council had taken to remedy the coal situation, and to guarantee to the taxpayer a supply of fuel for the coming winter. Mr. A. Murray, head of the Co-operative Society, spoke first, and was followed by Mr. C. E. Adams. The latter stated that the working men were much concerned as to whether they wer gong to get coal or not. The wives of the soldiers must be taken care of. Wood was very scarce, and something must be done at once to relieve the anxiety.

The Mayor Explains

Mayor Duffus expressed his pleasure in having the deputation presented, and was anxious to have the fuel problem solved. He had been on several deputations on the high cost of living. The city had taken the matter up and with other municipalities had come to the conclusion that the city could do nothing. The Government was the one to take action. So far as the local coal situation was concerned the dealers have no objection to the city getting coal for the small consumer, in fact, they were glad to be relieved of this end of the business. On the other hand the large coal dealers had advised the city to let the matter stand, as conditions would be bettered when the warmer weather set in. The city had taken every action to get authority to purchase coal, and the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board would meet here on Wednesday to deal with the question. As many of the citizens as posible should be present to back up the city's application and state the local conditions.

Ald. Stratton asked if in the investigation so far made had the price been found at which the city could buy coal.

Mayor Duffus replied that it was problematical. The city might have to pay more to the dealers, but would be glad to hear any suggestions.

Where Money Talks

James Runnett told of the case with which the people of Gananoque got coal in spite of the opposition of the Rathbun Co., and other coal dealers there. The people deposited money in the bank until a sum sufficient to get a cargo of coal was on hand and then word was sent to an American port and along came the vesel with the coal. Money talks in the coal business. He was of the opinion that if the same co-operative system was started here that there would be no trouble in getting coal.

What Co-operation Did.

A Murray told of the Co-operative society getting two cars of coal in 1915, and they endeavored to sell it at 10 cents a ton under the regular retail price, but they had to almost go down on their knees to get people to buy coal from them. If the labor had been charged up there would not

Hun Boys of Nineteen Being Forced to Front

Reinforcements Are Badly Needed and German Soldiers Are Glad to be Taken Prisoners---Electric Light Station Again Taken by Canadians.

(By Stewart Lyons)

Canadian Headquarters in France, June 5.—Electric light station southwest of Lens for possession of which two fiercely contested engagements have taken place and many hundreds of German, British and Canadian soldiers were killed and wounded appears to be safely within the Canadian line this morning.

German guns turned on it on Monday afternoon is fairly conclusive evidence that the enemy had found it untenable upon his return on Sunday night. Early this morning Canadian troops holding the trench in the vicinity of the station pushed out to the east of it. The situation is not quite clear on the front but generally it was a very lively night. The enemy dropped bombs behind the lines and also sent out a raiding party which was discovered before it reached our trenches. It was driven off, leaving five dead or prisoners. They were able to carry off the wounded.

From information that has come through it has been established beyond doubt that the new enemy formations now in training in Germany and which were intended to supply Von Hindenburg with his next army, are being brought up to supply sorely needed reinforcements. A single division has recently been strengthened by the addition of a considerable number of these young lads of nineteen years. Their training is insufficient although their morale appears good and they are physically fit. Among other troops who have been at the front for a considerable time war weariness is spreading aided greatly by the incessant pounding of the British guns and the deadly nature of the gas to which they are now so frequently subjected.

Faith in the U-boat as a means to victory is dying out and as it dies the morale of the men is lowering. They fight because they must but many, perhaps the majority, would welcome peace at any price. Discipline holds this discontent within bounds but it is significant that many prisoners express pleasure that they have been captured.

IN THE MORNING.

When you wake up, do you find that you still have that headache, and wonder how you are going to get through another day? There is absolutely no need to suffer with it any longer, all you need do is to call and see Dr. Lacy and let him cure you. 410 George street.

The staffs of the four infantry brigades at Camp Borden have arrived there.

STARS AND STRIPES FOR COUNCIL CHAMBER

The aldermen last night decided to have the Stars and Stripes hung in the Council Chamber beside the Union Jack and they will also secure the flags of the Allied Nations to be hung on either side of the Mayor's dias.

Air Raid is in Progress in England

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, June 5.—The official announcement is made that an airplane raid is now in progress over the Thames estuary.

One German airplane is reported to have been brought down. Bombs were dropped over Essex and Kent.

SUB CAMPAIGN ON THE DECLINE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 5.—The weekly report of the British merchant shipping losses in the submarine campaign will again show a favorable total when issued tomorrow. In some respects last week has been the best since the unrestricted submarine warfare was inaugurated. Last Friday was a blank day on the records, that is no losses of British merchantmen occurred. It is the first time this has happened for a long period. British naval people believe the improvement is cumulative and that there is not the slightest chance, with improved allied organizations that the Germans ever will repeat their performance of the black week when nearly sixty boats were sunk.

The weather continues to favor the boats which are fighting the submarines and the cooperative organization of patrols, aircraft and other anti submarine service is improving constantly. The progress of the technique of the anti submarine campaign includes a more careful supervision together with various vigorous offensive measures which it is impossible to detail. In the last week there have occurred numerous encounters the results of which have been satisfactory to the Admiralty.

BOY KILLED IN GAS EXPLOSION

SALVATION ARMY TEMPLE COMPLETE WRECK AT PARIS.

PARIS, Ont., June 5.—In a terrific natural gas explosion which totally wrecked the Salvation Army barracks Monday, the ten-year-old son of James Etherington of Paris, was instantly killed. Lieut. Hill, a woman officer, probably fatally hurt, and several other persons more or less seriously injured. More than 300 men responded to the call for help and literally lifted the entire roof of the caved-in building, off those caught in the wreckage.

Those most seriously burned and otherwise injured were Mrs. Charles Knight and her daughter and baby, Miss Rosie and Andrew Lewis, Leonard Sparks, Willie and Horace Brydgewater and Earl Etherington. Buildings adjacent to the barracks were badly damaged. The cause of the explosion has not been learned as yet.

OUTLOOK FOR COAL SUPPLY IS NOW DARKER THAN EVER; NO RELIEF IN PROSPECT

Government Official Files Report in Parliament Showing That There is Less Fuel in Country Than in 1916 at Any Time---Americans Conserving Home Supply.

The deputation that waited on the City Council last night will be interested in the following information just available from Ottawa:

There is less anthracite coal in Canada than there was at this time one year ago. The United States mine owners have placed the dealers on rations, and are only delivering 65 per cent of their requirements. This very serious statement is made in a report on the coal situation in Canada prepared by W. F. O'Connor, cost of living commissioner, which was laid on the table of the commons last evening by Hon. T. W. Crothers, minister of labor. "The situation is so serious that I cannot too seriously express it," says Mr. O'Connor. The commissioner states that his remarks apply to all the principal cities and towns of the Dominion, including Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, London and Peterborough.

Mr. O'Connor points out that the United States shipbuilding program is going to tie up the transport system, and will still more seriously affect the prospects of Canada getting coal. He reminds the minister of labor that Canadian railways are short of coal cars, and that American coal was brought to the border last year and could not get any further.

The situation is that United States coal companies have placed an embargo on coal going out of the country, and the United States desires to keep coal cars in the country for an emergency that may come.

"The cure for winter coal famines is the abolition of the contract selling system," says Mr. O'Connor. "At present dealers sell now at a price for future delivery. They cannot buy their coal that way, they have to pay the delivery price and have to settle in one month. The largest buyers who buy on the contract system buy in the spring at the lowest price. Whenever a shortage develops, these contracts have to be filled. Another disadvantage is that it locks up capital. Some times the dealers have to fill their storage with coal they dare not sell and they cannot supply themselves with enough to fill the contract and non-contract demnads."

Mr. O'Connor recommends that contract selling be abolished and large buyers forced to take delivery when they buy cheapest, namely in the spring. This would leave storage free and dealers would have money on hand.

RELIEF IS NOW IN SIGHT FOR MEN MAKING CHEESE

British Will Buy Best Canadian Grades at 21 3-4 cts. a lb.

When the cheesemakers meet in regular session in this city tomorrow they will find themselves facing a clearer situation than that which confronted them at the first meeting of the season three weeks ago. What they asked for at that time has been done. The Imperial authorities have decided to buy Canadian cheese and have set the price at 21 3-4 cents for the best grades f. o. b. steamers at Mnotreal. This is two cents a pound better than the average price obtained last year and is only one-sixteenth of a cent less than the bid that swept the local Board at the opening meeting. This will afford the makers at least temporary relief.

In the House at Ottawa yesterday the above facts were announced by Minister of Agriculture Burrell.

He explained that this tentative action was being taken to relieve the present deadlock and pressure on storage space now existing as a result of delay in the decision of the British authorities in regard to the policy to be pursued in handling Canadian cheese this year. On March last, said the Minister, the suggestion had been made that the whole of this year's output of cheese should be commandeered at a fixed price for the British Government. The Canadian Government, however, did not consider such an arrangement would be satisfactory, and recommended that it would be more practicable to make any purchases through existing trade channels.

In April last the British Government sent over a commissioner to act with two Canadian commissioners in buying up the Canadian product. During the month, however, the British authorities decided to commandeer all cheese arriving in Great Britain, and fix a price for it which would permit it to be retailed at 16d per pound. The question of Government purchases was left in obeyance, and meanwhile shipping became so scarce as to practically put an embargo on Canadian cheese exports.

Representations were made by the Government here to the British authorities that it would be unwise for the later to fix too low a price, as that would result in lessening of production, and the diversion of the milk to other forms of finished product.

SHALL THIS CITY HAVE MUNICIPAL COAL YARD?

The sitting of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board to hear the application of the City of Peterborough for permission to operate a municipal coal yard at a cost of $35,000 will open at the Court House tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

AUTOS COLLIDE AT POST OFFICE

BOTH OWNERS REFUSE TO ACCEPT RESONSIBILITY OF ACCIDENT.

Two automobiles collided at the corner of Water and Hunter streets about 9.15 last night and were so much damaged that both had to be taken to the Mobile Hospital for repairs.

The owners of the cars, Mr. R. Wilson, a mail carrier of Otonabee, and Mr. J. A. Sollitt of 543 Downie street, each blame the other for the accident.

Mr. Wilson had just been in the Post Office with his mail bag and was starting south across Hunter street when the accident occurred. His father was with him in the car. There were several in the car of Mr. Sollitt but no one was badly hurt.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JUNE 5, 1917

LIGHT ON THE COAL QUESTION.

THE DEPUTATION that waited on the City Council last night to urge the establishing of a municipal coal yard certainly received new light on the question and should be in a position today to realize that the situation is largely beyond local control and to bear their burdens more patiently. No man who knows Alderman Weir will question his integrity for a moment. What he says is worthy of acceptance without question. Alderman Weir imparted new information to the deputation when he explained that coal dealers now are required to furnish the Government with a monthly statement, duly sworn to, giving in detail the particulars of their transactions. They must state how much coal they have bought during the month, what they paid for it at the mines, what the railways charged for delivering it, and at what price it is sold. This enables the Government to tell whether the stock is being hoarded against a possible increase in price or whether the dealers are playing a fair game with their customers. No coal merchant has an opportunity for high-handed practices under such an arrangement, which has been in force ever since the Federal authorities gave the municipalities power to deal with the high cost of living.

It is customary for the consumer to quote $3.60 as the price of a ton of coal at the mines. That is for the lowest grades only. The prices vary, the latest quotation for the best quality being a few cents short of $4 a ton. Alderman Smith explained to the deputation, speaking from actual experience, how the cost of transportation and other unavoidable expenses account for the cost to the ultimate consumer.

Another point brought out by Alderman Smith was that as a war measure the United States is now coaling up all its naval bases, and that there was a tendency to divert the normal supply from Canada.

The fuel situation is certainly grave. The consumers are justified in their uneasiness over the outlook for next winter, but the matter is one which is not incapable of explanation. It is an inevitable outcome of a war that has been in progress for nearly three years and the end of which is not yet in sight. It is one that impartial consideration should convince the consumer is beyond the control of either the municipality or the authorities higher up. If coal is being hoarded locally the chances are that this is being done by the foresighted consumer rather than by the dealers.

THE BRIDGE AT CAMPBELLFORD.

THE MATTER OF a Grand Trunk bridge at Campbellford has been hanging fire for the past three years. Something must be done before the Trent Canal can be opened to Lake Ontario. A high bridge or a swing in the present structure is essential, and the public are not particular, so long as the canal is opened, what the railway company may finally decide to do. The Government is ready to pay $153,000 toward the erection of a new bridge, and the matter is now in the hands of Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals. The municipalities along the Trent Canals are becoming impatient of delay and are in no mood to accept further excuses either from the department or the railway company.

The meeting that Mayor Duffus has called in this city for Thursday afternoon should be largely attended and such a deputation should be sent to Ottawa as will leave no doubt in the mind of Mr. Cochrane as to how the municipalities feel with respect to this matter.

ACTING IN CONCERT.

MR. CHARLES E. ADAMS, one of the spokesmen for the deputation at last night's Council meeting, suggested that as Canada and the United States are now allies, that the governments of the two countries get together in conference and arrange for a supply of coal for this country from the American mines, and that the services of the transportation companies be assured to bring it across the border. This suggestion was commended by Mayor Duffus as one worthy of consideration.

It is certainly one solution of the question, but the Canadian public can rest assured that the United States will insist upon its own people being given first choice. The bunkers at the naval stations and the bins of the householders must first be filled.

MORE RECRUITS NEEDED.

THE CABLE TELLS US that the Canadian troops now fighting in France have received fifty thousand reinforcements during the past five months, or an average of ten thousand a month. At the battle of Vimy Ridge alone the number of casualties in the Canadian contingent amounted to fully twenty thousand, and every day brings additions to the list.

The wastage of war is not being supplied. There is too great a disparity between the number of casualties and the reinforcements, and the figures given above constitute another argument in favor of the selective draft proposed by Sir Robert Borden.

THE INEVITABLE RESOLUTION.

THE DISCUSSION of the coal question between the aldermen and a deputation of citizens last night wound up as such affairs usually do—by the adoption of a resolution calling on the Government to do something. Council washed its hand of all responsibility and passed the matter on to those higher up. The aldermen appeared to have satisfied the deputation that they are helpless to furnish a remedy. It would be interesting to have some one explain how the Government has any more power to control the situation when, by unanimous consent, the source of the trouble lies outside of Canadian jurisdiction altogether.

A FOOD BILL IN THE UNITED STATES.

THE AMERICAN CONGRESS has just passed a measure dealing with the food question, and it is worthy of study in view of the agitation now going on in Canada.

This bill provides, in the first place, for an extensive food survey by the department of agriculture and for the enlargement of the facilities of that department for securing information. The necessity of exact knowledge by the public as to the food supplies and resources of the country is beyond question. Guesswork and panic were responsible for recent extraordinary advances in prices, and the best antidote for vague fear is definite information. It is to be hoped, for one thing, that because of the passage of this measure the crop estimates of the department will be distinctly more accurate in the future than they have been in the past.

The bill further provides for the stimulation of production of cereals and live stock and for the prevention and control of animal diseases. It carries an appropriation of nearly $5,000,000 for these purposes.

One anticipated result of the projected survey is successful prevention of the hoarding of food for speculative purposes. Greedy exploitation and gambling in necessaries of life certainly should be dealt with sternly.

A useful amendment to the bill was secured by Miss Rankin of Montana. So far as is practicable, women familiar with various aspects of food conservation will be employed in the survey. Unquestionably trained women can be of service to the government in this sort of work, and many such women are patriotically eager to assist the authorities in the broad task of providing for the national defence.

The American nation has been at war about three months, and definite action has already been taken on the food problem. Canada has been at war for three years, and the matter is still in the air.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

BETTER UNIVERSAL military service than universal disaster.

• • • •

IS IT TO BE COALITION or an election, Borden or Bourassa?

• • • •

THE LOCAL COAL DEALERS are at least clear of the suspicion of short weight.

• • • •

CHARITY COVERS a multitude of sins, and the censorship hides a vast amount of inefficiency.

• • • •

THESE DAYS it seems about as hard to dodge a title as an honorary degree from some seat of learning.

"WE WILL NOT have conscription," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Quebec a few months ago. And Quebec took him at his word.

• • • •

France declares that on one party in that country can make peace. Same in Ireland. Ottawa Citizen.
AND AT OTTAWA.

• • • •

IF THERE IS strehgth in numbers, the coal deputation that waited on Council last night was one of the most influential ever received by the aldermen.

• • • •

"WE MUST HAVE a million more men before July 1," says General Robertson, speaking on behalf of the Empire. Those men will never be raised under the voluntary system.

• • • •

SIR WILFRID LAURIER has been leader in Quebec for the last twenty-five years, and look at the record of that province in the war. What would the record of the Dominion have been had Sir Wilfrid been Premier for the past three years?

• • • •

PERHAPS THERE ARE MEN who talk for conscription and yet would vote against it once they found themselves in the seclusion of the polling booth. The trouble with the secret ballot is that it enables so many men to talk one way and vote another.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Saffron-Tinted Lavergne.

(Kingston Whig.)

Lavergne not so long since said he wanted conscription. Now he does not want it under any circumstances. There is something unmistakably yellow about this man.

Armand Lavergne's dead body, which he is offering as the prize to anyone who will conscript him, would probably be about as useful to his country as the live one with which he at present inflates a uniform.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

Colonel I. N. Lewis, inventor of the Lewis machine gun, has waived his rights to royalties on any orders from the government and those orders amount to $12,000,000 now. Add to stories of patriotism that count.

Unionist Principle.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

Intelligent, unjaundiced, logical union men are bound to be in favor of conscription. It is the union principle, namely, that all must give their services equally. It is the union principle of individual sacrifice, if necessary for the general good.

Even Liberals Distrust Laurier.

(Hamilton Herald.)

"There is no one in Parliament who in this imperative task of welding the country together, can take the place of Sir Wilfrid Laurier," says the Globe. Ah, that's it. Only let Laurier get back to power, and all will be forgiven. It is the cry of one blinded with partisanship. No one but a blind partisan would fail to see that in the present crisis, the majority of the people of Ontario and the West would endure far worse government than we have had rather than entrust Sir Wilfrid Laurier with supreme authority at Ottawa. It is very doubtful if even a majority of the patriotic Liberals of this province would care to see the Liberal leader at the head of national affairs at this time.

THE WORLD'S COAL SUPPLY

Having investigated the coal industry of the country, the federal trade commission has submitted two practical and definite reports. The first deals with anthracite coal. The commission has discovered no justification for the extremely high prices which the operators charge for this product. It is declared that certain elements in the trade have been guilty of "extortionate practices" and "intolerable abuses." As a result of the investigation operators promise to reduce prices to moderate levels and to co-operate with the commission in securing fair distribution of anthracite. Field agents have bee sent out by the commission to observe the way in which these promises are kept—or broken. Failure to reduce prices it is threatened, will bring not only prosecution but legislative intervention, says the Chicago News.

Anthracite, however, important as it is, makes up only one-sixth of the coal consumed in the United States. The second report of the commission covers the bituminous coal fields. The investigation it is stated, has established the fact that there is coal sufficient to supply a demand much greater than the present one; that the difficulties of rail and water transportation, however, have caused the stocks of coal at tidewater and an almost complete exhaustion of elsewhere; that competition of alarmed bidders sent prices skyward; that operators took advantage of these circumstances and demanded exorbitant prices, and that many operators frankly claimed the right to charge all they could get and even the right to refuse to make contracts for future delivery.

The commission takes sharp issue with these claims. It says that "at a time like this excessive profits should not be extorted from the public by producers and distributors of any prime necessity." It refrains from advocating immediate regulation of coal prices, but it lays stress on the need of protecting the consumer, and it warns the operators that the government may decide to regulate distribution and fix the prices to be paid. Warning also has been addressed to outside speculators, prosecution being threatened in their case.

These reports on actual conditions should lead to the effective prevention of coal famine henceforth, since they show precisely what must be done to remedy any serious shortage. The rest is a matter of wise legislation and competent administration.

MASON'S MELODIES

Spring brings the wet and helpful rains, the cloudburst and the flood; and then the broad and fertile plains are plastered thick with mud. We journey forth from our abodes in wagon, boat or cart, and we get stuck in muddy roads, which breaks the human heart. We spend about 10,000,000 bucks each year to fix the pike and in the springtime only ducks along the same can hike. The farmer stays away from town and doesn't blow his seads, so we find commerce sagging down in all our western grads. The autos are no longer run, dead are their wonted fires; so worthy dealers take no mon for gasoline or tires. All trade in grim stagnation stands; 'tis this way everywhere; and merchant princes wring their hands and rend their robes and swear. The roads are just long streaks of mud, a warning and a fright, and with the old accustomed thud the mules sink out of sight. We spend some 40,000,000 bones each year to fix the pike; go forth, I say, in thunder tones, and see what they are like. Go forth when tides are ebbing low, survey the dismal scene; and if you're wise when forth you go you'll use a submarine.

WASTING INFANT LIVES.

"Every hour of 1915 claimed a toll of twelve British babies' lives," said Lady Aberdeen, wife of the former governor-general of Canada, in an address in Philadelphia.

"In the same year," she continued, "the number of British soldiers killed in battle averaged nine an hour." The speaker urged American women not to let "the wonderful child welfare work be pushed aside or mini mixed."

OPPOSE 'SOCRATIC METHOD.'

Pastors, However, to Teach as Well As Preach.

CALGARY, June 5.—The Alberta Methodist conference discussed a motion of a layman to abolish preaching at one service each week and substitute the "Socratic or discussion method." There was considerable opposition to this by Ministers, but the motion to devote one service each Sunday to teaching was adopted. Details still are to be worked out.

Wit and Wisdom

"Mike is too pugnacious to ever get ahead—he loses too many jobs yet he must have had some ambition—he taught himself to read after he was thirty."

"Oh, well, he had to learn to read to live. At thirty his wife refused to read the want ads to him any longer."

He was a convivial old soul and in the small country village he missed the delights of town.

So he consoled himself at the village inn and next morning he was up before the local j. p. at the neighboring town.

"The constable," observed the man to the magistrate, "seems wonderfully certain about the details of my case. How is it he doesn't call his fellow officer to corroborate what he says?"

"There's only one constable in Peddleford," explained the magistrate.

"But I saw two last night," indignantly asserted the accused.

"Exactly," said the magistrate, smiling broadly. "That's just the charge against you."

A policeman was called the other day to quell a street row, caused by a tipsy countryman who wanted to fight the policeman or any man in the town. In vain some of his friends tried to get him to go home quietly. He persisted in telling them all that he was a "brick," and would fight any man in the city. When the policeman arrived he still wanted to fight, saying:

"I am a brick."

"Yes," said the policeman, "but do you know what I was before I joined the force? I was a bricklayer."

A young mother just returned from India had engaged a new nurse for her baby. The nurse came to her and said:

"I don't know what's the matter, ma'am, but the little one cries and cries. I can do nothing to quiet it."

The mother thought a moment. Then, brightening up, she said, "I remember now. Baby's last nurse was a black one. You'll find the stove polish on the third shelf of the kitchen cupboard."

The reform warden always made it a point to give each new arrival a chance to do the work with which he was familiar, if the penitentiary dealt in his line. A tailor named Levinski arrived, and it was ordered that he be employed at that trade if there was an opening. There wasn't. He was asked if he was adept at anything else. "Yes," he replied, with a smile, "I am a crackerjack traveling salesman."

Japanese Christians.

I have been asked how the Christians in Japan reconcile Christ and belief in him with the conception of a "divine" emperor. It was my privilege on the emperor's official birthday, which was held two months late, to attend a union meeting of the Japanese Christians, uniting in prayer to God that their emperor might be protected and blessed in his reign. It differed in no detail from what a similar service would be in any country, when Christians asked the blessing of God upon the King or the President, and all those who are associated with him in office.

The popular belief in the divinity of the Emperor is, to my mind, one of the critical questions in Japanese thought and politics. The present emperor is a lesser man than his predecessor, and he rules a different class of subjects. There would seem to be no peaceful solution of the question aside from the one which the Christians have adopted—of reverencing the ruler as ruler and omitting mention of him as Lord. But the whole idea of divinity in the Emperor takes on new meaning when one considers an incident which occurred under Meiji. An attempt had been made on the life of the ruler, and the premier had tried to resign. Meiji refused such sacrifice, saying, "I must have been untrue to the divine in me, or such an attempt could never have been made on my life. The fault is with me."—Maynard Owen Williams in The Christian Herald.

Animal Strength.

Tests made to determine the respective pulling power of horses, men, and elephants showed that two horses, weighing one thousand six hundred pounds each, together pulled three thousand seven hundred and fifty pounds, or five hundred and fifty pounds more than their combined weight. One elephant, weighing twelve thousand pounds, pulled eight thousand seven hundred and fifty pounds, or three thousand two hundred and fifty pounds less than its weight. Fifty men, aggregating seven thousand five hundred pounds in weight, pulled eight thousand seven hundred and fifty pounds, or just as much as the single elephant, but like the horses they pulled more than their own weight; one hundred men pulled twelve thousand pounds.

Roquefort Sheep.

The milk of a single Roquefort sheep will in a year provide from thirty to forty pounds of cheese. In that district of France there are about eight thousand sheep devoted to the cheese industry.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

WORKING IT OUT.

FACTS are very stubborn things.
Though we try to pull the strings
That will bend them to our will,
They are facts, not fancies, still.

We may warp them just a bit
So they will our purpose fit,
But they slip back in their tracks
When we get right down to tacks.

If they were but thus and so
We might stand a better show
And could make things come our way
In the game we try to play.

But they do not budge an inch,
Though we stretch them at a pinch.
They recoil within our hand
Like a fragile rubber band.

It is very sad indeed,
Though some other facts we need,
There they stand through thick and thin
With a most annoying grin.

And it useless is to kick
On a hard, unfeeling brick
Or to claim that east is west
If that suits our purpose best.

We must look them in the face,
Though they do not suit our case
And may cause our props to fall.
They are there, and that is all.

Finer Grade.

A smooth spoken gent dropped into a quiet village from nowhere, but as he slung around such a lovely line of conversation nobody asked for references. Soon he was running the band and the baseball team and leading a class in Sunday school.

Everybody said, "He is a brick."

Some months later he departed with a neat roll stowed away in his jeans. The villagers had for theirs a nobby lot of stock, that was beautifully engraved, in a rubber plantation. The months came and went. The sun rose, cavorted across the sky and set many times, but the promised dividends never came. But still they were loyal. They rose up as a man and reaffirmed their belief in him, only putting it stronger.

"He is a gold brick," was what they said.

Waiting Their Turn.

"They tell me that in some restaurants they serve rabbit for chicken."

"That is true."

"And squirrel for rabbit."

"Very likely."

"And what is the substitute for squirrel?"

"There is none. But never fear but something will be found should they become popular as an article of diet."

Place of Honor.

"I suppose you are the head of your own house?"

"You bet! I am president of the matrimonial firm."

"And your wife?"

"Huh! She's only the cashier."

Nursed Her Brother.

A cablegram received by an Owen Sound friend conveyed the information of a curious coincidence met by Miss Mary Pollock, who, with other nurses, had been assigned to duty at Orpington Hospital. The first patient that she was sent to attend proved to be her brother, Pte. Stewart Pollock, whom she did not know had been wounded. Pte. Pollock enlisted with a Western battalion and had been in the trenches for several months. Frequent letters from him intimated that he had escaped the casualty list, in which he regarded himself as being exceedingly fortunate, considering all he had come through. The surprise of Miss Pollock can be imagined when meeting her brother in the hospital, as this was the first time in several years.

Fish Destroy Malaria.

BELGIUM'S QUEEN

Lives Unattended by Her Ladies In Waiting Now.

RECEIVED A NEW YORK GIRL.

Albert's Brave Lady Lives Within Sound of the Big Guns and Spends Her Days Visiting the Soldiers In Hospitals and Cheering Her People.

Miss Carita Spencer of New York, having spent much time in Belgium doing relief work, was recently received by the Queen of Belgium at La Panne and gives this interesting account:

"La Panne, where the king and queen live, is a charming channel village, a bright dot of color along the shore, about three-quarters of a mile in length and sandy. There is a long row of houses, with a hotel at one end, which is now used as a hospital by Dr. DePage, the noted Belgian surgeon, and at the other end a group of slightly more pretentious villas, where the king and queen and their court officers live and work. They put in a long, hard day's work day in and day out, week after week and month after month.

ELIZABETH OF BELGIUM.

"The queen, in her simple dignity and great devotion to the people of her adoption, spends her days working with and for them, visiting hospitals, cheering the men, bringing presents to the kiddies and in everything she does never forgetting the personal touch and the word of heartfelt sympathy for each patient.

"When one meets with her and talks to her—so simple, so direct, so earnest—one feels that the idealized character of this woman is her real character. I always shall remember the smile of happiness that overspread the face of my chamberman at the little hotel in Calais when I told him I was on my way to see his queen. He had been wounded and could not go back to the front, but would walk with a limp to his dying day.

"He spoke of the queen as of the dearest loved member of his family. 'She is a real queen,' he said. 'She cares for the poor and the suffering. I even saw her once, and she smiled at me, when I wore my uniform and croix de guerre.'

"Since the fighting has become heavy near La Panne—the town is often bombarded—the queen was not willing that any of her ladies in waiting should experience such dangers and so was living in the little villa unattended.

"She sent me to visit the various orphanages, one in particular, her favorite, where much of the equipment has been donated by children in America wanting to help their little brothers across the sea. One dormitory in particular was filled with beds, over each of which was the name of the American child who gave it.

"There were lots of babies so small they could barely toddle. It was the cutest sight imaginable to come with a box of chocolates and stand on the steps of the asylum yard and call to them as you would to a bunch of little chickens. Then to see them rush pell-mell, falling over each other, each eager to get his own piece of candy."

Cosy Living Room.

When planning for the living room of simplicity don't forget the wicker or rattan hourglass chair. We have learned their infinite possibilities for charm by their successful use in the studios of artists and on the well furnished porch. From these two uses it is merely a step to the small and unconventional living room. One of these chairs, supplied with a pillow, will be an addition.

About Blouses.

There is a decided vogue for dark silk blouses in stripes and plaids. They are most decidedly smart, but they are not very becoming to most women. Not only do they lack any touch of redeeming white at the neck, but they are cut on the most severe lines.

The Tramp and the Peasant.

Upon an occasion a Tramp halted at the gate of a Peasant's cottage and begged for food, giving the exact number of weeks, days, hours and minutes since a morsel of sustenance had passed his lips.

"Why, this is an outrage on humanity and must be seen to at once," replied the Peasant, and the Weary was seated at the table and given a square meal. When he was ready to continue his way a good lunch and a bottle of wine were provided for him. When he had made a mile on his journey he sat down in a fence corner and mused:

"I lied to the Peasant and he accepted it for truth. He fed me, said nothing about work and sent me on my way rejoicing. Now, then, while I am a tramp, I am not an ingrate. I will return and see if there is not some way in which I can reward him."

The Tramp decided on a nap first, and when he awoke it was night and raining.

"Ah, I have it," he said as he arose. "This rain must fall down the Peasant's chimney and interfere with his fire. I will place a board so as to drain it off."

He looked around and found what he wanted, and then, climbing to the roof, he placed it over the mouth of the chimney and descended and went his way with satisfaction. Half an hour later the Peasant and his wife were driven out by smoke and put in great fear, and much trouble ensued before the cause was found. Then the Peasant said:

"He was a stranger, and I snaked him in. I was an easy mark, and he smoked me out. The next one gets his neck broke!"

Moral.—Hang on to your gratitude. In showing it you may make men wish they had not responded.

Logic and the Rat.

A logician who found a rat in his trap was making preparations to drown him in a tub of water when the rodent observed:

"Just you wait a minute. Your trap was not baited when I entered it. I simply entered to see why it was not baited. The rat who entered and ate the bait is the one who should have been caught and drowned."

"That's very fair logic," replied the man, "but I think I can beat it. Owing to the high price of provisions I have got to live on frankfurters henceforth. As you cannot eat them, you must necessarily starve. To starve takes four days and is accompanied by much distress. To drown takes only one minute and there is no pain at all. Logic says it is better to drown than to starve, and in you go!"

Moral.—The rat who keeps out of the trap keeps out of logic.

Unusual Accomplishment.

"Do you whistle or sing or recite?"

"No."

"Can you do nothing to entertain the guests?"

"Well, I can name all the vice presidents we've ever had. The accomplishment has been mentioned as unusual."—Washington Herald.

Poverty is said to be a barren thing, but it breeds discomfort and disease very rapidly.

The Problem.

Mother thinks she'll make a doctor out of Jim.
Father thinks he'd better fill a judge's chair.
Uncle John would mold a preacher out of him.
Really choosing a profession is a care.
Cousin May would like to see him grace the state.
Uncle George is sure a soldier's trade would fit.
Charley says that millionaires are all the rage;
For a fine profession that is surely it.

Mother says that able doctors heal the sick
And are useful to the world in many ways.
Father says the legal trade is still his pick,
For the lawyers have such fine and winning ways.
Uncle John is sure his choice would be the best.
Uncle George is pleading strongly for the gun.
Cousin May is just as certain as the rest.
Charley's pick appears to him the only one.

Oh, it's surely lots of trouble picking out
A profession for the little coming man!
Each relation is a self appointed scout
With a diagram his future life to plan.
You may wonder when they all are taking hold
Why they do not give the lad himself a show.
There's a reason—he is only six weeks old.
How is one of tender years like that to know?

While He Waited.

"Are you the girl that took my order?" asked the old grouch as the pretty waitress tripped in under the weight of her load.

"I sure am," replied the girl, who wasn't addicted to slang, but could use it on occasions.

"I want to compliment you on one thing."

"What's that you're giving me now?"

"It is this: You don't look a day older than when you took it."

RESTORING FRENCH LAND.

Our Soldiers Were Among the Men in Khaki Who Became Farmers.

The beginning of spring this year has produced the spectacle of thousands of soldiers of the French army, together with their comrades of the British and Belgian armies, forsaking the rifle, the bayonet, the hand-grenade, and the machine-gun to take in hand temporarily the hoe, the spade, the harrow, and the plow in many of the districts of eastern and north-eastern France.

The reconquest of large tracts of territory from the Germans and the return of the civilian inhabitants from the places where they had taken refuge confronted the authorities with the problem of restoring these lands in cultivation. Farming implements to the value of hundreds of thousands of dollars, it was found had been damaged or destroyed since the beginning of the war in what is known as the "zone of the armies." The young peasants were all serving in the ranks and the older men, even with the aid of the women and children, were unable to fill their places for the proper cultivation of the land.

The army decided to step into the breach. The greatest proportion of the soldiers in the French ranks come from the peasant or farming class. It was therefore an easy task to find capable hands. The organization was more difficult, but co-ordination between the civil and military authorities was affected very rapidly. A military officer with agricultural experience was appointed by each army to consult with the prefects of the departments in which the troops were stationed and to find out what work was to be done and how many hands were required to do it.

The zone occupied by each army was subdivided into small districts, each containing about 25 villages or hamlets. The commanding officer of the troops stationed in each district was directed to get into touch with the civil official and place at his disposal as many men as were needed or could be spared for agricultural labor.

The artillery and engineering repair shops of the army were ordered to mend damaged farm implements and replace missing parts, and army farriers to shoe free of charge all horses working on the land.

The result of these arrangements is that, almost up to the firing line, all available land in France is now in cultivation, and soldiers in uniform, whenever they can be spared from the trenches and dugouts and their main task of destroying the Germans, work cheerfully with the women, children, and older men behind the lines.

The system has been extended to that part of the line—150 miles in length—held by the British and Belgians, but here the task is a more difficult one, as most of the northern allies are, in civil life, engaged in industrial work in the cities. The Canadians and Australians, however, have been of immense assistance in restoring French land to productiveness.

In the meantime Mr. Tennison is losing the splendid growing weather.

TORONTO PREPARED

Officials On Trip To United States To Buy Coal

Mayor T. L. Church, with Mr. J. W. Seymour Corley, K.C., Crown Attorney, of Toronto, are visiting Pittsburg and other United States coal centres with the intention of seeing what can be done to secure coal for Toronto before next winter. The mayor has mentioned that he would like to see at least half a million tons in the city before the snow comes. Before he returns, probably at the end of the week, the Mayor hopes to visit Ottawa.

POOR BLOOD AND WEAK NERVES

(By F. Raymond Ward, M. D.)

Lack of strength is about the first symptom of violation of the laws of health. There come nervousness, unsteady hands and limbs, skin eruptions, dizziness, sleeplessness, heart palpitation, and with the feeling that the life blood is being sapped comes complete prostration. In this condition the sufferer is indifferent to all things—and looks upon life with a gloomy, melancholic view.

It is given as a statistical fact that [illegible] out of every ten people in the United States are suffering from nerve exhaustion, and of this number less than half realise it. They know that they have gloomy thoughts, a depression of mind, an impaired memory, dizziness and headache, wakeful nights and spells of extreme exhaustion, but they attribute it to any other cause but the right one. They feel languid, irritable and restless, the why and wherefore of which they cannot explain. They are suffering from nerve exhaustion, a condition which is undoubtedly the means of causing more misery and crushing more hopes than any other trouble that flesh is heir to.

Nervous exhaustion will not cure itself. The sufferer who thinks that nature alone will bring about a restoration of health is simply deluded by a false hope. He will realize that the power of realizing is left him, when he becomes a hopeless victim to one of the many diseases which follow in its path.

Those suffering from nerve exhaustion or loss of energy as a result of overwork, mental worry or violation of nature's laws are quickly restored to sound health by Dr. Ward's special treatments. Dr. Ward's office is located at 79 Niagara Square, Buffalo, N. Y., which is right opposite the McKinley Monument. His office hours are Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. Sundays 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. Consultation and examination is always without charge.

GOLD HEADED CANE AND ADDRESS TO MR. PEEVER

Members of Epworth League of George St. Church Pay Tribute to Popular Pastor.

At the monthly meeting of the Epworth League of George Street Methodist Church, last evening, a very pleasant surprise was accorded the popular pastor, Rev. Mr. Peever. The members took the opportunity of presenting him with a gold-headed ebony cane, suitably engraved, and an illuminated address as a mark of their sincere appreciation of his interest in the young people of the church, and their deep regret that he is now soon leaving for his new charge at First Methodist Church, London, Ont.

Mr. Peever is to be commended on the splendid work he has done in George Street Church during his four years of ministry. Especially has he endeared himself to the young people by his active interest and hearty co-operation in their work at all times.

The Epworth League has had one of the best years in its history, owing greatly to Mr. Peever's oversight and inspirational leading. Over 100 members are on the roll, and work is being carried on in six departments Christian Endeavor, Missionary, Literary and Social, Christian Citizenship, Junior and Look-out. Each department is under a vice-president who has in charge of some of the departments as many as three committees. The Junior League, which is the fifth department of the Senior League, meets at ten o'clock on Sunday morning. It has a membership of 150 and an average attendance of over 100 for the past year. $250.00 has been given to the Forward Movement for Missions, $55.00 of which was raised by the junior society. Mr. Peever may well be proud of this record.

The presentation to Mr. Peever was made on behalf of the society by Mis Alice Elson, president, and Mr. C. S. Thompson, past president. Mr. Peever, although taken completely by surprise, made a very appropriate reply in his usual felicitous manner. He referred to the fact that throughout his ministry he had always taken a deep interest in young people's work, realizing that young people are the keystone to the church's future.

The following is the address.—

Dear Mr. Peever:

BILLY SUNDAY TIRES UNDER HEAVY STRAIN OF LONG SERVICE

Noted Evangelist Almost Nervous Wreck and Breaks Down in Middle of Prayer.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Billy Sunday is showing plainly the tremendous strain under which he has been laboring during his New York meetings, especially since Mrs. Sunday has been ill. The other night at the close of his sermon, he began the prayer with which he usually prefaces his invitation to trail hitters. Breaking off suddenly, he cried, "I am so tired—so tired!" and, reaching down behind the pulpit, brought forth a pitcher of water. Filling his hands he dashed the water in his face and mopped it with his handkerchief.

After attempting the prayer a second time he called at once for the audience to step forward and shake his hand.

Church Discipline Lax

"You will find anything in an average church congregation, from a humming bird to a turkey buzzard," Billy declared in the course of his evening sermon "I have a controversy with the church, Catholic and Protestant, and that controversy of controversies is its laxity in the application of discipline to men and women who wilfully and deliberately break their vows and live in open sin."

"One man says 'I do not believe in the Bible because of the inconsistencies!' I say the greatest inconsistency is in your life—not in the Bible. I bring up before you the memory of some vile deed, and you immediately begin to find fault with the Bible. Talk to a man about business and politics, and he talks sense. Talk to a woman about society, clubs or dress, and she talks sense. Talk religion to them and they will talk nonsense. Our character is our will What we will we are."

The nervousness which culminated in his inability to make his customary prayer showed itself early in the evening meeting, when a woman stood on a bench and attempted to address the 16,000 persons present As she was being led out Billy recognized her as one who on previous occasions had interrupted the service

"Don't let that woman in the Tabernacle again," he shouted to the ushers. "She is always doing that stunt."

Owing to the steady downpour of rain the attendance at the afternoon meeting was one of the smallest of the campaign, less than 2,000 persons being present.

"I am so tired I can scarcely hold my head up," Billy said during the afternoon meeting, as he twice asked the crowd to help him by not coughing aloud.

WHAT THE ALDERMEN DID

Routine Business Transacted at Regular Meeting of City Legislators.

The City Council held their regular monthly meeting last night with Mayor Duffus and all the aldermen present. There was some question as to whether the council could legally hold a meeting owing to it being the day set apart for the celebration of the King's birthday but by mutual consent the aldermen decided to proceed with the regular routine.

Communications.

The following communications were presented and referred to or dealt with as noted.

From City Treasurer Adams giving a statement of the city's finances for the present year. This was sent to the Finance Committee.

From R. J. Munroe asking permission to build an approach to his stable across the sidewalk at Hunter and Queen streets. This was granted when taken up in general business provided that the work is done under the supervision of the City Engineer.

From the City Solicitor reporting that Olive avenue could only be taken over with the approval of the Ontario Municipal Board as it was not the regulation width. The Board of Works will consider whether an application will be made.

From City Solicitor Gordon enclosing agreement with the Quaker Oats Co. This will be considered by the Committee of the Whole.

From Peck, Kerr, and McElderry asking that they be granted permission to build a concrete step to the entrance to their building on Water street. They claim that the grade of the street was changed after the building was built and the step is now necessary. The Board of Works will deal with the matter.

From H. J. McCannon asking that a concrete sidewalk be constructed on Walkerfield Ave. from Monaghan Road to his lot where he proposes to build a residence. This was granted and the usual notice will be issued.

From Mr. E. H. D. Hall, solicitor for the Peterboro Utilities Commission asking the council to extend the time for issuing the debentures for the new substation as two years will have elapsed since the bylaw was passed and the time for building was not opprtune. The request was granted and the city solicitor was requested to make application to the Municipal Board.

From Henry Hope and Sons asking that their works be given sewerage connection at an early date. Ald. Saunders stated that the residents of Romaine street wanted sewer connection and if they petitioned for it the buildings of this line would kill two birds with one stone. A petition will be circulated at once.

From the Ontario Provincial coal section of the Retail Merchants of Canada stating that for various reasons they were going to oppose the city's application to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board for permission to establish a municipal coal yard. Ald. Dobbin remarked "What can you expect" and Mayor Duffus was surprised as the local dealers had expressed themselves as favorable to the city getting in a supply of coal to relieve the small user.

From City Clerk Armstrong reporting the majority in favor of the bridges bylaw was 1532. Mayor Duffus took advantage of the occasion to thank all those who had assisted in any way to get such a magnificent vote out, and he paid particular praise to the South ward which had given a vote as favorable as the other sections of the city although less to be benefitted. He felt sure that the building of the bridges would be of great benefit to the Northeast section of the city and to Ashburnham. The work of the ladies and the press was also commented on favorably.

From Dr. McCullough, chief officer of health, approving of the building of certain sewers in the city. This was filed.

From A. Brotherson asking permission to locate a boat house on the river edge north of Dalhousie street. This was granted as was th eapplication of Charles W. Westlake for one at the end of Harvey street.

From W. K. Johnston reporting the dangerous condition of the walkway at Aylmer and Edinburgh street at which point Mrs. Johnston fell and broke her arm. This was referred to the Board of Works.

From Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, reporting that the city would be returned a portion of the fines collected through the work of the local police and which by law are payable to the province. This was filed.

From A. Fabian, 551 Gilchrist street, asking that sewer connection be given to his houses on this street. This was referred to the Board of Wroks.

From Malcolm McIntyre and family appreciating kindness of the city during their recent bereavement.

From the City Clerk of Ottawa regarding a change in the collection of the income taxes. Received.

From the City Engineer reporting that the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission had given notice of their wish to lay gas mains on certain streets. The requests were granted and will be left with the chairman of the Board of Works and the City Engineer.

From the Hydro Electric Power Commission stating that owing to the impossibility of getting construction material that they would be unable to extend the lines of the Peterboro Radial Railway until times were more normal. They expressed their readiness to go ahead at once with the extension of the line down Monaghan Road to Patterson street just as soon as the grading of the road was completed. They have the material for this extension on hand. This was referred to the chairman of the Board of Works and the City Engineer to take the matter up with the Monaghan Council as this is a joint roadway from Charlotte street to Patterson street.

From Henry Hope and Sons asking that a concrete sidewalk be constructed on Monaghan Road from the C.P.R. tracks to their factory. This was handed to the Board of Works.

From the City Clerk of Chatham asking the City Council to pass a resolution to the Dominion Government asking that they take control of the food buestion. The resolution was passed as asked under the head of deputations.

Forgot To Get a Permit.

Mr. J. Hopwood built a garage adjoining the Barrie building without first getting acquainted with the city building law, and he was served with a notice requiring the removal of the building. He asked the city council last night to let the garage remain as he had obtained the consent of Mr. Barrie and Mr. Ackerman to build it there. The council decided that they would like to see conditions and will decide at the next meeting what will be done.

If He Were President

"I hope the Government will build a jail for the fellows who stand around and say they won't register and fill it so full that their feet will stick out of the windows," he said.

"If they are afraid to do it, let them make me President for forty-eight hours, and I'll do it. This is no place for the kind of people who are howling and stirring up trouble."

Three asbestos mines have been opened in China, where extensive deposits of the mineral have been found.

BUSINESS MAN OF IDEALS

Character of Neville Chamberlain—Twenty Minutes For Lunch

Mr. Neville Chamberlain is, in fact, that rare example the man of commerce who has ideals and knows how to put them into practice. He has hitched his wagon to a star and it has not run off the rails, writes an English admirer. He is the hard-working kind of business man whom the country will be in sore need of in the war after the war—the man who works ten and twelve hours every weekday and does not require a long week-end in the country in order to keep fit—the man who goes on steadily at his work and does not make a social function of his mid-day meal on the plea that it is a means of doing business.

While he has been engaged on war work as the Lord Mayor of Birmingham he devoted just about twenty minutes to his lunch, with no break at all for tea. A brisk walk from his house at Edgbaston to the office, and he starts work never later than ten and works through the day until seven in the evening and later, often taking his work home with him. He only discusses the most vital business on the telephone and leaves the rest to his subordinates. He never has any time for leisurely discussions, his talk is always straight to the point at issue; his decisions are quick and unhesitating and invariably right.

Avoid a Possible Fire

In banking up houses for the winter, do not use leaves, straw or other inflammable material, unless entirely covered with earth; a chimney spark, a carelessly thrown match or a cigarette or cigar stub may ignite it.

The earlier the oat seed is sown the better the crop. This does not mean mudding it in, however.

Watch the bon-fire and be sure it is out before you leave it.

AGENT'S WOES AND RISE

How One Young Canadian Earned Big Promotions Quickly

An agent in 1898 and fourth vice president of the world's biggest life insurance company in 1917. This surprising rise marks the career of a Canadian boy, James E. Kavanagh. Kavanagh was born in 1872 at Sharon, York County, and educated at Newmarket and in Toronto. He taught school, and then, during a mid-summer vacation, tried his hand at insurance for the Metropolitan of New York, his first and only insurance love. He let the teaching go—that is, school teaching—to educate the people in insurance lines. While collecting in the Ward in Toronto, he threw up the job three times in "concussion," so to speak. Fortune smiled after these shivers, and he went up fast.

He became an assistant superintendent at Toronto and Brantford in 1897. Two years later he was sent to Eastern Canada. There he was promoted to a superintendency, with headquarters at St. John, N.B. A transfer to Toronto came in 1901, and in 1905 he was made superintendent of agencies for the Great Northern Territory, including the Dominion of Canada east of the Rockies and New York State other than the city.

Mr. Kavanagh has done at least two things that have interested Canadians: (1) When the Metropolitan took over the business of the Union Life this Canadian was given charge of the huge transfer, and accomplished it in less than a month; (2) When the great war staggered humanity Kavanagh had an inspiration—to help insure Toronto's soldiers. The Metropolitan accepted a big share of the insurance—the directors could not resist this persuasive pleader, although at first they refused to even consider taking the war risks.

OLDEST VOLUNTEER

Death of Major Gant on His 100th Birthday

By the death of Major John Castle Gant, at the age of 100, England has lost its oldest volunteer. He caught a chill on his birthday and died at his picturesque residence, Willowhurst, Chiddingly, Sussex. He joined the volunteers at the age of forty-three, when fears of a French invasion resulted in the formation of the force, and he claimed to have provided the humorists of the day with much material for pictorial satire. He was a great friend of Mr. T. Delane, the famous editor of The Times.

Born at Herne (Kent), he was the son of Lieut.-Colonel John Castle Gant, formerly Deputy-Governor of the Tower of London. He was educated for the army, but left it for the law, and became one of the best known solicitors in the City.

He served as a special constable during the Chartist riots. To temperate habits and plenty of outdoor exercise he attributed his long life. He followed the war news closely, and hoisted a flag in front of his house every morning when the papers contained good news.

GIRL PLOWED BETTER

Man Bowed to Superior "Finish" of Lincolnshire Maid

Here is an interesting result of war time exigencies in England: Miss Elsie Jackson, aged 19, of Tattershall Thorpe, defeated Mr. Tom Wilkinson, aged 51, of Dovecote Farm, Wainfleet, in a ploughing match for $50 a side on Mr F. Saul's farm at Wainfleet, Lincolnshire. The test was on barley stubble in heavy ground. Each competitor had to plough half an acre, setting two ridges and one furrow. The work of Miss Jackson, who has been ploughing since she was ten years old, was declared by the judge, Mr. Taylor, of Welton, to be more finished than that of her competitor.

Dying to a Ditty

How many thousands of British soldiers have gone to their death in Flanders and Gallipoli with a music hall song on their lips and in their ears! It was by sheer good luck that the song of the day chanced to be rather a charming one.—W. Archer.

There is little doubt in Africa that the adoption of the policy of consulting native opinion would result in an overwhelming vote being cast throughout what was formerly German Africa in favor of the British flag.

GRAHAM A PROGRESSIVE

Two Imperialistic Journalists of Power and Similarities

Baron Hugh Graham, may be called the Canadian Harmsworth. He has, indeed, not a little in common with Lord Northcliffe, though he is an older man by nearly a score of years. Both have known the struggles of a newspaper's early days. Both were quick to realize that there is no financial end to journalism at all unless you own the journal. Both have treated the newspaper business as a business, and have not objected to being connected with newspapers propounding conflicting policies. Both men adopted a "power behind the throne" kind of attitude.

Both are also Imperialists—and Imperialists of the practical Kipling school as well as with the Disraelian imperialist imagination. Both are men of stupendous ambition. Both are men content to remain physically in the background and thereby enhance the weight of the influence they wield. Neither of them cares much to speak in public. Both have made of their newspapers great vehicles for charitable enterprises and without any detriment to the circulation departments. The day after Lord Northcliffe made Mr. Lloyd-George Premier, he was giving him a "taste of his quality" by bludgeoning him for including Mr. Balfour and Lord Robert Cecil in the Government. Similarly Sir Hugh Graham, after doing his utmost in the Montreal Star to put Sir Robert Borden in office, came out strongly against his Cabinet selections.

BARON GRAHAM

It may be that Baron Graham, like his brother Peer of newspaperdom in England, has made something of a fetish of Imperialism. But it has been a fetish that has paid—which not all fetishes do. But though the Canadian newspaper baron and the English newspaper baron have much in common in method, and possibly in character, [illegible] very unlike in manner. Lord Northcliffe's manner is massive. Graham, on the contrary, lacks that resolute mien altogether. In fact, they would not chime with his personality. "The supreme pussy-footer" one has heard him called, [illegible] that is unkind.

"Gassed" Neighbors Children

Sentence of three months' hard labor was passed at Warwickshire Quarter Sessions on a Coventry toolmaker named Ernest Lord, charged with causing acetylene gas to be taken by two children so as to do them bodily harm. The prisoner was alleged to have made a hole through the wall from his bedroom to the next door house and passed the gas into a room where two children were in bed. There was stated to be some trouble between the prisoner and his neighbor.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

Darcy a Slacker; There Are Others.

(Chicago Tribune)

Les Darcy, the Australian prizefighter, died on Wednesday. The sporting writers of the newspapers think that his death may be indirectly if not directly traced to the treatment he received from such American opinion as thought it important to say something about him.

A prize fighter dying under reproaches may present a case to strain the imagination, but Darcy was crucified. Whatever his sufferings were—and they must have been considerable—they were generally unimportant except as they revealed the ability of American opinion, in a mood at once hysterical and conventional, to torture the individual.

Darcy offended, or seemed to offend a convention. He was not in the Australian forces fighting for the British Empire. He was over here fighting for himself. His position in this may not have been admirable or his explanations may have been good. We do not know. For the purpose of this argument it is not important to care.

Gov Whitman, of New York, refused to give him permission to box in New York. This started official disapproval and the rest was easy in mob psychology. The willingness of people to worry a wounded individual in the back is astonishingly cruel at times.

We tried to put Mrs. Pankhurst in the pillory. We hounded Gorky There seems to be satisfaction of egotism in throwing stones at an individual whose case, being precisely like many other cases, happens to be made tragic by prominence. An incident may make it conspicuous.

If Whitman had not decided to acquire easy merit by becoming theatrically virtuous in respect to Darcy the stones might not have come at him from all directions. Darcy was high-lighted for an instant and the pack was after him.

He was a slacker. Why, then, not be indignant at Freddie Welsh? Why not look about in the home field. What the difference between Darcy and Ty Cobb?—not singling out Cobb but using him for this illustration. If Darcy was a slacker, what are the New York Giants, leading the National league? What are Chicago Cubs and the White Sox? What are all the able-bodied, vigorous young men whose work in athletics proves their fitness for military service

The curious illogicality of human sympathies and human opinion permits an actual defense of the great mass of American athletes and at the same time permitted the singling out of an individual for the stones.

KHAKI POPULAR IN BASEBALL.

COLUMBUS, O., June 5.—"Hank" Gowdy, star catcher of the Braves, who on Saturday enlisted as a private in the Ohio National Guard, when asked if it was his purpose to finish out the season with his team, said:

"On July 15 I will discard the baseball uniform for the khaki, and I will play no more ball, except, perhaps, in training camp, until my country takes my uniform. With the hordes of Kaiser Bill at large, khaki is the proper style for every red-blooded American, and especially for every man who has been privileged to keep himself in condition through the medium of baseball. What about my contract and my $6,000 salary? Oh, I have already notified Mr. Stallings that my contract expires when my country calls me, and, of course, the salary goes with it. But what of that? This war is not a matter of dollars and cents. Its a bigger and more vital thing than that.

"Do I expect others from professional baseball to join me? Yes, I know a number who will never wait for conscription, and among them I think you'll find Rabbit Maranville, of our team, who will, I think, be found in a naval uniform before the end of the baseball season."

Baby Was Buried in Biscuit Box Near Bewdley

An inquest was held at Port Hope by Coroner McKinley to to enquire into the cause of the death of a new born infant (premature birth) of Mrs. Lavengne White, of Bewdley. The premature birth aroused considerable suspicion, and it is alleged that it was brought on by illegal operation performed by an old woman in that vicinity. Chief Royce investigated and he found the remains of the infant buried in the back yard in a tin biscuit box. The infant was twelve inches in length, weighed one pound, and its left arm was broken at the shoulder. After viewing the remains the inquest was adjourned until to-morrow evening.

WAR TIME PROHIBITION

Drastic Measures Proposed By American Senate

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Prohibition legislation was approved by the Senate Finance Committee as a new feature of the war tax bill.

Prohibitive taxes upon distillation of whiskey and other spirits for beverage purposes, with a ban upon their importation, were agreed upon by a substantial majority of the committee. Taxes fixed by the house on beer and wines were left unchanged, though they have not yet been finally approved. General suspension of beverage production by distilleries and use of liquor now in bonded warehouses probably be the effect of the new tax section if enacted into law.

By using chrysalis oil and mulberry cellulose a Japanese has invented an artificial silk that is said more nearly to approach the luster of the genuine than any heretofore manufactured.

Open Air Meeting Lacked a Hamlet

CITY SOLICITOR GORDON AND SECRETARY KEEN FAIL TO APPEAR.

The open air meeting to discuss the high cost of living problem billed for the market square last night proved considerable of a failure. The two speakers failed to show up. One of these was Secretary Keen of the Cooperation Association at Brantford and the other was no less a personage than City Solicitor Gordon. The crowd waited patiently until about 8.30 for the expected flow of oratory but all in vain. Then Mr. A. Murray, the local head of the co-operative movement, climbed into a waiting auto and addressed the audience along the same lines which he followed later in the council chamber.

Mr. C. E. Adams followed Mr. Murray and it was on his suggestion that the crowd moved in a body toward the City Hall where council was in session and as many as possible wedged themselves into the chamber, filling the gallery to overflowing. There were a number of ladies, mostly soldiers wives, in the audience on the market square and these led in the march for the City Hall when the word was given.

Mr. Gordon not only failed to appear in person but sent no explanation or apology.

ALLOWED DOG ON STREET FINED TWO DOLLARS

No matter how much warning is given the people about the necessity for keeping dogs in proper enclosures, there are just as many persons willing to forget this warning. This morning at the police court Mrs. Leonard of East City was fined $2.00 for not having seen that her family pet was tied up.

The excuse that the dog had broke its fastenings did not go with the magistrate.

Inspector Again Issues Warning

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton is out after a few of the merchants who will not clean up the rear of their stores when given every opportunity to get rid of the piles of rubbish and ashes by assisting the Garbage Collector to the extent of putting the rubbish where it can be got at and in boxes. Mr. Stapleton took a few representatives to the rear of the stores at George and Hunter streets, and while those facing George in the middle of the block were clean those near the corner were littered with rubbish and ashes and the Sanitary Inspector stated that the Garbage Collector had been there to take the stuff away, if it had been placed gettable.

The same condition of affairs exists at the rear of the stores off the lane running from the Post Office west and these got notices from the Officer this a.m. to clean up or appear in court.

Monster Deputation Urges City Council

have been very much profit in the deal. He was a strong advocate of having the coal weighed on the market scales. The people would then be sure that they were getting 2,000 lbs. for their ton. He differed with the Mayor when the latter said that Peterboro was the first municipality to go into the coal business. St. Catharines had started one last year.

In 1915 and Now

Mayor Duffus was very favorable to the co-operative idea. There was a large deputation present, and it would be a good idea to start now.

Ald. Dobbin pointed out to Mr. Murray and to Mr. Runnett that the conditions existing in 1915 were very much different than at present. Gananoque was not getting her coal as easy this year. Mr. Runnett took exception to this. He knew that three vessels with 250 to 300 tons each had arrived there in the last week.

The Mayor again pointed out that the city was doing everything possible to relieve the situation. The patriotic Fund was arranging to take care of those on the Patriotic Fund.

For Fair Weight

Mr. C. Adams was very strong for the coal to be weighed on the market scales, and he also thought that the Dominion Government ought to take the matter with the United States. It was easy to get coal by water, but not by rail. If the Trent Canal was opened to Lake Ontario, Peterboro could enjoy the privilege of getting coal by water. If the people knew that they will get coal they wil be satisfied. Speculation in necessaries should be stopped.

Mayor Duffus pointed out that the police were enforcing the weighing of coal occasionally on the market scales, and so far had not found any shortage, in fact, in some cases it had been over.

Mr. Runnett thought that the city should go farther with their investigation of local conditions. The dealers want shaking up. (Applause.)

The Mayor said that if the canal was opened it would certainly improve conditions. He asked as many as possible to be at the meeting of the municipalities interested in the opening of the canal at the council chamber on Thursday.

Has Money Lost Its Force?

Ald. Langford thought that the size of the deputation showed how anxious the people were in the coal situation. He was quite confident that money did not talk to the coal men this year.

Ald. Weir was anxious that the Chief of Police report on the weighing of coal as it had been found. If any short loads had been found the council should know who had been guilty.

Mr. Wiman reported that his relatives had purchased coal at Pickering for $6.75 per ton at the car.

Mr. Murray was confident that the people would readily put up the money if assured of the coal.

The Mayor hoped that the people believed that the council were doing the best it was possible. They had got the advice of a coal authority in Toronto, and had been told that there would be lots of coal next month.

Mr. Runnett pointed out that the American committee to investigate the price of coal reported that it cost $3.60 at the mine. Where did the difference between $9.00 and $10.00 come in?

A Voice: How is it that some people can get coal here and others cannot.

Mayor Duffus said he had found that condition himself.

What the Government Is Doing

Ald. Weir stated that the Government required all coal dealers to make a monthly statement under oath showing the amount of coal received and the price paid for it, and also the amount on hand. The coal company his firm represented had promised them as great a tonnage as last year, which was the largest they had ever handled. Peterboro citizens were well handled last winter, and while the situation was serious then it would be more serious this coming winter. They had told their customers to get coal wherever they could as there was no positive guarantee of the supply.

Mr. Runnett. There is a general feeling that the Peterboro coal dealers are not giving the people a square deal. Every one knows that in July and August the price is always higher.

Ald. Smith Explains

Ald. Smith pointed out that the U. S. being at war made coal harder to get. In Peterboro the wood supply was short owing to one of the Lumber Mills not running which meant a shortage of several thousand cords. So far as the price of coal was concerned, if Mr. Runnett was correct that the price was $3.60 at the mine then the cost was easily figured. It cost $2.00 from the mine to the Bridge, $1.42 from the Bridge to Peterboro and he had been informed that it cost $1.75 per ton to handle and deliver. This would bring the cost up to $8.75 and if it was sold at $9.00 the dealer had very little profit. He felt confident that the situation would ease up next month.

Ald. Dobbin informed the deputation that The Canadian Patriotic Fund had been able to arrange for coal for the dependents of soldiers at the front and had been assured of a sufficient supply of coal for this purpose. The same firm would not guarantee the same supply to the city for general use. It was for a patriotic object, and the dependents would get coal when they needed it in place of checks.

The Usual Resolution

A resolution asking the Dominion Government to take action to control the food supply was passed on the motion of Ald. Smith and McIntyre.

A number of the deputation were anxious to be at the meeting of the railway board to-morrow if they would not lose their bonus, and the Mayor promised to interview Mr. Patterson on the subject.

Character is contagious for it involves the dissemination of ideals. The influence of a strong, consecrated personality radiates idealistic influences into the lives of those with whom it comes in contact. This in turn leads to better living, and more active Christian leadership and service. This, we believe, has been characteristic of you during the four years of your pastorate, and accounts for much of the splendid progress which George Street Church has made. You not only set high standards from year to year, but reached them, and in doing so endeared yourself to your congregation.

We, as members of the Epworth League, decided to take this opportunity of expresing to you our very sincere regret that you are leaving us so soon, and also our deep appreciation of the interest you have always taken in us—in fact, the most interesting feature of your work to us has been your recognition of the importance of the Epworth League as a vital factor in the development of Christian character in the lives of our young people. You have given untiring devotion and effort to rasing our spiritual and social standards, and much of our success has been in no small measure due to your oversight and constant attendance at our meetings.

Your hearty and sympathetic co-operation with us in all our plans, and your cheery presence with us, have always been a blessing and inspiration. More than that, your consistent Christian influence has meant much in the lives of many of us.

The field to which you go will offer fresh opportunities for similar work, and we feel sure you will, under God's guidance, prove the means of bringing blesing into the lives of many there.

In wishing you every success, we pray that God's blessing and guidance may continue to be upon you and yours. We on our part will long treasure happy recollections of the many pleasant associations connected with your sojourn in Peterboro.

CANUCKS RETAKE LENS STATION

BOARD OF RY. COMMISSION RULE THAT CITY COUNCIL MAY CONDUCT COAL YARD

Debenture Bylaw Must However be Passed by Council and Debentures Printed and Deposited in Bank as Security For Costs of Scheme.

At the court house this morning, commencing at ten o'clock, the Ontario Board of Railway Commissioners opened its enquiry into the proposition to establish and operate a municipal coal yard in Peterborough.

The Board was represented by Mr. D. M. McIntyre, chairman, and Messrs. A. B. Ingram, and H. N Kittson, all of Toronto. Mr. A. S. Small, secretary of the Board, was also present.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada was represented by Mr. H. A. Harrington and Mr. C. H. Cox, both of Toronto. The latter gentleman testified in behalf of the coal dealers in Toronto.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, city solicitor, conducted the enquiry in support of the corporation's application.

Application Granted.

The result of the enquiry was that the Board conceded the right of the municipality to establish and operate a coal yard, providing a bylaw authorising the issue of debentures to defray the cost of same is passed by council, and the debentures printed and deposited in a bank as security that the municipal act in this connection will be lived up to. Also the municipality must make its coal yard accounting returns to the Municipal Bureau every three months. In making the Board's order, Mr. McIntyre was gratified to notice the sane and rational views entertained by all parties concerned—absolutely free from all acrimony or bitterness. In view of the coal dealers' favorable attitude toward the proposition the Board could do nothing else than acquiesce in the city's application. These are extraordinary conditions under which all are living, and they warrant extraordinary measures, the Council of Peterborough must enter into the project entirely on their own responsibility, and should vest the operation of its coal yard in the hands of a business administration enjoying the confidence of citizens in general.

Preliminary Proceedings.

In opening the enquiry Chairman McIntyre remarked that this was a new matter for the board, which had no settled procedure in regard to such a question as now under consideration.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, in support of the city's application, submitted through City Clerk Armstrong that the municipal coal yard bylaw had been passed by Council unanimously, and notice regarding the readings of the bylaw published according to statute.

The chairman pointed out that in the bylaw no provision had been made for issuing debentures or levying a rate this year to defray the cost of the scheme.

Argument here resulted in Mr. Gordon's guaranteeing that Council will vote on a bylaw authorizing the issue of debentures to meet this oversight, engendered by an amendment in the act since the original bylaw had been prepared. In this way the board's objections would be met. As the rate had already been struck, it would be impossible to levy this year on the taxes.

After some opposition from Mr. Harrington, who characterized the project as a visionary scheme, composed of a supposition that such and such could be done, the board permitted the enquiry to proceed.

THE TESTIMONY.

Ald. Dobbin.

Secretary of the Patriotic Fund, was the first witness called, and to Mr. Gordon's questioning replied:

"The city advertised for tenders for coal for municipal buildings early in May and received no replies. Dealers will sell, but only enough to keep customers actually going; some are supplied, others are not. I can get no assurance from my dealer of 17 years as to when I can get coal. The mayor and myself enquired into the prospects of getting coal for city purposes, and received hearty assurance of a supply for patriotic requirements, but not so in regard to the establishment for municipal coal yard.

In other years dealers would walk the streets soliciting orders at summer rates, but now conditions are reversed. Our object is not in inflict a hardship on the local dealers, whose position and operations are in keeping with those of dealers in other localities.

To Mr. Harrington, Mr. Dobbin said his enquiries regarding coal were

THE TRENT CANAL OPENING MUST NOT LONGER BE DELAYED

MR. BURNHAM'S APPEAL.

Editor Review: The importance of the opening of the Trent Canal is so great that I hope there will be a large attendance of citizens at the Mayor's meeting on Thursday evening. It is not understood here why the G. T. R. bridge at Campbellford should have been allowed to stand in the way of the opening of the canal, at its present six-foot depth, from Lake Ontario to Lake Simcoe. We all understand that the war has held up the completion of the whole canal from Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario at the full 8 ft. 4 in. depth, but that is another matter. There is no excuse for allowing the present postponement, and we will have the support of the Government against the minister in his present course if we "go to it" and insist upon what most assuredly should be done without delay. The minister pledged himself to have this bridge matter attended to, but, as his letter to the Prime Minister shows, he has failed to grasp the situation, and I have taken the matter up so as to lose no time.

Armed Steamer Sinks Hun Sub.

AMERICAN VESSEL BLEW PIRATE CRAFT CLEAR OUT OF WATER.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, June 6. — A German submarine is believed to have been sunk by an armed American steamer in a running fight lasting an hour and a half, in which thirty-five shots were fired by the submarine and twenty-five by the steamer. An official announcement by the State Department today says the steamer's final shot "apparently struck the submarine, which rose clear out of the water and stood stern end up for a few seconds. Then she disappeared."

B.C. SOLDIERS RETAKE GROUND LOST AT LENS

VERY FEW CASUALTIES.

Troops From Pacific Province Hold Fast to Their Position.

(By Stewart Lyon.)

Canadian Headquarters in France, June 6. — Lens central electric station was finally incorporated in the Canadian lines this morning. It was occupied again by the British Columbians last night. The occupation cost very few casualties, fewer than many of the skirmishes that have taken places round it.

During last night further progress was made in clearing out the trenches in the neighborhood of the station. The enemy used gas shells and heavy guns in his effort to stop this movement, but this morning the British Columbians hold fast every foot of territory gained during the night.

BRITISH GAIN GROUND WEST OF LENS AND FOUR GERMAN BALLOONS BROUGHT DOWN

Harbor, Dock and Work Shops at Ostend Badly Damaged by British Airships and Several Vessels Sunk—Enemy Raiding Parties Driven Back by French.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 6. — The British made an attack last night on the Arras front north of the River Scarpe, the war office announces. Ground was gained in two sectors. The statement says: "We attacked last night north of the Scarpe, and made further progress on the western slopes of Greenland Hill. We gained ground slightly west of Lens."

HUN AIRSHIPS DESTROYED.

LONDON, June 6. — Four of the German airplanes returning from yesterday's raid over England were destroyed by British pilots, it is announced officially. One British pilot, who pursued the Germans toward Dunkirk, brought down two of the raiders. Later ten British machines from Dunkirk engaged the returning Germans, destroying two of their machines and forcing down four.

DAMAGE WROUGHT AT OSTEND.

LONDON, June 6. — Photographic reconnaissances of the Belgian port of Ostend, recently attacked by British aviators, show that the majority of the dockyards and workshops were damaged, it is announced officially. Serious damage was done to other harbor works, and several vessels were sunk.

TIDE STILL AGAINST GERMANS.

PARIS, June 6. — There was great activity during the night over a large part of Chemin des Dames and further west between the Alliette and Laon road. Artillery fighting became very intense late at night, especially east of Vauxaillon and north of Moulin de Laffaux, and over the whole region northwest of Brays-en-Laonnois. Near Hurtebise, after a spirited bombardment, the Germans late yesterday made two attacks in vain on our positions northeast of Monument. The Germans were driven back to their trenches after a violent engagement, in which they suffered heavy losses at the hands of our soldiers, and our line was maintained everywhere.

Over the remainder of the front there was intermittent cannonading.

On th Belgian front lively actions took place late at night. Our pilots engaged in numerous fights with the enemy yesterday. Seven German airplanes and one captive balloon were brought down. It is also learned that another German airplane was forced to the earth east of Filain on Monday.

French Canadians Choose Candidate

PUT UP A MAN TO OPPOSE REGULAR NOMINEES IN RUSSELL COUNTY.

OTTAWA, June 6.—(Special to Review)—The French-Canadians of Russell county have chosen James Charette of Eastview to represent them at the next general election. The other candidates are David Merkly, Conservative, and the Hon. Chas. J. Murphy, Liberal. The latter is the present member. The convention was very large and enthusiastic and declared its endorsement of a French propaganda in Canada.

PARLIAMENT MAY BE DISSOLVED AND ELECTION ORDERED WITHIN 48 HOURS IS LATEST RUMOR AT THE CAPITAL

No Agreement Reached by Leaders After Another Consultation—Liberals Claim That Whole Deal is off and That Government Must Go to Country.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, June 6. — Sir Robert Borden announced at one o'clock that here would be no statement today on the coalition problem.

The Cabinet situation was outwardly unchanged this afternoon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had conferred the morning with Geo. P. Graham and F. F. Pardee. Afterwards the Opposition leader visited the Privy Counlil, where he was closeted for some time with the Premier. On emerging from the meeting both stated there was nothing to announce. Sir Robert said he did not expect any announcement would be made today. It was freely rumored in Liberal circles around the House today that the whole deal was off, but this is not borne out by the attitude of the party leaders.

If the two leaders are unable to control their following, an election will be unavoidable. No one at Ottawa in the political zone will be surprised if the House is dissolved within forty-eight hours.

CRIMINAL CASES TO COME BEFORE COUNTY COURT

Two Are Charges of Forgery and One Alleged Theft—Interesting Civil Suits.

The June session of the County Court will open here next Tuesday before his Honor Judge Huycke.

There are a number of criminal cases to be considered by the Grand Jury as follows:—

The King against B. J. Winn, charged with forging a check of the Canadian General Electric Co.

The King against J. M Payton, charged with the theft from the Canadian Swift Co.

The King against Minnie Burns. In this case there are three charges preferred, one of theft, the second one of forging a check and a third of forging a registered mail receipt book. These offences were said to have been committed at Norwood.

THE CIVIL DOCKET

There are three cases to be considered by the Petit Jury of a civil nature.

White v Robinson.—In this case Samuel White horseman, living in Peterboro, alleges that he went to work for Dr. F. L. Robinson, April 26th, 1916, and continued with him until July 3rd, the same year. The plaintiff was to lay out a route for defendant's horse and was to receive $75 a month and whatever money he disbursed as expenses. He claims to have earned $170.00 during that period, and paid out $61.25. He only received $86.00, leaving a balance due of $145.25, for whch amount he sues.

The defendant admits that the plaintiff worked for him as per his claim, but alleges negligence and carelessness on the part of the plaintiff in the handling of the horse, and counter-claims for $150. Mr. A. O. Langley appears for the Plaintiff, and Gordon and Widdifield for the defendant.

Lonsdale v. Payne.—This is an action for $5,000 breach of promise, in which Elizabeth A. Lonsdale, of the Township of Dummer, claims against J. Russel Payne, of Smith, for failure to marry the plaintiff. Gordon and Widdifield for Plaintiff, and Peck, Kerr, and McElderry for the defendant.

Taylor v. McGee.—In this case Dolly Taylor, of Asphodel, claims $600 wages from Andrew McGee, of the same township. Moore and Wearing for the plaintiff, and O'Connell and Corkery for the defendant.

AIR RAIDS ON HUN SHIPPING

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 6. — An official statement announces that a bombing raid was carried out against hostile shipping at Zeebrugge on Monday night.

Successful raids were made at night north of Armentieres. The enemy's trenches were entered at a number of points and many casualties inflicted.

The total casualties in yesterday's raid were 12 killed and 36 injured.

A large Glasgow shipbuilding firm now employs women to build ships.

MEMBERS OF FIRE BRIGADE GIVEN INCREASE IN WAGES

Fire, Water and Light Committee Recommend More Pay for Assistant Chief, Captain, Lieutenan: and Men—New Schedule to Date From June 1.

The Fire, Water, and Light Committee met last evening and dealt with a number of matters of importance to the city generally. There were present Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Dobbin (chairman), Duncan Weir, Worth, Stratton, Smith and Taylor. Fire Chief Howard was also present.

New Lights

Applications for new lights were received from several sections of the city, and the following were ordered installed:—

The light at the top of the hill on McFarlane Street was ordered moved to a point 60 feet east.

A new light was ordered placed on MacFarlane street at Centre street.

A light was ordered placed on Monaghan Road opposite the residence of Mr. McElderry.

Clothing For Firemen

The tenders for the clothing required during the year for the department were opened. George Evans quoted $35.00 and $$30.00 for suits according to cloth chosen, and $28.00 for the frieze coats for the winter. George Ball quoted $28.00 and $30.00 per suit according to grades of cloth, with extra charge for the extra pair of trousers.

The matter of dealing with this item was left with the chairman.

Will Get Higher Pay

Chairman Dobbin, reported the difficulty which was being encountered in getting the department up to full strength.

It was all due to the high rate of wages being paid in the different industries, and it was impossible to keep the men satisfied with conditions at the Fire Hall when the long hours were considered as well as the fact that the men only got one day off in ten. Some of the men at a conference with the chief had told him that they did not think that he had placed their case before the committee as strong as he might. The men had asked him to arrange so, that they could have a day off in every eight, and he had given a promise to re-adjust the schedule just as soon as the department was up to strength.

Chief Howard, in reply to a query as to the possibility of getting men if a beter inducement was offered, stated that he knew of one of his old men whom he classed as a natural born fire-fighter, who would return to the hall if given $1,000 a year salary. There were three others in the same mind. He had tried to make things as pleasant as possible for the men, but there was a feeling of unrest among them, and until that was got rid of the department would not run smoothly. The men felt that the council did not realise the number of hours they put in at the hall, nor the danger, and were in a class by themselves so far as the weekly holiday was concerned.

An expression of opinion was asked from the aldermen, and each

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 6, 1917

WHAT THE COUNCIL CAN DO.

MAYOR DUFFUS told the monster deputation that thronged the Council chamber on Monday night that the aldermen had done everything in their power to investigate the high cost of living, under the authority recently given municipalities by the Federal Government. A special committee has been appointed, of which Alderman Dobbin is chairman. The coal question was about the only matter taken up, and the result of that enquiry is now before the public. But there is another matter into which the special committee can enquire, and they have all the requisite authority to act.

It is of common report that only last week three carloads of eggs were brought into this city from Chicago, and that they were not put on the market, as one would naturally suppose would be done to relieve the shortage and at least steady the price. The eggs, it is said, were to be stored, to be held for another rise in price.

During the administration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier bonuses were paid firms and individuals to establish cold storage plants in order to conserve food in the time of plenty against a possible shortage in the future. One man in this city was paid a bonus of $3000 for this purpose. It is said that there is plenty of foodstuffs stored in this plant today. If this is so, the aldermen have full power to look into the matter and report to the Government. Any owner of a cold storage plant, any coal or other dealer, can be called before the special committee of Council and made to testify under oath. The committee has all the power of a court to act in such matters, and the exercise of such power is all the consumers ask for. When the investigation is finished the evidence taken is to be submitted to the department, when it will be decided whether or not the case is one which warrants a prosecution under the Act. Nothing can be fairer than that. The arrangement is in line with the established order of things in regard to the enforcement of law and order.

Our partisan-blind and hide-bound contemporary on George Street, that can never be brought to admit that anything good can originate with the Borden Administration, objects to the method of procedure on the flimsy ground that it would tend to create hard feeling among neighbors. We do not believe that Mayor Duffus and his colleagues are likely to be influenced by any such consideration, but will do their duty regardless of consequences.

There may be nothing in the rumor that foodstuffs are being hoarded in this city. Then again the reports may be well founded. At all events, so long as these rumors are in circulation there will be unrest and discontent among the consumers. The Council can in a short time and at no extra expense to the city set all such matters at rest. The power to act is theirs. Mayor Duffus himself asked the Government for just such authority, and now that it has been given him he should not hesitate to use it. The puerile objections of The Examiner to the new order are not entitled to a moment's consideration.

THE CANKER OF PARTISANSHIP.

OUR CONTEMPORARY is right when it says that the great curse of this country is partisanship with all the evils which follow in its trail. It is unfortunate, however, that a newspaper will in one breath deplore a condition and in the next utter something which serves as a striking example of the very national vice which it decries.

There is a vast distinction between partisanship and partyism. A man can be a devoted member of a party without being a blind and servile follower of his leader. He may continue to do his own thinking. He can be a party man without surrendering his own individuality. He will not feel it his duty to apologise for the mistakes or attempt to defend any questionable acts of his party or any member of it.

It is impossible to have a government without a divergence of views, and when such exists there is sure to be party alignment. It is partyism that gives spice to politics and keeps alive the interest of the people in the affairs of the nation. Excitement is the one great attraction for the average mortal. The winter entertainments are made interesting in proportion as the members of a literary society array themselves on one or the other side of a debate.

There is no country in the world where racial, religious and political differences have been made the tools of designing agitators as they have been in Canada. There is no other country in the world where the people have been so tolerant of the mistakes—and worse—of their public men. It is this uncharitable spirit of partisanship that has set one part of the Dominion against another in a strife which it will require years to soothe.

The so-called Nationalist is not necessarily a criminal or a menace to the community. The worst that can be said of him is that he is a man of narrow vision and of selfish aims. He considers himself the main proposition. He makes his own country supreme above all the other nations of the earth, and the man who does this cannot fairly be branded as a traitor. His spirit is provincial rather than treasonable. He is in the same class as the man who exalts his own family interests in a community and, living entirely to himself, permits his neighbors to shift for themselves, refusing to extend them aid even if their dwellings are on fire.

It is the partisan press and the jingoistic agitators that have misrepresented the Nationalist and his cult and held them up as objects of public detestation. Left to himself, the Nationalist would have cut no more figure in the national life than the harmless fanatic who holds some peculiar view with regard to astronomy or religion. The Bourassas and the Lavergnes have thriven on the importance that has been attached to their utterances by newspapers and politicians who have assailed them for partisan ends. Nationalism in Canada was nothing more serious in the country's life than what the profession designates a benign tumor, but it has been irritated into a cancerous sore that will require years of skilful treatment to heal.

Canada, as part of the British Empire, threatened with destruction, is facing the gravest crisis that has ever confronted a nation. Its fate hangs in the balance, and at such a time one would naturally expect the leaders to drop personal and all other differences and work shoulder to shoulder for their country's good. Instead of that, we see at Ottawa hesitation, every moment of which increases the peril. Instead of co-operation there is an unseemly jockeying for party advantage.

HOW PETERBOROUGH GROWS.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO, the closing year of the last century, there were 1,483 pupils enrolled in the public schools of this city during the month of May, and the average daily attendance was 1,315. In May of this year the number on the roll was 2,530 and the attendance was 2,290. Nothing in the shape of statistics could be produced to better demonstrate the growth of the population of Peterborough. It is gratifying, too, to know that the school system, both as to general efficiency, buildings and playgrounds, have kept pace with the increase, and that today Peterborough is in this regard second to no other city in the Dominion. All that is lacking is an institution for technical training, and this is one of the additions in prospect.

The school population is steadily increasing, and further expenditure will be required in meeting the needs of the rising generation. Another room is to be opened in the Queen Mary School after the summer vacation, and this will serve to relieve the pressure, temporarily at least.

In May, 1900, there were 153 pupils, with a daily average attendance of 143 at the Collegiate Institute. In the same month of this year the number enrolled at the Collegiate was 281, and the daily attendance was 253. These figures show a falling off of from twenty-five to thirty over the immediately preceding months, but this fact is a cause for congratulations for the staff of that institution. The decreased attendance is easily explained. It represents the number of boys, juvenile patriots, who have given up their school course for a time to work on farms, and so aid in the production campaign.

The future of any country that can make such a showing will be safe in the hands of the generation now growing up.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

A Comparison.

(Buffalo Express.)

Totol British casualties for the month of May were 112,000 officers and men. It looks like an appalling figure. But Austrian casualties for the two weeks of the Isouzo drive on this single front are placed at 300,000. Which side is nearer to exhaustion.

It Looks Suspicious.

(Washington Herald.)

Maybe there are no food pirates but that 60 per cent. increase in the price of cornmeal just after the department of agriculture advises its use as a substitute for wheat flour, leaves grave room for a doubt.

Labor and Conscription.

(Victoria Colonist.)

Not one of those who are face to face with the danger and realize the imperious call for more man power would oppose conscription. Thus the Dominion Trades and Labor congress does not represent its members who have put their lives to the peril in France. Nor do we believe that it represents the better judgment of the workers in Canada. If it does there is greater selfishness in our midst than we had ever believed possible.

Enlightened Self-Interest.

Nothing would have influenced President Wilson to take this lukewarm nation into war except the conviction, the knowledge that if Germany defeated Great Britain our turn was next. We should have had all the money and none of the guns, wide open and inviting conquest.

COMMUNAL KITCHENS IN LONDON

One of the most striking results of England's realization of the necessity for food economy is the widespread movement to establish communal or co-operative kitchens, which is rapidly producing practical efforts in the larger cities. The ministry of food has stamped the movement with official approval by enlisting the help of the national war saving committee to encourage through its local branches the establishment of kitchens where needed, and a model kitchen under government auspices is to be opened in London next week by the queen. The real inception of the movement, however, was entirely spontaneous, arising out of the new complexities of domestic economy imposed upn all classes by the war; and many see in its rapid growth not merely an idea that has "caught on" in a crisis, but one of the permanent social changes wrought by the great conflict.

Readers of Dickens will remember that London once had its liberal supply of cook shops whence food for reasonable charges might be placed piping hot on the family table. These were long since swept away by the rise of the popular restaurant, which in its turn, especially under the food restriction of wartime, has "fallen down" as a place of adequate refection. This fact has been abundantly recognized by the establishment of canteens and special eating places for war workers everywhere. There remained the children and women at home, many of the latter devoting part of their time to indirect war work, and thus creating among many classes a really acute shortage of labor in housework. To supplement buying preparation and cookinge of food, the co-operativ kitchen has sprung up.

May Use Kitchen After War.

There seems little doubt that the communal kitchen, if it is established to anything like the extent that seems probable, will work something like a revolution in the domestic economy of this country, which will last long after the war. Here, where every man's home is his castle, it would have been well nigh impossible in peace times to shake the belief of the average citizen that everything contributing to home life must be done on the premises. Now, with home life widely disrupted by the war, people are ready to accept the communal kitchen as a necessity. Once they have learned its advantages they will demand it as a convenience. That is already proved by the fact that the restaurants in neighborhoods where kitchens have been established are forced to compete with them on their own lines. And undoubtedly in the days of economic stress that must come after the war the population will not be inclined to give up anything that has shown itself capable of mitigating the cost of living, in time, money and domestic drudgery.

WHY THE COLONIES ARE LOYAL

Early in the war a distinguished German professor frankly expressed his inability to account for the loyalty to Great Britain so impressively manifested by Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and even India. He concluded that "English magic alone" explained this strange, self-sacrificing spirit at a time when colonial insurrection and revolt might be so "safe."

In commenting on these observations, English Liberals pointed out that the German professor had made one characteristic mistake. Magic there was, beyond question, in the relations that had so puzzled him, but the magic was in the freedom, the home rule, which Great Britain had learned to confer on its colonies, and in nowise in the mere name or fame of the United Kingdom.

A most interesting and instructive despatch from Manila was published a few days ago, in which another striking illustration of the magic of freedom, of enlightened and unselfish colonial policies, was unconsciously afforded. According to the despatch, "the most remarkable development in the war situation in the Philippines has been the unanimity with which leaders, newspapers and people have taken the American attitude as their own." Bodies elected by native voters, meetings of representative Filipino officials and even an association of native veterans who had fought in 1900 against the United States, it appears, have pledged their loyalty to America and offered their services to the chief executive of the island in any capacity.

These things unquestionably are the direct result of the American policy of extending self-government in the Philippines and treating the natives with justice and benevolence. The islands have not been exploited by Americans. This is why they are spontaneously making the American cause their own. The magic of self-rule, of trust and confidence, has not failed in their case. It never fails. Prussianism has yet to understand this great truth.

MASON'S MELODIES

If you believe our country's right and want to help her win the fight, then buy a liberty bond. If you're in earnest when you say you wish to help in every way, then buy a liberty bond. Now you've a chance that is a beaut, to clip off coupons like a plute, so buy a liberty bond. You wish to put some coin away for time of stress or rainy day? Then buy a liberty bond. Its value will never retreat, it's good as everlasting wheat, so buy a liberty bond. And when the course of war is run, you proudly tell what you have done, and show your liberty bond. And that will show you stood up strong to help your Uncle Sam along; hast bought thy liberty bond? Oh, talk is cheap and war comes high, so let's be quiet an hour and buy a good old liberty bond. Don't let the rich man have them all; produce your pocket book and call for one large liberty bond. The workers of this happy land should form in line, with cash in hand, to buy their liberty bonds. Than in the war they'll have a part; they're close up to the nation's heart, so buy a liberty bond.

ARTIFICIAL DIAMONDS.

Largest of These About One-Fiftieth Inch Across.

Experiments have shown that real diamonds can be produced by artificial means though the gems so produced are very small. Diamonds in nature appear to be formed by the separation of carbon from molten iron under pressure, and experiments in large metallurgical works have shown that when a special form of steel is made by cooling the molten metal under intense hydraulic pressure microscopic diamonds are formed.

"The largest artificial diamond yet formed," says the latest edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica, "was found in a block of steel and slag from a furnace in Luxembourg. It is clear and crystaline, and measures about one-fiftieth of an inch across."

A striking confirmation of the theory that natural diamonds have been produced from their solution in masses of molten iron, the metal from which has gradually oxidized and been washed away under cycles of atmospheric influences, is afforded by the occurrence of diamonds in a meteorite. The Encyclopædia Britannica thus interestingly describes this remarkable phenomenon:

"On a broad open plain in Arizona, over an area of about five miles in diameter, lie scattered thousands of masses of metallic iron, the fragments varying in weight from a ton to a fraction of an ounce. There is little doubt that these fragments formed part of a meteoric shower, although no record exists as to when the fall took place. Altogether ten tons of this iron have been collected and specimens of the Canyon Diablo meteorite are in most collectors' cabinets.

"Dr. A. E. Foote, a mineralogist, when cutting a section of this meteorite, found the tools injured by something vastly harder than metallic iron, and an emery wheel used for grinding it was ruined. He attacked the specimen chemically and soon afterwards announced to the scientific world that the Canyon Diablo meteorite contained diamonds, both black and transparent."

The Superwoman?

On all sides, these days, we hear much about the superwoman. Poets and preachers and prophets are talking about the great day when the new woman will become part and parcel of the world at large, and through her will be created a new kind of people.

The superwoman idea is the result of the war and feminist movement, as well as ultra propaganda that is being preached everywhere.

Contrary to the soothsayers and superwoman alive—very much alive. In fact there are hundreds of her. She has many earmarks. There are various ways of recognising her. You will find the element of the superwoman in:

The woman who practices what she preaches.

The mother who believes that other people's children may be as wonderful as her own.

The wife who is the real helpmate of her husband as well as his playmate.

The girl who does not steal her best friend's sweetheart.

The daughter who does not make her mother's life miserable because she has to support her.

The sister who thinks herself not too good to grasp the hand of one of her sex who has fallen.

The woman who gives charity quietly without being a brass band reformer.

She who does not persist in being a parasite because she has a legal claim on her husband.

The girl who has the strength to keep her virtue and self-reliance when women all around her are losing theirs and blaming it on society.

The girl who pays her way through college by hard work.

The woman who rises above the demon jealousy, even though she has cause.

The mother-in-law who realises that her daughter's first duty is to her husband.

The woman who has no time or use for the gossiper.

The rich lady who is not so lost in luxury as to forget there is a world of poor that need her.

She who tries to live up to the old Chinese motto of "hear not, see not, speak not evil of anyone."

And above all, she is the woman who so lives that no one can make her keep hate in her heart.

Trial by Ordeal.

If a theft takes place in a Japanese household all the servants are required to write a certain word with the same brush. The conscience is supposed to betray its workings in the waves of the ideographs written. Tracing an ideograph involves such an effort of muscular directness and undivided attention that this device often leads to the discovery of the guilty party. The test is, at all events, more humane than the ordeal of boiling water, to which accused persons were formerly submitted in Japan.

Alcohol and Marksmanship.

It is stated that experiments made by the Bavarian Ministry of War have shown that even a slight amount of alcohol exerts a very unfavorable effect upon rifle shooting. Tests were made with the firing of over thirty thousand shots, and it was found that men who had been given forty grammes of alcohol, or about a pint and a half of beer, registered from three to ten per cent. less hits than those who had taken no intoxicants.

Growth of Mahogany.

The rate of growth of mahogany is shown in Southern Nigeria, where the site of a town destroyed sixty years ago has been covered with a forest containing mahogany-trees, some of which are more than ten feet in diameter.

Vanity and Spectacles.

One of the popular objections to wearing glasses is that wearing glasses makes one look old. This was true in the days when they were worn only to help poor sight, and chiefly by the elderly. Now, a very large percentage of wearers of spectacles are children, and the wearing of spectacles is no longer a mark of advanced age. It is not a sufficient excuse for a lady to say that glasses would make her look old. Moreover, wearing glasses is one of the best preservers of a youthful appearance. This is because prolonged eye-strain causes wrinkles to appear prematurely and gives the countenance a strained, anxious, tired, drawn, cross look, which is very characteristic and is far more to be avoided, from the point of view of appearance, than the slight disfigurement of glasses. Indeed, so far from being unbecoming, there are some types of face to which glasses just add the finishing touch!

Ancient Shipping Dues.

It is believed that the word "tariff" is of Moorish origin, and refers to the duty placed on imports or exports. At the southern point of Spain, running out into the Strait of Gibraltar, is a promontory which from its position commands the entrance of the Mediterranean Sea. A fortress stands upon this promontory, called in the times of the Moorish domination in Spain "Tarifa." It was the custom of the Moors to watch from this point all the merchant ships passing and to levy duties according to a fixed scale on all merchandise passing in and out of the strait. The duty thus levied took its name from the place and was called tarifa or tariff.

Men More Often Blind.

It is estimated that throughout the world blind men outnumber blind women in the proportion of two to one.

Hard Lines.

"Domestic relations are somewhat strained in that family."

"Are they?"

"Seem to be."

"Wonder what strained them?"

"The pull on the purse strings, I fancy."

Color Combination.

What happens when a green chap gets the blues?"

"What happens?"

"Yes."

"I don't know. What does?"

"Turns him yellow, of course."

Sport Receives Praise and Blame

IT was generally recognized before the war that sport played a very large part in the lives of the youths of Canada. They took part in games themselves, and very few got through life without endeavoring to excel in some line or other. Since the outbreak of the war Canadian sport has found itself very much to the front in the arena of controversy, and quite recently two striking examples were offered of how men disagree regarding it.

"It is a cold, cold day in France," writes Canon F. G. Scott of Quebec, in The Canadian Churchman. "The ground is frozen and the men go by with pinched noses and cold hands. The window panes of my office rattle with the sound of big guns, and before me lies a Canadian newspaper with a page devoted to sport, and full of accounts of hockey matches, etc., etc. It is at such a moment as this that one tingles with a sense of disgust and shame. Sport! Hockey matches! Healthy young men, physically fit, playing games at home! Impossible! Where is public spirit? Where is patriotism? Where is the principle of manhood? Are those men content to stay at home and play games and live disgusting, selfish lives, while their fellow-Canadians are out here bleeding and dying for them? I blush for Canada, I blush for the crowds that throng the rinks and enjoy the sport. We have sports, as far as we can, for our men here. They have a right to them.

"But to shirkers at home, nothing but hisses are due! I know I am writing strongly, but it is deserved. As far as I am concerned, I never want to take the hand of any man who is physically fit and has not volunteered to come to the front, unless there has been some overwhelming claim upon him of duty at home. It seems incredible that any man worthy of the name of man can sleep in his bed at night and let other men out here bleed and die for him. Let Canadian mothers and wives know that they could do no greater injury to their sons and husbands, than by holding them back and not allowing them to enlist. It is an injury which will last all through their lives. We need men. We need every man in the Empire. This is no time for sport. If some of the shirkers at home who go to see a hockey match could come out here and see a front dressing station during an action, they would have their eyes opened and their hearts changed. Men, and young men, at home, why do you not throng to the recruiting office? There is the possibility of a crippled body if you do, there is the certainty of a crippled character if you don't, and that is far worse."

Just about the same time the other side was presented by no less a person than General Leonard Wood of the United States. This eminent officer had nothing but praise for the young manhood of Canada. He spoke of their splendid virility and their magnificent response when their country decided at the very commencement of the war to go in on the side of the Allies. General Wood gave the credit for this showing to sport. He said that practically all healthy young Canadians took part in hockey, lacrosse, Rugby, and other Canadian games. He wanted to see the young men of the United States doing the same. It is quite evident that the remarks were aimed at professional sport. Wherever it becomes strong there is a tendency for the young men of the country to sit in the stands and watch other people play. It would hardly be an exaggeration to say that millions of young men sit in the grand stands of the United States during the summer every week and watch professional baseball players making their living. That is the condition against which the American army officer directed his criticisms, and he evidently thinks that the evil has not reached Canada. As a matter of fact, however, a great many young Canadians do aspire to be athletes, and most of these are now at the front. We do possess the problem of professionalism as is indicated by the fact that the value of commercialized baseball has not suffered since the outbreak of the war, if the eagerness of the promoters to stay with it may be taken as an indication. The fans are still present to accord their support. What the gallant Quebec cleric says about slackers is undoubtedly true, but the American army officer has been more accurate in delivering judgment regarding the value in the national life of national sports played by the rising generation of young men.

An Ontario Charivari.

It is difficult to uproot old customs. We read, for instance, that a large crowd attended a charivari party in an Ontario town a few nights ago, at which, of course, a good time "was had." They used to pronounce charivari "shivveree" in the Province and it is probable that they cling as fondly to the pronunciation as to the custom, where the latter is observed at all. The charivari was inherited from the French settlers, and, as adopted into the Anglo-Saxon civilization of the earlier days, it was the complete reverse of everything that a serenade ought to be. That is, it was a social attention in which tin horns, tin pans, pistol shooting, the mimicking of animals, and other noises were made to create a hideous uproar about one's peaceful cabin home at midnight, with the idea of showing how highly esteemed were the inmates.

The Name "Highgate."

The name "Highgate" is derived from a gate erected over four hundred years ago to receive tolls for the Bishop of London.

The Woman's Medicine. Good for All Ages. Mrs. Harold Smith's Experience.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—"I am writing to tell you the good your medicine has always done me and I hope my letter may be the means of helping some other suffering woman. When I was 16 years old I caught cold and had suppression for two months. I got so weak I could scarcely drag myself up the stairs. I went to two doctors, then my mother got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it. I never had any more trouble and got strong fast. Then I took it again before my little girl was born and it helped me a good deal and I give the Compound the credit for it. Then this spring I felt very badly again, but I took the Compound and have been well all summer. I cannot be grateful enough for your medicine." — Mrs. HAROLD M. A Lucknow Veteran.

There is no place in Toronto of more human interest than the House of Providence in Power street, where those who have been disabled in life's battle find a hospital and a home. Among its four hundred and odd inmates at the present time there are many whose life histories prove the proverb that truth is stranger than fiction. One of the elite of the House is an old soldier who fought through the Indian Mutiny. He is Lieut. Henderson. He held the King's commission in the Inniskilling Dragoons at a time when, as he tells you, commissions were not so cheap or plentiful as they are now. How much an officer paid for his course at Sandhurst, how much for his vividly colored uniform with its rich braiding in the days before khaki, how much for the mess fees, etc., this veteran will tell you in detail down to a penny. "And if you could not stand your share the officers of the mess would not think it worth their while to look at you. No, sir."

"You fought at Delhi?"

"Yes, sir. I served under Havelock. He was a man. He never went into battle without singing the ninety-first Psalm. No, sir, though the enemy were charging right on top of us he would not let us fire until that Psalm had been sung. They said of him that he drilled his men not only on the golden sands of India, but the golden shores of heaven. I was wounded in the side at Lucknow and I sold out my commission. My uncle was colonel in the 17th Lancers, the skull-and-crossbones, death-or-glory boys, and another uncle was colonel in the 19th Lancers. So I was born in a soldier family. God hates a coward, sir."

Our Immigration.

A total of 75,395 immigrants were admitted to Canada during the fiscal year 1916-17, Hon. Dr. Roche told Dr. Paquet, of L'Islet, in the Commons recently. Of the number 61,389 came from the United States, 8,282 from Great Britain, and 2,935 from Continental Europe. During the same period 17,988 persons proposing to settle in the Dominion were denied admission at the international boundary line between this country and the United States, 172 were rejected at seaports, and 605 immigrants were deported. In the fiscal year 10,246 Canadians were repatriated from the United States, as compared with 11,084 in 1915-16; 18,011 in 1914-15, and 17,638 in 1913-14.

A War Romance.

One of the most pathetic romances of the war culminated in St. Alban's church at Ottawa, when Lieut. A. G. Viets, blind veteran of the Princess Pats, married Miss Mary Moody, a bride he has never seen. Lieut. Viets hails from Digby, N.S., and was one of the first to enlist when war broke out. He received the wound which blinded him during the early stages of the war, and was sent to London to recover. While convalescing there he met Miss Mary Moody, daughter of the late Thomas Moody, of Yarmouth, N. S., who was doing volunteer work in the Old Country. Together they went to theatres and concerts and their friendship gradually ripened.

EFFECTS OF WAR LOAN

ONE REASON FOR SECURING MANY SMALL SUBSCRIBERS.

Canada Wants to Guard Against Any Agitation to Repudiate Obligations. Just as the European Allies Have Safeguarded Their Business Reputations—Some Benefits of the Struggle Coming to the Dominion.

SIR THOMAS WHITE, Canada's Finance Minister, rejoices publicly over the forty thousand subscriptions for his recently demanded war-loan of $150,000,000, which was oversubscribed to the sum of $100,000,000 or thereabout. Canada's banks, which tendered for $60,000,000 are not to get any of the new bonds. These will be placed with the minor subscribers, smallest preferred. Many of them can and will, it is to be presumed, employ their bonds as collateral for loans from banks, when they desire any. Thus such persons as commonly use banks only as depositors, so obtaining but two or three per cent. interest, may get loans at the small difference between the bank rate of discount, say 6 per cent., and the over 5 per cent. rate of interest accruing from their war-bonds. This may somewhat tend to stimulate business, enterprise, speculation. Another effect of wide distribution of war-bonds comes under the head of political considerations. The greater the numbers of electors holding such bonds, the less will be the temptation of a certain sort of agitators (after the war, when the Dominion comes to pay interest on the price of its "dead horse"), to stand for repudiation of war borrowings.

Such agitators might argue that the war-bonds have been issued unconstitutionally, inasmuch as correct constitutional practice required submission of the war-policy of the Government to the electors immediately after the "emergency session" of August, 1914; and more clearly required such submission before October, 1916, when the term, for which the present House was legally elected, expired by efflux of time. However fantastic this contention may look now, its aspect is not unlikely to appear quite sane to many electors in the hard times which pessimists allege will surely come upon Canada after the war. Remember the repudiation agitation in the United States after the Civil War conflict. That agitation was of great strength at one time, though conducted against payment of the perfectly constitutional national debt of the Republic. Sir Thomas White's prescience, manifested in widely popularizing his war-bonds, tends powerfully against probability of such agitation arising in Canada, because political agitators will long be aware of the formidable voting strength contra to repudiation which would be aroused by multitudinous small bondholders.

This consideration doubtless goes far to explain also the prodigious efforts of the British, French, German, Italian, and Russian Governments to popularize their war-loans. If the bonds, all alike, bearing high interest, were held almost wholly by large capitalists or financial institutions, would not the disposition of the masses to repudiation be vastly enhanced? Mr. Grier of The New York Times, after touring Europe, especially Germany, last year, stated that he had found extensively current amongst thinkers an opinion that the terms of whatever peace may be brought to pass will not improbably include a general agreement of the participating nations to repudiate all war-borrowings. For this course the main justificatory argument would be that the various peoples simply could not pay the promised interest. Lest Great Britain, or France, or both, might reap great advantage by the credit which would attach to scrupulous fulfilment of war-obligations, these governments could obtain peace only by agreeing to the prophesied general repudiation! But, as there are more ways of killing a dog than by choking him with tenpenny nails, so there are more ways to repudiation by governments than that of direct, discreditable repudiation. Stringent income taxes, confiscatory of all above a mere living revenue, have not been foregone by any of the warring governments. It may be very plausibly argued that such taxes, utterly destructive of pomp and luxury during two or three generations, would confer on European mankind educational and moral benefits vastly more than compensatory for the war. By consequence, even the reformation of the imitative squanderous in America might be effected.

As to their like in Canada, there's no telling whether the costs of the war to this Dominion may not be all more than recouped by that development of natural resources which has been newly instigated by an enterprising spirit enhanced, seemingly, by the war itself. More discovered nickel, and all of it to be refined in Canada! Exploitation of the ever more valuable discoveries of petroleum and natural gas in north Alberta and Saskatchewan! New revelations of cobalt, copper, silver in what we regarded as Ontario and Quebec wildernesses a few years ago! More and more supplanting of imported and other coal by electricity cheaply obtained from our innumerable water-powers, now utilized increasingly every day in cooking, driving farm implements, etc., as well as in lighting! Fresh discoveries of gold almost daily. A report by Mr. Archibald Campbell, formerly of the Canadian Geological Survey, on the "Beaver Group of Mining Claims," situated in the Big Duck Lake Gold Area, north of Schrieber Station (C. I. R.), Ont. These claims are very rich, where not of enormous extent, and of enormous extent where they are less rich.

COUNTRY OF PLAINS.

French Province of Champagne Has Interesting History.

One of the outstanding features in the history of the old French Province of Champagne is the extraordinary originality, in the matter of destiny displayed by its rulers. It gave a king to France, a king to Jerusalem, a king to Navarre, and an earl to England, and at no time in its long history can any of its rulers be accused of monotony in the matter of conduct. About the year A. D. 960, the Province was first placed under a single count. Not many years thereafter the Counts of Champagne were very much in the wars, and, in the history of these wars, waged with their neighbors, or with the kings of France, names of places occur and recur which the last two and a half years have made all too well known throughout the world. Thus, to mention only one instance, it was in a battle near Bar-le-Duc, the scene of so much strenuous fighting in the present war, that Odo I., Count of Champagne, fell in his great struggle with the Emperor Conrad, in the year 1037. Odo I. was succeeded by his younger son, Stephen, and it was Stephen's son, Odo II. who became Earl of Holderness in England.

It was the old story of the "fugitive from justice" becoming a soldier of fortune. Odo had committed murder, and, fleeing the country, took refuge in Normandy, where he gained the favor of William, Duke of Normandy, the future conqueror of England. William gave to him the castle and estate of Aumale, and when the Conqueror, with his Norman host and banner, all blessed by the Pope, took ship for England, Odo went with him. In due time, the conquest complete, Odo was made the Earl of Holderness, the large tract of rolling country which lies between the estuary of the Humber and Bridlington Bay.

But to return to France: Perhaps the next most notable figure amongst the Counts of Champagne was Theobald II. surnamed the Great. He was already Count of Blois and Meaux when he became Count of Champagne, in 1125, in succession to Hugh, who had decided, after a fashion characteristic of the Counts of Champagne, to become a Templar, and he grew to be one of the most powerful barons in France. Related to the royal house of England, it was not long before he came into violent collision with the King of France, who invaded his territory, and burnt the town of Vitry, to-day another notable landmark on the western front south of Rheims.

The most notable, not to say romantic figure, amongst the Counts of Champagne, however, was undoubtedly Theobald IV. the Chansonnier, who, as an infant, succeeded his father, Theobold III., in 1201. His mother, Blanche of Navarre, governed his dominions during his minority with great sagacity; but, for almost the whole of his reign, either he or his mother was engaged in defending the country against two sisters of a former Count, both of whom claimed the title and estates of the Champagne. The Singer, however, was uniformly successful, and he found time, moreover, to follow Louis VII. to the siege of Avignon; to take part in an expedition to the Holy Land, in 1240, and in the campaign of Saintonge, against the English, in 1242. And all the time he was composing "witty and courtly songs" which placed him in the front rank of poets of that class. As to the remainder of the Counts of Champagne, they were, perhaps, more settled than their predecessors; and when Louis Hutin, Count of Champagne, succeeded to the throne of France, in 1314, as Louis X., the existence of the Champagne as an independent fief came to an end. The one thing that has remained much the same in the Champagne, through the centuries, is the face of the land. The Romans called it Campania, "Country of Plains," because of the immense level tracts which in those days, as to-day, spread themselves out in all directions around Rheims, Chalons, and Troyes. — Christian Science Monitor.

French Writer Offers His Tribute to England And Shows Understanding

THERE is always something peculiarly interesting in the view which a discerning writer of one nation forms and expresses of another. If it is a just and dispassionate view, it almost inevitably results in the shedding of some entirely new light on the situation, and causes many thinking people in the nation thus under review to reconsider many points and many phases of national life which had hitherto been taken for granted.

It was just such a review of the United Kingdom which M. Rosny, Aine, contributed, some little time ago, to the columns of Le Journal in Paris. M. Rosny did not come forward as the candid friend. He designed to make his article a tribute, and it was a tribute, and yet, no one could read it without noticing that its generous reticences had in them many lessons for those who had ears to hear. A case in point was where he referred to the intellectual isolation of the United Kingdom. "She is splendidly represented," he said, "in every domain of human thought and activity. Perhaps she would have been greater still had she not a tendency towards intellectual isolation, a noble, though narrow, pride in her own self-sufficiency." Those who are at all in touch with the intellectual thought in England know how just is such an implication; but they also know that every year that passes makes it less just. A very great and very genuine effort has been made throughout the country, during the past decade, to understand other nations better; to get more in touch with the thought of the world, and to cultivate a willingness to revise views in the light of added knowledge. This tendency has, of course, been tremendously accelerated during the last two years.

In spite of the existence of this isolation, moreover, M. Rosny does not fail to point out that the United Kingdom, during all those years of splendid detachment, had been developing an extraordinary adaptability, an adaptability which enabled her, within a few months, to transform herself from a nonmilitary country into one of the strongest military powers in the world. As M. Rosny put it, "She had no officers, no non-commissioned officers, no soldiers. Everything had to be created, to be brought out of nothing. Once more, British energy has proved itself master of circumstances."

M. Rosny revealed one fact especially by his review, and that was the versatility of his own scholarship. Whether he was showing the standing of the United Kingdom in the realm of natural science, of philosophy, of literature, of exploration, or of colonizing, he showed himself familiar with all the great British figures in these branches of activity. When, therefore, M. Rosny deprecated intellectual isolation, he deprecated a shortcoming to which he, at any rate, need not confess.

Judging from the sensational cases in court, the sooner letter writing becomes a lost art the better it will be for the general moral tone of society.

The Mystery.

O schoolma'am, in our early days
We very seldom like your ways:
The schoolroom in our minds we hate,
For we cannot appreciate
The things for us you try to do
When life is young and years are few.
But we confess before all men,
Although we did not show it then,
We thought you were the sweetest miss
That ever mortal tried to kiss,
And we were quite determined, too,
When we grew up to marry you.

But there are always things on tee
To mar the plans of men and mice,
And so it happened we were not
Allowed to carry out the plot.
But always in our secret heart
There was the half forgotten smart
Because we missed that joy supreme
To match with you and make a team,
And how we envied some bright lad
Who'd won your hand and made you glad!

Now from afar we come to chase
A week or two about the place,
To bring our kids and show our wife
Where daddy got his start in life,
And really our surprise is great
To find you yet in single state.
It's more than we can understand
How such a treasure failed to land
And why you did not take your pick
Of Tom or Archie, Bill or Nick.

O vain regret! 'Twas ever thus!
Perhaps you waited round for us—
Turned every other man away
In hopes we would come back some day.

ARTIFICIAL DIAMONDS.

Largest of These About One-Fiftieth Inch Across.

Experiments have shown that real diamonds can be produced by artificial means though the gems so produced are very small. Diamonds in nature appear to be formed by the separation of carbon from molten iron under pressure, and experiments in large metallurgical works have shown that when a special form of steel is made by cooling the molten metal under intense hydraulic pressure microscopic diamonds are formed.

"The largest artificial diamond yet formed," says the latest edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica, "was found in a block of steel and slag from a furnace in Luxembourg. It is clear and crystaline, and measures about one-fiftieth of an inch across."

A striking confirmation of the theory that natural diamonds have been produced from their solution in masses of molten iron, the metal from which has gradually oxidized and been washed away under cycles of atmospheric influences, is afforded by the occurrence of diamonds in a meteorite. The Encyclopædia Britannica thus interestingly describes this remarkable phenomenon:

"On a broad open plain in Arizona, over an area of about five miles in diameter, lie scattered thousands of masses of metallic iron, the fragments varying in weight from a ton to a fraction of an ounce. There is little doubt that these fragments formed part of a meteoric shower, although no record exists as to when the fall took place. Altogether ten tons of this iron have been collected, and specimens of the Canyon Diablo meteorite are in most collectors' cabinets.

"Dr. A. E. Foote, a mineralogist, when cutting a section of this meteorite, found the tools injured by something vastly harder than metallic iron, and an emery wheel used for grinding it was ruined. He attacked the specimen chemically and soon afterwards announced to the scientific world that the Canyon Diablo meteorite contained diamonds, both black and transparent."

The Superwoman?

On all sides, these days, we hear much about the superwoman. Poets and preachers and prophets are talking about the great day when the new woman will become part and parcel of the world at large, and through her will be created a new kind of people.

The superwoman idea is the result of the war and feminist movement, as well as ultra propaganda that is being preached everywhere.

She who does not persist in being a parasite because she has a legal claim on her husband.

The girl who has the strength to keep her virtue and self-reliance when women all around her are losing theirs and blaming it on society.

The woman who rises above the demon jealousy, even though she has cause.

If a theft takes place in a Japanese household all the servants are required to write a certain word with the same brush. The conscience is supposed to betray its workings in the waves of the ideographs written. Tracing an ideograph involves such an effort of muscular directness and undivided attention that this device often leads to the discovery of the guilty party. The test is, at all events, more humane than the ordeal of boiling water, to which accused persons were formerly submitted in Japan.

Alcohol and Marksmanship.

It is stated that experiments made by the Bavarian Ministry of War have shown that even a slight amount of alcohol exerts a very unfavorable effect upon rifle shooting. Tests were made with the firing of over thirty thousand shots, and it was found that men who had been given forty grammes of alcohol, or about a pint and a half of beer, registered from three to ten per cent. less hits than those who had taken no intoxicants.

Growth of Mahogany.

The rate of growth of mahogany is shown in Southern Nigeria, where the site of a town destroyed sixty years ago has been covered with a forest containing mahogany-trees, some of which are more than ten feet in diameter.

Vanity and Spectacles.

One of the popular objections to wearing glasses is that wearing glasses makes one look old. This was true in the days when they were worn only to help poor sight, and chiefly by the elderly. Now, a very large percentage of wearers of spectacles are children, and the wearing of spectacles is no longer a mark of advanced age. It is not a sufficient excuse for a lady to say that glasses would make her look old. Moreover, wearing glasses is one of the best preservers of a youthful appearance. This is because prolonged eye-strain causes wrinkles to appear prematurely and gives the countenance a strained, anxious, tired, drawn, cross look, which is very characteristic and is far more to be avoided, from the point of view of appearance, than the slight disfigurement of glasses. Indeed, so far from being unbecoming, there are some types of face to which glasses just add the finishing touch!

Ancient Shipping Dues.

It is believed that the word "tariff" is of Moorish origin, and refers to the duty placed on imports or exports. At the southern point of Spain, running out into the Strait of Gibraltar, is a promontory which from its position commands the entrance of the Mediterranean Sea. A fortress stands upon this promontory, called in the times of the Moorish domination in Spain "Tarifa." It was the custom of the Moors to watch from this point all the merchant ships passing and to levy duties according to a fixed scale on all merchandise passing in and out of the strait. The duty thus levied took its name from the place and was called tarifa or tariff.

Men More Often Blind.

It is estimated that throughout the world blind men outnumber blind women in the proportion of two to one.

Hard Lines.

"Domestic relations are somewhat strained in that family."

"Are they?"

"Seem to be."

"Wonder what strained them?"

"The pull on the purse strings, I fancy."

Color Combination.

What happens when a green chap gets the blues?"

"What happens?"

"Yes."

"I don't know. What does?"

"Turns him yellow, of course."

Sport Receives Praise and Blame

IT was generally recognized before the war that sport played a very large part in the lives of the youths of Canada. They took part in games themselves, and very few got through life without endeavoring to excel in some line or other. Since the outbreak of the war Canadian sport has found itself very much to the front in the arena of controversy, and quite recently two striking examples were offered of how men disagree regarding it.

"It is a cold, cold day in France," writes Canon F. G. Scott of Quebec, in The Canadian Churchman. "The ground is frozen and the men go by with pinched noses and cold hands. The window panes of my office rattle with the sound of big guns, and before me lies a Canadian newspaper with a page devoted to sport, and full of accounts of hockey matches, etc., etc. It is at such a moment as this that one tingles with a sense of disgust and shame. Sport! Hockey matches! Healthy young men, physically fit, playing games at home! Impossible! Where is public spirit? Where is patriotism? Where is the principle of manhood? Are those men content to stay at home and play games and live disgusting, selfish lives, while their fellow-Canadians are out here bleeding and dying for them? I blush for Canada, I blush for the crowds that throng the rinks and enjoy the sport. We have sports, as far as we can, for our men here. They have a right to them.

"But to shirkers at home, nothing but hisses are due! I know I am writing strongly, but it is deserved. As far as I am concerned, I never want to take the hand of any man who is physically fit and has not volunteered to come to the front, unless there has been some overwhelming claim upon him of duty at home. It seems incredible that any man worthy of the name of man can sleep in his bed at night and let other men out here bleed and die for him. Let Canadian mothers and wives know that they could do no greater injury to their sons and husbands, than by holding them back and not allowing them to enlist. It is an injury which will last all through their lives. We need men. We need every man in the Empire. This is no time for sport. If some of the shirkers at home who go to see a hockey match could come out here and see a front dressing station during an action, they would have their eyes opened and their hearts changed. Men, and young men, at home, why do you not throng to the recruiting office? There is the possibility of a crippled body if you do, there is the certainty of a crippled character if you don't, and that is far worse."

Just about the same time the other side was presented by no less a person than General Leonard Wood of the United States. This eminent officer had nothing but praise for the young manhood of Canada. He spoke of their splendid virility and their magnificent response when their country decided at the very commencement of the war to go in on the side of the Allies. General Wood gave the credit for this showing to sport. He said that practically all healthy young Canadians took part in hockey, lacrosse, Rugby, and other Canadian games. He wanted to see the young men of the United States doing the same. It is quite evident that the remarks were aimed at professional sport. Wherever it becomes strong there is a tendency for the young men of the country to sit in the stands and watch other people play. It would hardly be an exaggeration to say that millions of young men sit in the grand stands of the United States during the summer every week and watch professional baseball players making their living. That is the condition against which the American army officer directed his criticisms, and he evidently thinks that the evil has not reached Canada. As a matter of fact, however, a great many young Canadians do aspire to be athletes, and most of these are now at the front. We do possess the problem of professionalism as is indicated by the fact that the value of commercialized baseball has not suffered since the outbreak of the war, if the eagerness of the promoters to stay with it may be taken as an indication. The fans are still present to accord their support. What the gallant Quebec cleric says about slackers is undoubtedly true, but the American army officer has been more accurate in delivering judgment regarding the value in the national life of national sports played by the rising generation of young men.

An Ontario Charivari.

It is difficult to uproot old customs. We read, for instance, that a large crowd attended a charivari party in an Ontario town a few nights ago, at which, of course, a good time "was had." They used to pronounce charivari "shivveree" in the Province and it is probable that they cling as fondly to the pronunciation as to the custom, where the latter is observed at all. The charivari was inherited from the French settlers, and, as adopted into the Anglo-Saxon civilization of the earlier days, it was the complete reverse of everything that a serenade ought to be. That is, it was a social attention in which tin horns, tin pans, pistol shooting, the mimicking of animals, and other noises were made to create a hideous uproar about one's peaceful cabin home at midnight, with the idea of showing how highly esteemed were the inmates.

The Name "Highgate."

The name "Highgate" is derived from a gate erected over four hundred years ago to receive tolls for the Bishop of London.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—"I am writing to tell you the good your medicine has always done me and I hope my letter may be the means of helping some other suffering woman. When I was 16 years old I caught cold and had suppression for two months. I got so weak I could scarcely drag myself up the stairs. I went to two doctors, then my mother got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it. I never had any more trouble and got strong fast. Then I took it again before my little girl was born and it helped me a good deal and I give the Compound the credit for it. A Lucknow Veteran.

There is no place in Toronto of more human interest than the House of Providence in Power street, where those who have been disabled in life's battle find a hospital and a home. Among its four hundred and odd inmates at the present time there are many whose life histories prove the proverb that truth is stranger than fiction. One of the elite of the House is an old soldier who fought through the Indian Mutiny. He is Lieut. Henderson. He held the King's commission in the Inniskilling Dragoons at a time when, as he tells you, commissions were not so cheap or plentiful as they are now. How much an officer paid for his course at Sandhurst, how much for his vividly colored uniform with its rich braiding in the days before khaki, how much for the mess fees, etc., this veteran will tell you in detail down to a penny. "And if you could not stand your share the officers of the mess would not think it worth their while to look at you. No, sir."

"You fought at Delhi?"

"Yes, sir. I served under Havelock. He was a man. He never went into battle without singing the ninety-first Psalm. No, sir, though the enemy were charging right on top of us he would not let us fire until that Psalm had been sung. They said of him that he drilled his men not only on the golden sands of India, but the golden shores of heaven. I was wounded in the side at Lucknow and I sold out my commission. My uncle was colonel in the 17th Lancers, the skull-and-cross-bones, death-or-glory boys, and another uncle was colonel in the 19th Lancers. So I was born in a soldier family. God hates a coward, sir."

Our Immigration.

A total of 75,395 immigrants were admitted to Canada during the fiscal year 1916-17, Hon. Dr. Roche told Dr. Paquet, of L'Islet, in the Commons recently. Of the number 61,389 came from the United States, 8,282 from Great Britain, and 2,935 from Continental Europe. During the same period 17,988 persons proposing to settle in the Dominion were denied admission at the International boundary line between this country and the United States, 172 were rejected at seaports, and 605 immigrants were deported. In the fiscal year 10,246 Canadians were repatriated from the United States, as compared with 11,084 in 1915-16; 18,011 in 1914-15, and 17,638 in 1913-14.

A War Romance.

One of the most pathetic romances of the war culminated in St. Alban's church at Ottawa, when Lieut. A. G. Viets, blind veteran of the Princess Pats, married Miss Mary Moody, a bride he has never seen. Lieut. Viets hails from Digby, N.S., and was one of the first to enlist when war broke out. He received the wound which blinded him during the early stages of the war, and was sent to London to recover. While convalescing there he met Miss Mary Moody, daughter of the late Thomas Moody, of Yarmouth, N. S., who was doing volunteer work in the Old Country. Together they went to theatres and concerts and their friendship gradually ripened.

EFFECTS OF WAR LOAN

ONE REASON FOR SECURING MANY SMALL SUBSCRIBERS.

Canada Wants to Guard Against Any Agitation to Repudiate Obligations, Just as the European Allies Have Safeguarded Their Business Reputations—Some Benefits of the Struggle Coming to the Dominion.

SIR THOMAS WHITE, Canada's Finance Minister, rejoices publicly over the forty thousand subscriptions for his recently demanded war-loan of $150,000,000, which was oversubscribed to the sum of $100,000,000 or thereabout. Canada's banks, which tendered for $60,000,000 are not to get any of the new bonds. These will be placed with the minor subscribers, smallest preferred. Many of them can and will, it is to be presumed, employ their bonds as collateral for loans from banks, when they desire any. Thus such persons as commonly use banks only as depositors, so obtaining but two or three per cent. interest, may get loans at the small difference between the bank rate of discount, say 6 per cent., and the over 5 per cent. rate of interest accruing from their war-bonds. This may somewhat tend to stimulate business, enterprise, speculation. Another effect of wide distribution of war-bonds comes under the head of political considerations. The greater the numbers of electors holding such bonds, the less will be the temptation of a certain sort of agitators (after the war, when the Dominion comes to pay interest on the price of its "dead horse"), to stand for repudiation of war borrowings.

Such agitators might argue that the war-bonds have been issued unconstitutionally, inasmuch as correct constitutional practice required submission of the war-policy of the Government to the electors immediately after the "emergency session" of August, 1914; and more clearly required such submission before October, 1916, when the term, for which the present House was legally elected, expired by efflux of time. However fantastic this contention may look now, its aspect is not unlikely to appear quite sane to many electors in the hard times which pessimists allege will surely come upon Canada after the war. Remember the repudiation agitation in the United States after the Civil War conflict. That agitation was of great strength at one time, though conducted against payment of the perfectly constitutional national debt of the Republic. Sir Thomas White's prescience, manifested in widely popularizing his war-bonds, tends powerfully against probability of such agitation arising in Canada, because political agitators will long be aware of the formidable voting strength contra to repudiation which would be aroused by multitudinous small bondholders.

This consideration doubtless goes far to explain also the prodigious efforts of the British, French, German, Italian, and Russian Governments to popularize their war-loans. If the bonds, all alike, bearing high interest, were held almost wholly by large capitalists or financial institutions, would not the disposition of the masses to repudiation be vastly enhanced? Mr. Grier of The New York Times, after touring Europe, especially Germany, last year, stated that he had found extensively current amongst thinkers an opinion that the terms of whatever peace may be brought to pass will not improbably include a general agreement of the participating nations to repudiate all war-borrowings. For this course the main justificatory argument would be that the various peoples simply could not pay the promised interest. Lest Great Britain, or France, or both, might reap great advantage by the credit which would attach to scrupulous fulfilment of war-obligations, these governments could obtain peace only by agreeing to the prophesied general repudiation! But, as there are more ways of killing a dog than by choking him with tenpenny nails, so there are more ways to repudiation by governments than that of direct, discreditable repudiation. Stringent income taxes, confiscatory of all above a mere living revenue, have not been foregone by any of the warring governments. It may be very plausibly argued that such taxes, utterly destructive of pomp and luxury during two or three generations, would confer on European mankind educational and moral benefits vastly more than compensatory for the war. By consequence, even the reformation of the imitative squanderous in America might be effected.

As to their like in Canada, there's no telling whether the costs of the war to this Dominion may not be all more than recouped by that development of natural resources which has been newly instigated by an enterprising spirit enhanced, seemingly, by the war itself. More discovered nickel, and all of it to be refined in Canada! Exploitation of the ever more valuable discoveries of petroleum and natural gas in north Alberta and Saskatchewan! New revelations of cobalt, copper, silver in what we regarded as Ontario and Quebec wildernesses a few years ago! More and more supplanting of imported and other coal by electricity cheaply obtained from our innumerable water-powers, now utilized increasingly every day in cooking, driving farm implements, etc., as well as in lighting! Fresh discoveries of gold almost daily. A report by Mr. Archibald Campbell, formerly of the Canadian Geological Survey, on the "Beaver Group of Mining Claims," situated in the Big Duck Lake Gold Area, north of Schrieber Station (C. I. R.), Ont. These claims are very rich, where not of enormous extent, and of enormous extent where they are less rich.

COUNTRY OF PLAINS.

French Province of Champagne Has Interesting History.

One of the outstanding features in the history of the old French Province of Champagne is the extraordinary originality, in the matter of destiny displayed by its rulers. It gave a king to France, a king to Jerusalem, a king to Navarre, and an earl to England, and at no time in its long history can any of its rulers be accused of monotony in the matter of conduct. About the year A. D. 960, the Province was first placed under a single count. Not many years thereafter the Counts of Champagne were very much in the wars, and, in the history of these wars, waged with their neighbors, or with the kings of France, names of places occur and recur which the last two and a half years have made all too well known throughout the world. Thus, to mention only one instance, it was in a battle near Bar-le-Duc, the scene of so much strenuous fighting in the present war, that Odo I., Count of Champagne, fell in his great struggle with the Emperor Conrad, in the year 1037. Odo I. was succeeded by his younger son, Stephen, and it was Stephen's son, Odo II. who became Earl of Holderness in England.

It was the old story of the "fugitive from justice" becoming a soldier of fortune. Odo had committed murder, and, fleeing the country, took refuge in Normandy, where he gained the favor of William, Duke of Normandy, the future conqueror of England. William gave to him the castle and estate of Aumale, and when the Conqueror, with his Norman host and banner, all blessed by the Pope, took ship for England, Odo went with him. In due time, the conquest complete, Odo was made the Earl of Holderness, the large tract of rolling country which lies between the estuary of the Humber and Bridlington Bay.

But to return to France: Perhaps the next most notable figure amongst the Counts of Champagne was Theobald II. surnamed the Great. He was already Count of Blois and Meaux when he became Count of Champagne, in 1125, in succession to Hugh, who had decided, after a fashion characteristic of the Counts of Champagne, to become a Templar, and he grew to be one of the most powerful barons in France. Related to the royal house of England, it was not long before he came into violent collision with the King of France, who invaded his territory, and burnt the town of Vitry, to-day another notable landmark on the western front south of Rheims.

The most notable, not to say romantic figure, amongst the Counts of Champagne, however, was undoubtedly Theobald IV. the Chansonnier, who, as an infant, succeeded his father, Theobald III., in 1201. His mother, Blanche of Navarre, governed his dominions during his minority with great sagacity; but, for almost the whole of his reign, either he or his mother was engaged in defending the country against two sisters of a former Count, both of whom claimed the title and estates of the Champagne. The Singer, however, was uniformly successful, and he found time, moreover, to follow Louis VII. to the siege of Avignon; to take part in an expedition to the Holy Land, in 1240, and in the campaign of Saintonge, against the English, in 1242. And all the time he was composing "witty and courtly songs" which placed him in the front rank of poets of that class. As to the remainder of the Counts of Champagne, they were, perhaps, more settled than their predecessors, and when Louis Hutin, Count of Champagne, succeeded to the throne of France, in 1314, as Louis X., the existence of the Champagne as an independent fief came to an end. The one thing that has remained much the same in the Champagne, through the centuries, is the face of the land. The Romans called it Campania, "Country of Plains," because of the immense level tracts which in those days, as to-day, spread themselves out in all directions around Rheims, Chalons, and Troyes. — Christian Science Monitor.

French Writer Offers His Tribute to England And Shows Understanding

THERE is always something peculiarly interesting in the view which a discerning writer of one nation forms and expresses of another. If it is a just and dispassionate view, it almost inevitably results in the shedding of some entirely new light on the situation, and causes many thinking people in the nation thus under review to reconsider many points and many phases of national life which had hitherto been taken for granted.

It was just such a review of the United Kingdom which M. Rosny, Aine, contributed, some little time ago, to the columns of Le Journal in Paris. M. Rosny did not come forward as the candid friend. He designed to make his article a tribute, and it was a tribute, and yet, no one could read it without noticing that its generous reticences had in them many lessons for those who had ears to hear. A case in point was where he referred to the intellectual isolation of the United Kingdom. "She is splendidly represented," he said, "in every domain of human thought and activity. Perhaps she would have been greater still had she not a tendency towards intellectual isolation, a noble, though narrow, pride in her own self-sufficiency." Those who are at all in touch with the intellectual thought in England know how just is such an implication; but they also know that every year that passes makes it less just. A very great and very genuine effort has been made throughout the country, during the past decade, to understand other nations better; to get more in touch with the thought of the world, and to cultivate a willingness to revise views in the light of added knowledge. This tendency has, of course, been tremendously accelerated during the last two years.

In spite of the existence of this isolation, moreover, M. Rosny does not fail to point out that the United Kingdom, during all those years of splendid detachment, had been developing an extraordinary adaptability, an adaptability which enabled her, within a few months, to transform herself from a nonmilitary country into one of the strongest military powers in the world. As M. Rosny put it, "She had no officers, no non-commissioned officers, no soldiers. Everything had to be created, to be brought out of nothing. Once more, British energy has proved itself master of circumstances."

M. Rosny revealed one fact especially by his review, and that was the versatility of his own scholarship. Whether he was showing the standing of the United Kingdom in the realm of natural science, of philosophy, of literature, of exploration, or of colonizing, he showed himself familiar with all the great British figures in these branches of activity. When, therefore, M. Rosny deprecated intellectual isolation, he deprecated a shortcoming to which he, at any rate, need not confess.

Judging from the sensational cases in court, the sooner letter writing becomes a lost art the better it will be for the general moral tone of society.

The Mystery.

O schoolma'am, in our early days
We very seldom like your ways!
The schoolroom in our minds we hate,
For we cannot appreciate
The things for us you try to do
When life is young and years are few.
But we confess before all men,
Although we did not show it then,
We thought you were the sweetest miss
That ever mortal tried to kiss,
And we were quite determined, too,
When we grew up to marry you.

But there are always things on ice
To mar the plans of men and mice,
And so it happened we were not
Allowed to carry out the plot.
But always in our secret heart
There was the half forgotten smart
Because we missed that joy supreme
To match with you and make a team,
And how we envied some bright lad
Who'd won your hand and made you glad!

Now from afar we come to chase
A week or two about the place,
To bring our kids and show our wife
Where daddy got his start in life,
And really our surprise is great
To find you yet in single state.
It's more than we can understand
How such a treasure failed to land
And why you did not take your pick
Of Tom or Archie, Bill or Nick.

O vain regret! 'Twas ever thus!
Perhaps you waited round for us—
Turned every other man away
In hopes we would come back some day.

BOARD OF RY. COMMISSION

for patriotic purposes, and not with a view to establishing a municipal coal yard.

Clark Street.

A working man testified that he had recently visited Taylor & Son, R. Hicks & Co., Alderman Weir, and the Peterboro Fuel and Cartage Co., in search of coal. The former firm refused him, Hicks & Co. offered 500 lb. lots at $2.75 the lot, the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Co. agreed to supply a few customers at $10 a ton. Ald. Weir had none to sell.

To Mr. Harrington, witness replied that when visiting the coal yards he did not ask for fuel for immediate delivery although he had none in the house.

Mayor Duffus.

The mayor testified that the coal situation last winter was bad; in order to relieve considerable distress he had to request coal dealers to deliver came to him complaining that coal one or two boys at a time. Many men had no means of delivering coal when he delivered some with his own rigs. That condition continued until this spring.

To Mr. Harrington, His Worship replied that all local coal dealers are conscientious men, whom he believed would deliver coal whenever and wherever possible. But there was a scarcity of coal, and personally he could get no guaranteed price or date for delivery. He called a conference between Council and the coal dealers, at which the latter expressed no objection to the establishment of a municipal coal yard. In fact, one or two advised that the municipality should take hold of the situation to relieve the peak load. "Not one dealer objected to the establishment of a municipal fuel yard, but I was advised by them that unless the city took such a step there would be considerable distress next winter. I have every reason to believe that the municipality can secure coal when the dealers can not. We are not going to allo wour people to suffer from lack of coal next winter if we can avoid it."

Robert Hicks.

Mr. R. Hicks, to Mr. Gordon, said the approximate coal tonnage needed by the city is 1⅛ tons per head of its population of 25,000. This year, however, it will be 1½ tons, owing to the practical elimination of the wood supply.

"We had more coal on hand this year in April than in April of any other year, and have supplied more coal to date this year than we did up to July 15th last year. To his mind, however, the outlook for coal is far from promising. As to prices, he said, he delivered practically all his April coal at $9 a ton. As to prices, he a ton to handle coal and deliver to customers, and this does not allow of profit. Soft coal fluctuates con- jumped from $8.75 a ton to $9.75. siderably; within the last 30 days it Just now hard coal is very scarce; Mr. Hicks' company has received no shipment for the past five weeks. He rather favored the establishment of a municipal coal yard, if run as a war measure, that is, of a temporary character. During the latter part of April he sold to all comers, but cannot do so at present. There will be some 3600 tons more coal needed next winter than last, but in his opinion conditions will considerably improve in the next two weeks."

To Mr. Harrington, Mr. Hicks replied: "We tried to make the coal go round by supplying it in 500 lb. lots at $2.40 and $2.50. I think the city could buy coal from independent companies just as well as I can; but I should not expect my dealers to cut down my supply to furnish a municipal coal yard; in fact they are not booking new customers."

To Mr. Ingram, Mr. Hicks contended that the scarcity of coal might be traced to people expecting to buy in 30 days a quantity of coal which could not be mined in less than 12 months. That is to say, the so-called scarcity has been exaggerated to some extent.

To Mr. McIntyre witness said his company handled more coal last year than the year before, and their only difficulty had been transportation.

J. E. H. Fitzgerald.

Mr. Fitzgerald testified that he could not get coal from the mines as wanted, and suffered loss thereby. This year he is already 2000 tons short of his requirements and he expects a big shortage next winter. He has been selling at $9.00 a ton, but cannot guarantee any price for prospective orders. The same quantity of coal is being mined, but dealers are bidding their heads off for it, which engenders a shortage in some localities, and fluctuating prices. He could get no coal just now, but had been promised delivery within the near future.

To Mr. Harrington, he said, he did not consider that the municipality could run a coal yard as cheaply as the local dealers can. It would possibly be conducted at a loss.

Run At a Loss.

Mayor Duffus—"We would buy the coal and handle it, and sell it at cost of operations probably a little higher than the price of local dealers it is true; but the object is to assure fuel for our people. The city would, of course, make up any loss by taxation."

FOR ONTARIO DEALERS.

Mr. H. Cox, a coal dealer of Toronto, gave evidence in support of the position taken by Ontario coal dealers, generally, in regard to the establishment of municipal coal yards. He said: "There has been a normal supply of coal, but the demand has been abnormal. There is not nearly sufficient coal at the mines to meet the demand. Soft coal being supplied the allies would not affect the supply of hard coal. The production of the latter in April was a million tons more than in the same month last year. Some American operators admit that they are giving preference to their own dealers, still he was confident that the normal demand for coal will be met henceforth, providing the railways can provide the transportation. The shortage last year was mainly due to labor conditions at the mines. The normal production by the mines per month is six million tons."

To Chairman McIntyre, Mr. Cox said that lack of transportation was responsible for coal shortage to a considerable extent last year; and to Mr. Gordon, he said that similar transportation difficulties would continue thrughout the war.

BOON COMPANION.

I LIKE to meet the man who laughs
  Until he throws a fit
To work my ancient jokes on him
  And see his fat sides split.
I gladly buy him a cigar—
  Indeed, would make it two—
To one who very kindly stands
  And waits to hear me through.

I'm not afraid when he is near
  The last time tried to spring,
Because I know that on the air
  His merry laugh will ring
The ones that from the ark came forth
  He seems to like the best,
Although he will consent to laugh
  At some more modern jest.

What do I care though kindness prompts
  His laugh, and that alone?
It pleases me as well as though
  He cracked his funny bone.
I take for granted that my yarn
  At last has made a hit;
That I am in his eyes at least
  A most amusing wit.

There is a hint concealed in this,
  Though any one may wrest
The secret from its hiding place
  And give the thing a test.
The way to be regarded
  The regular little gem
Is not to make the jokes, but be
  The one who laughs at them.

FLATTERING ADDRESS TO NEW COUNTY OFFICIALS

Ex-Reeve and Mrs. Campbell Remembered by Friends on Eve of Departure to Take Charge of House of Refuge.

A number of the residents of Chandos Township gathered at the home of ex-Reeve and Mrs. D. S. Campbell on the eve of their departure from that locality, and to take up assumption of the position as superintendent and matron of the County House of Refuge, when the following address was presented to them:—

To Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Campbell,
Clydesdale, Ont.

Dearly beloved Friends:

It was with deep regret we learned a few weeks ago that you were about to take your departure from our midst, but it was indeed with extreme pleasure that we learned of your appointment as superintendent and matron of the County House of Refuge and we take this opportunity on the eve of your departure of offering to you both our heartiest sentiments of joy and congratulation. We also feel proud to think that the appointment has fallen on such worthy shoulders, and we were pleased to know that the County Council had chosen one so eminently qualified to fill the vacant position.

We know how ardently and faithfully you have worked in whatever capacity you were employed, and we feel that in your new position you will gain the love and friendship of the inmates of the house and instead of giving you looks of sarcasm they will look to you both as a father and a mother.

We know that your loss will be greatly felt as superintendent of the Sunday School, where you always showed such a good example of Christian charity. Fatherly solicitude for all, and your genial disposition were a few of your stirling qualities which endeared you to all the people you came in contact with. You were always willing with a willing hand to help along any scheme that would in any way advance the interest of the comunity, and we feel during your term in the County Council you have made many warm friends who will heartily congratulate you on your appointment.

We now ask you to accept this purse as a slight token of the high esteem you are both held by the people of Clydesdale, and once more we extend to you both our best wishes and congratulations.

Signed on behalf of the well wishers of Clydesdale.

JAS. DONALD,
HERB. MOLONEY.

But when the bill collector called

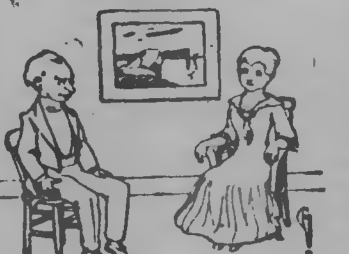
What Did She Mean?



"Are you fond of curios, Miss Ethel?"
"Oh, very."
"What sort do you prefer?"
"I rather enjoy your visits."

Some persons are exceedingly straightforward and truthful, while others are merely diplomatic.

People will be exceedingly interested in you if you will make your personality entirely subservient to theirs.

A girl's idea of a perfectly lovely summer is to be engaged to three men at the same time and drive herself frantic juggling dates.

A good example of nobody in particular is rich people of the second generation.

One reason for marrying a men is to keep some other girl from making him perfectly wretched.

Other people prejudice us against their judgment by their obvious lack of admiration for our own exploits.

Of course all men care more for themselves than they do for anybody else, but some don't make it entirely obvious.

MEMBERS OF FIRE BRIGADE

gave his views. Ald. Duncan pointed out that he was paying a very much higher wage than ever before. He wanted the fire department up to the highest efficiency, and the only way to get that was to pay more money. The industries of the city were entitled to it.

Ald. Smith would gve the men more money. It was the only thing to do.

Ald. Weir was of the same opinion as the others. The city would have to pay more wages.

Ald. Worth agreed with the firemen. The councl had not appreciated the work of the department. He thought that the firemen should be men of a very superior type, and to get them a high wage would have to be paid. He would pay a good man $20.00 a week, or $1,000 a year.

Ald. Taylor would like to see the staff up to normal, and the only way to get the men was to pay more money.

Ald. Stratton was surprised that the department had not grown during the last few months. It must be brought up to strength, and to do that the wages would have to be increased. The main question with him as Finance chairman was where the money was going to come from.

Mayor Duffus had been chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee and knew the workings of the department. He thought that the chairman should interview the men and find out the exact cause of their dissatisfaction, and ascertain what would satisfy them. The industries of the city must be given every protection, and wages were higher [illegible] over the country. Good men wo[illegible] have to be paid a good wage.

Ald. Worth felt sure that if a substantial increase was given the men that there would be no further trouble. Make the wages here better than at other places.

Ald. Dobbin was quite agreeable to interview the men if given a defintе proposition to place before them.

The New Scale of Pay

Ald. Worth fathered a motion that the pay of the members of the fire department be: Chief, $1,600; asst. chief., $1,100; captain, $1,050; lieutenants, $1,025; first grade men, $1,000; second grade men, $900; and that the grading of the men be left with the chairman and the chief.

This was the recommendation of the committee to the council, and the pay will date from June 1st.

The present Rate

The present rate of pay is as follows, since March 1st:—

Chief, $1,600.

Assistant Chief, $900, cut down $37.60.

First year, $800; per day, $2.19.

Second year, $900; per day, $2.40.

And the previous pay was:

Chief, $1,400.00.

Assistant Chief, $937.60.

First year, $687.60; per day, $1.88.

Second year, $762.60; per day, $2.09.

Third year, $837.60; per day $2.29.

The appropriation for the department is $13,500, and for the salaries alone $13,500. The increases will amount to about $2,000 per year.

CAFE SERVICE ON TORONTO TRAINS

C. P. R. MEETS DEMAND OF LOCAL MEN FOR A DINING CAR.

The business men of Peterborough have for months been complaining of the service on the C.P.R. between this city and Toronto. One of their demands was for a cafe car service on the train which leaves this city at 7.35 and on the one which leaves Toronto for Peterborough at 5.40. The reason given by the dissatisfied that the first left too early to enable them to get breakfast at home and the latter departed from Toronto just about the regular time for supper. They have been obliged to fast while making the trip to and from the metropolis.

The C.P.R. management has met the demand and trains 601 and 602 will be equipped with a cafe parlor car between Toronto and Havelock. The service has been instituted as an experiment and will not be continued unless the patronage shows that there is a general demand for it. The new order went into effect last Monday.

ARTIST AT WARSAW.

Clever Pencil Work Executed by Master Fred Gunn.

Fred Gunn of Warsaw is only 13 years old, but he has already shown a marked talent for drawing, with a special aptitude for cartoon work, two excellent specimens of which have just been furnished The Review. One represents Gen. Hindenburg in full flight with John Bull in pursuit, the dust from the heels of the German almost hiding him from view. The other pictures the Kaiser and the Crown Prince standing at the crossroads while shells are bursting around them.

"Where are we going, father?" asks the Prince.

"To ruin, my son," is the disconsolate answer.

If this budding artist perseveres he will yet be heard from among the celebrities of the nation.

Hamilton Methodist Conference, in session at Brantford, strongly endorsed compulsory service by selective draft, also urging conscription of wealth and all resources of the country, and advocating "putting the clamp" on drink and race-track gambling.

Health Certificates Before Marriage

COUNCIL OF WOMEN SEEK TO PROTECT PHYSICAL WELFARE OF RACE.

WINNIPEG, June6. The National Council of Women would make it a law that health certificates must be produced before a marriage license is granted in Canada. A recommendation to this effect was made to the Resolutions Committee. The idea is to protect the race against the spread of veneral diseases, which, it was stated, were becoming a blight on the future of the race.

Three sessions were held during the day with President Mrs. F. H. Torrington, of Toronto, in the chair at the morning and evening sessions, and the Marchioness of Aberdeen presiding during the afternoon.

A resolution favoring single tax was voted down.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—To relieve railway freight congestion the Administration is considering suspending during the war provisions for the navigation laws which forbid foreign vessels in American coastwise trade. ARTHUR D. HONE ELISTS WITH COBOURG BATTERY

Teacher on Collegiate Staff Goes Into Service of Empire---Granted Leave of Absence Until End of War.

Mr. Arthur D. Hone, a member of the Collegiate teaching staff, has enlisted as a private in the Cobourg heavy battery. He has not taken this step in order to avoid possible conscription as ever since the war broke out he has been anxious to get into the service. The Government, however, has hitherto taken the stand that all expert chemists were of more service to the country in private life than in the army. He persevered until he has finally been accepted.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education last night Mr. Hone was granted leave of absence for the duration of the war. He will be paid the difference between his present salary and the King's pay, his receipts from the Patriotic Fund and maintenance allowance to be taken into consideration. The Board in adopting this course are acting according to the terms of a resolution applying to such cases and which was passed at a meeting early in 1916.

The members of the Board at last night's meeting were Chairmna Eastwood and Messrs. Miller, McGrath, Fowler, Denne, Gordon, Hill, Dr. Neal, Dr. Burnham. An offer from J. J. Turner and Sons to supply flags for the Queen Alexandra and King George Schools was referred to the property committee.

Mr. F. J. A. Morris of the Collegiate staff was appointed a member of the entrance examination board

The Collegiate will be closed for the holidays on Friday in order to make room for holding the various departmental examinations.

An invitation was received from Col. D. Walker, to attend the annual excursion of the Normal School to be held Friday.

The report of Miss M. J. V. Jory, school nurse, stated that during May there had been 1885 inspections. A number of cases of enlarged tonsils had been detected and treated, some by the family physician and others at the hospitals. Four pupils suffering from chicken pox were excluded from the schools, four suffering from German measles and sixteen for other reasons. Twenty-three visits were paid and the parents were reported as willing to cooperate with the authorities in all matters pertaining to the health of the children.

Miss Jory recommended that soap and paper towels be provided in the schools the same as in Toronto.

The following applicatins for positions on the teaching staff were received: Miss Evelyn McCutcheon, Hastings; Miss B. V. Johnson, city; Miss V. W. Burgess, Lakefield; Miss Gladys M. Hunter, city; and Miss J. M. Lancaster, city.

A new room will be opened in the Queen Mary school after the summer vacation and this will tend to relieve the pressure in the South Central school.

SPAIN AT WAR SOON?

Her Intervention More Probable Now Than Ever

ROME, JUNE 4.—While positive information that Spain is to join the allies at an early date is not available, a member of the Pope's entourage who possesses access to Spain's intervention is now more probable than ever before.

This prelate added that Spain's intervention would afford the best prooff that peace on the allied terms was imminent, but he refused to hazard a guess as to when Spain would come in.

BRITISH DASH AND FURY PLEASE FRENCH

"A Vision Terrifying and Splendid," Wrote the Matin—Boches Enraged at Tanks

The French correspondents on the British front speak with undisguised admiration of the intoxicating dash and fury of the attacks of our troops. The Matin's special correspondent says: "I saw from the starting trench one of these waves of assault launch itself over the top, a vision terrifying and splendid. The men crouched in the mud, all the springs of their souls and muscles stretched to the utmost tension, their features rigid as marble. Then at a signal came an onrush of human forces like undammed water.

Battle of Kangaroos

"Men dashed with ringing cheers, and there followed a wild race amid a hurricane of shells, five projectiles to the second. It was a race broken by voluntary prostrations face to ground, of sudden flattening and sudden risings, a dance at once cautious and grandiose, as if the earth from all around had suddenly set itself to running. A wounded man summed it up as the battle of kangaroos.

The Merry Tanks

"The tanks behaved well, as is their habit. One remained for a time stuck fast by I know not what hitch. The Boches buried themselves at it, and, yelling like maddened Red Indians, danced a scalp dance round the monster. Sublimely indifferent, the tank closed its portholes, lowered the curtains, and shut the doors, and then waited philosophically for the end of the shower, not without letting loose from time to time some saucy broadsides from machine guns to kill time and, incidentally, a few Boches.

"Grenades glanced off its carapace like bubbles on the back of a whale, and if the Boches had been able to lend an ear they would have heard the whale and all its Jonahs roaring with homeric laughter. Soon after a detachment dashed up to help the tank, which then blithely once more pointed its nose towards the enemy."

WORKER, HOME-LOVER IS SIR EDWARD KEMP

Reserved, Shy Public Man—Masterful Character—A Lover of Flowers and Toil

Sir Edward Kemp is a man of very considerable native and natural dignity. "A strong-willed, masterful man is Kemp," one who knows him well said of him. "He is nothing out of the way as a speaker, but he makes a splendid administrator, and has remarkable executive ability. He is a man of great reticence and reserve. But this reticence and reserve have their origin rather in shyness than in unsociability. He is the last man in the world to court publicity. Nor is he any popularity hunter."

Not Easy to Talk to

Sir Edward Kemp has not a particularly good manner with strangers. He is not an easy man to talk to. And though not devoid of humor, he is on the serious side. He takes himself seriously, as he takes his politics and takes his business. He is a prodigious worker, and quite unsparing of himself. It is his habit to go to Ottawa on Sunday night and to return to Toronto for the week-end on the Saturday morning following. All the Saturday he spends at his business. Then when Sunday comes he is a pretty tired man.

His Beautiful Home

His beautiful house, Castle Frank, overlooking the Don Valley, is considered by many people to be the loveliest house in Toronto. It is a big house of some twenty-five rooms or so, with fine gardens of about thirteen acres in extent. Everything about the house—all the appointments and arrangements—is the very acme of comfort. It is, in fact, a house which has been designed for comfort, and resembles an English country house more perhaps than does any other dwelling in Toronto. There is plenty of glass, and an abundance of flowers, of which Sir Edward Kemp is extremely fond.

TAUGHT BOYS TO STEAL

Old Woman Who Created Gang of Young Thieves

An extraordinary story of an organized gang of boy thieves, who made daily raids on grocers' shops and sold the proceeds of their thefts to a tradeswoman, was told at Marylebone. Before the court was Mary O'Neill, an invalid woman of 60, who kept a general store at Princes St., Edgeware Road, and was charged with aiding and abetting several boys to steal. She was a portly woman, suffering from chronic rheumatism, and it was stated that the only time she had left her shop during 17 years was when she was arrested on the present charge and brought to court.

A number of boys were concerned in the case, but only one—a lad of 18, named John Hodges, gave evidence. He said he made the acquaintance of the woman about a month previously when he went to her shop to buy candy. In the course of conversation she suggested that he should steal things from shops, and nearly every day since then, up to the time when he was arrested for stealing a piece of ham, he had sold to her articles which he and several other boys had stolen from shops in the Edgeware Road. These articles included tins of salmon, milk, cocoa, treacle, and sardines, pots of jam and marmalade, and packets of candles. She paid him 6d. a pot for the jam, 4d. a tin for the salmon and sardines, 3d. a tin for the milk, 2d. for the cocoa, and 9d. a packet for the candles, and all the money he received he shared with the other boys.

Mr. Paul Taylor remarked that prisoner had actually been creating young criminals wholesale, and in spite of her infirmity and her age he sentenced her to six weeks in the second division, in the hope that the effect would be to warn others, and put an end to the existence of this gang of young thieves.

Schools That Differ

On this continent the idea of absolute uniformity in schools over a large area and amid many diverse interests has had its day. The school in a grazing district must have different work from the school among orchardists or market gardeners or fishermen. They cannot be as "like as two peas," much less can they afford to become just city schools on a small scale. The needs of their communities are different.

The rural school that is merely a preparatory school for the high school of the town and the university of the city may become a factor in rural depopulation.

Experiments with cooling buildings by forcing air through hollow walls with electric fans are being tried in India.

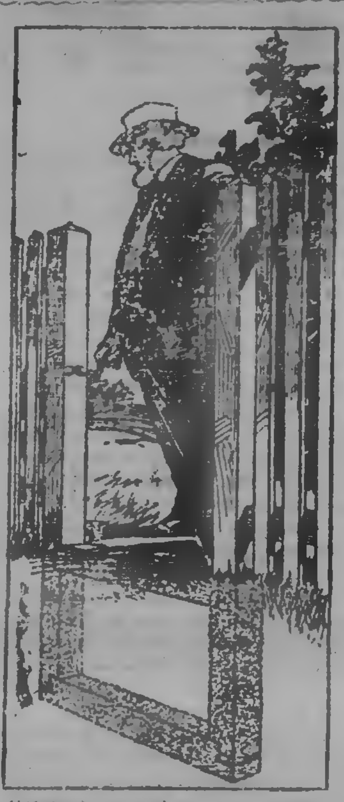
UNDERGROUND BRACE FOR WOODEN GATEPOST



Gateposts sagged so as to make the gate ineffective are quite common, largely because of poor bracing. The method illustrated of bracing the posts underground is simple and substantial. It leaves the exit clear of surface braces and provides a rigid support for the gate even when the posts are sunk only 15 inches in the ground. A cross brace is housed into the gateposts at the surface, and another binds the posts at their lower ends. The joints should be spiked together strongly, and the portion underground should be tarred to prevent it from rotting quickly.—Popular Mechanics.

"TELL HIM HE'S DINED"

Absent-Minded Peer Believed the Lying Waiter

Among the many excellent stories which Mr. Leslie Ward, the famous cartoonist "Spy," tells in his reminiscences are one or two concerning the absent-mindedness of Lord Crewe's father, the poet-peer, better known as Monckton-Milnes.

"I remember," says "Spy," "the eccentric lord coming into the club one evening looking tired and hungry. On the mantelpiece a white paper gleamed. It was a list of the Derby lottery. Something stirred in his mind, which was far away on other subjects bent, and reminded him that he was hungry. He scanned the lottery list, and at last he was heard to murmur in unsatisfied tones: 'Waiter, I don't see anything to eat here.'" On another occasion, after careful scrutiny of the actual menu, he ordered a herring.

Monckton-Milne used to dine at the Athenæum, and usually at the same table. Another member came rushing in one day to obtain a place for himself. But every seat was occupied save that reserved for Lord Crewe. "Tell him when he comes," said the would-be diner to the waiter, as he sat down, "that he's dined!" It is to be supposed the waiter found the deception worth while, for when Lord Crewe arrived he was met with surprise and quiet expostulation. "You dined an hour ago, my lord," said the unscrupulous servant. "So I did," murmured the poor victim, as he retraced his steps.

He who would enter politics should first learn to watch his step.

CASEY'S PARENTAGE

"The outlook wasn't brilliant for the Mudville nine that day."

The question of who was the author of those immortal lines has been asked more times than the famous query, "Why is a cow?" and answered correctly about once out of every hundredth time. "Casey at the Bat" is one of the most popular bits of veres that ever found its way to the sport page, and was first printed by a San Francisco paper. The fascinating lines were the output of the fertile mind of Ernest L. Thayer, who when they were first printed resided in Worcester Mass. The verses were widey copied, and leaped into immediate prominence throughout the baseball world. His claim to the authorship was long widely disputed. George Whitfield D'Bys, Joseph Quinlin Murphy and Will Valentine are among the dozen or so persons to whom Casey has been attributed. Valentine's claim was made by friends after his death in 1897. Much evidence was brought to bear on behalf of each claimant, but a shifting of this, however, resulted in a verdict for Thayer, and to him goes the credit. The first publication of the poem in the San Francisco paper was over the initials of "E.T.L.," and it is a matt of record that the contributor was Mr. Thayer. Others claimants have been unable to produce a copy of any publication containing "Casey at the Bat" previous to June 4, 1888. So it was just 29 years ago that "Casey" first warmed the heart of the American baseball public, and since then it has been more generaly qaoted than any similar literary effort dealing with the game.

Mr. Thayer graduated from Harvard, and it was while he was a student at Harvard that he discovered "Mudville," a soggy ball field not far from Cambridge, where exciting contests were often played. Mr. Thayer was a member of the same class at Harvard as William Randolph Hearst and was later employed on the Hearst newspapers. He finally abandoned the pursuit of journalism for more profitable commercial activities. While "Casey at the Bat" was universally copied and read, much of its fame was originally due to DeWolf Hopper, who recited the verses at his performances all over the country.

C. R. BANKS', Prop.

LOAN MONEY ON STOCK SECURITY

FINANCE MINISTER'S BILL IS NOW BEFORE THE COMMONS.

OTTAWA, June 6.—Sir Thomas White's Government Bill to amend the bank act in order to permit Charterer banks to loan money to farmers and others engaged in raising stock, upon the security of their stock, and also to provide for the filing of the security and the priority of the bank's claim, was given a first reading in Parliament. The presentation of the bill allowed the consideration of a resolution containing its terms. Sir Thomas explained, in reply to F. F. Pardee, that farmers could thus raise money on their stock in the same way as manufacturers did.

Dr. Mulloy, Provencher; Archie B. McCoig, West Kent; and H. B. Morphy, Perth, commended the measure as an aid to farmers, while D. D. McKenzie expressed the fear that it was putting too much power in the hands of the banks.

At the hour appointed, the bride, neatly attired in a dress of white crepe de chine, and wearing a bridal veil caught up with orange blossoms, entered the artistically decorated drawing-room, leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of a pretty wedding march played by Mrs. J. Richardson, Pontypool.

Rev. W. T. Wickett of Frazerville performed the ceremony in the presence of about ninety guests. The flower girl was Miss Helen Kennedy and the ring-bearer Master Marshall Finney. WAS PRISONER IN GERMANY FOR EIGHTEEN MONTHS

Sergt. Edwards Will Relate Experience in Collegiate Assembly Hall Friday Evening.

Sergt. Edwards Will Speak Here Friday Evening.

Sergeant Edwards, one of the few famous Princess Pat's Battalion, remaining original members of the which did such splendid work and endured so much for the cause of the Allies in the early days of the war, will speak here in the Collegiate hall on Friday evening, June 8, at 8.15.

Sergeant Edwards was taken prisoner by the Germans and managed, on his third attempt, to escape. He was recaptured twice and was treated with great severity in consequence of his attempts to get away. He was a prisoner of war for eighteen months, and will relate his experiences as such and speak of conditions prevailing in the camps, the food, and treatment of the prisoners.

Members of the audience will be at liberty to ask Sergt. Edwards questions relating to Red Cross parcels or any matter of general interest.

As this is the first time the citizens have had this aspect of the war presented to them in Peterborough by a man who has actually had the experience of being a prisoner in Germany, it should be most interesting to every one, but especially so to those whose sons and husbands are still prisoners in that unfriendly land. The Collegiate hall should be packed to hear Sergt. Edwards.

There will be a musical program preceding the address. A collection will be taken up on behalf of the Peterborough Red Cross Society's Prisoners of War Department.

MISS MENGES, VIOLINIST,

Will Give Recital At The Conservatory.

The famous English violinist, on a paralell with Kreisher and Mischa Ehlman, will give a concert at the Conservatory of Music on Monday evening, June 11. Do not miss this great opportunity to hear this wonderful violinist. Peterborough public are extremely fortunate in securing this opportunity to hear this world renowned violinist (pupil of Professor Auer of Petrograd, Russia), Miss Menges, as it is only by chance that she had this date open. Even Royalty has shown interest in Miss Menges' career, which expressed itself in a practical way by Queen Alexandra attending the private recital. She was also invited to play at the home of Prince Henry of Battenburg. When the Queen of Spain was invited to hear Miss Menges, many members of the Royal Family attended these recitals and appreciated England's greatest instrumentalist. Before her departure for these shores she was commanded to Kensington Palace.

BRITISH BEGIN NEW OFFENSIVE

BRITISH BEGIN ATTACK ON FRONT OF NINE MILES AND CARRY ALL BEFORE THEM

Every First Objective is Reached and Collection Stations Are Filled With Prisoners---Elation in London Over Declines in Submarine Warfare.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, June 7.—An official statement says: "We attacked at 3.10 this morning German positions on the Messines-Wytschaete ridge on a front of over nine miles. We have everywhere captured our first objectives and further progress is reported satisfactory along the whole front of attack. Numbers of prisoners are already reported reaching collection stations.

AIRPLANES ARE ACTIVE.

LONDON, June 7.—Another aerial raid on Belgium is reported today by the Admiralty. Naval airplanes dropped bombs on the airdrome at Nieuminster, near the coast between Zeebrugge and Ostend. All the machines returned.

AMERICANS ARE READY.

PARIS, June 7.—The Minister of Marine announces that American warships have anchored off the French coast. Transports laden with wheat and other supplies also arrived and huge American bases are being established.

LET VIENNA TELL IT.

VIENNA, June 7.—Wednesday's official statement says the prisoners taken from the Italians in the last three days number 256 officers and ten thousand men.

LONDON IS ELATED.

LONDON, June 7.—A spirit of elation is evident in the editorials and news columns of the newspapers here as a result of the decrease in the submarine sinkings, the heavy toll paid by the Germans for the air raid of Tuesday and the succesful naval and airplane attacks on enemy's Belgian bases.

SURPRISE ATTACK CHECKED.

PARIS, June 7.—In the region northwest of St. Quentin a strong force of Germans attempted at midnight an attack on our lines over a front of about six hundred yadrs. Our fire delivered with violence and precision checked the attempt quickly. The effect of the fire was so great that the Germnas immediately returned to their trenches. North of Chemin des Dames heavy artillery fighting continued on the front south of Filain. In upper Alsace a surprise attack west of Bisel was repulsed easily. Two German airplanes were brought down on June 6. Supplementary information now at hand establishes definitely that three more German machines have been brought down by our pilots on June 3, 4 and 5.

THOSE RECKLESS HUNS.

PARIS, June 7.—A strong force of Germans made an attack northwest of St. Quentin at midnight. The official announcement says the attackers were caught under a violent French fire and retired after sustaining heavy losses.

THE BEST IS NONE TOO GOOD FOR A GREATER PETERBORO

Combintion Motor Hose Truck and Pumping Engine Affords the Greatest Measure of Protection For All---Answers Three-Fold Purpose.

With the passing of years Peterborough has laid aside the swaddling clothes of a lumbering town in which wooden sidewalks were a luxury and its primitive fire-fighting apparatus a pride, and donned the adult apparel of a wide awake electric city ambitiously clamoring for a "Greater Peterborough" and all that pertains thereto. Wooden sidewalks have given place to those of concrete, Macadam roads are retiring before the victorious march of granolithic pavement, and the volunteer fire department has been absorbed by one of a permanent nature, in the modern station of which the old-time "puffing billy" of a steam engine is a misfit of doubtful utility. With maturer adult years Peterborough's extended limits have developed into thickly populated suburbs, plentifully besprinkled with progressive factories, but still depending for fire protection on one fire station, more modernized than in the days of old, it is true, but stopping short of a twentieth century machine to replace the decrepit steam engine calculated to supplement the water-works in cases of accident or emergency. However, our City Council has at last under consideration improved protection for factories and outlying residential districts, in the shape of an engine which will obviate the need of substations by reaching from one central fire hall any given distance within the city's limits in approved time, and also augment our present service. And if the aldermen only know if they have found that one thing they are seeking in the American La France combination motor hose truck and pumping engine, tested here last Saturday.

Lessons Learned.

The demonstrations of this machine by Mr. Thomas showed that it is desirably versatile in application: Its powerful motor will pump four streams of water—750 gallons a minutes—from a creek or river. Its feed hose can be attached to a hydrant and through the engine play from that one hydrant four streams on a fire, whereas we only get two under existing conditions. When playing from a hydrant the machine will add about 138 lbs. to the regulation water pressure and multiply by three the height reached by a straight water test. And another service to which the La France engine can be put is that should a break occur in our water mains (which has happened) the engine could be run down to the river and pump 750 gallons of water a minute into the service pipes intact, thus affording considerable appreciable relief to a menacing situation. Then we have some hills in Peterborough, and climbing them is child's play to the La France outfit. But the main point in this connection is that water pressure frbm the pumping station decreases in accordance with the grade it has to ascend, and the test on Smith Town hill last Saturday showed that in the case of a serious fire in such a locality this machine's augmentation of the water works' possible pressure with a steep gradient handicap would be a God-send indeed.

The Machine Endorsed.

While the aldermen had abandoned the idea of a combination hose and pumping outfit in favor of a hose and chemical machine, last Satur-

CONSERVATIVES WILL STAND BEHIND PREMIER AND FORCE CONCRIPTION BILL THROUGH

Decision Reached at Caucus Practically Unanimous---No Election Now Probable---Sir Robert May Yet Form New Cabinet Taking in Liberal Members of House.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

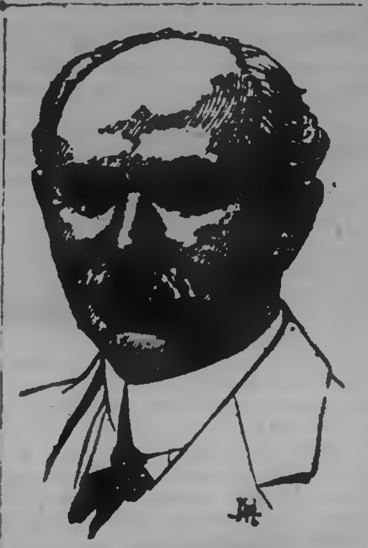
OTTAWA, June 7. — The Conservative caucus today gave what is said to have been practically unanimous approval to the proposal of Sir Robert Borden that the Conscription Bill be brought down next week and forced through the House. So far as known, there is no intimation of a general election, but that may eventuate from developments after the bill is introduced.

Correspondence on coalition showed that the Premier had made a proposal to the leader of the Opposition, who had replied in effect that it should have been broached before conscription was announced. The Premier suggested a cabinet of eight Liberals and eight Conservatives, with himself as the odd member, giving the present Government a majority of one. The Prime Minister also suggested that a coalition bill be introduced with a pledge that it would not be given effect until the coalition had gone to the country and asked for a mandate on the measure.

The two leaders were unable to agree upon the composition of the Cabinet, and finally negotiations came to an end yesterday, and the deal was declared off.

ELECTIONCERTAIN

TORONTO, June 7.—Daily News despatch from Ottawa says: "The proposals made by Sir Robert Borden for a Union Cabinet have been decisively rejected by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. As a result a general election is certain, and will be called as soon as the necessary steps can be taken. The situation was explained to the members of the House this morning, when both parties held a caucus. Sir Robert Borden will now endeavor to secure a group of Liberals for the Government from inside Parliament, or, if necessary, from the outside.



HON. ROBERT ROGERS

Minister of Public Works, who has resigned from the Cabinet pending investigation of charges made by Justice Galt.

Appeal to Country is Now Likely

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, June 7.—Premier Borden offered Sir Wilfrid Laurier a fifty-fifty division of the coalition cabinet, retaining the premiership, but all attempts were turned down. Certain sections seem to be precipitating a complete cleavage. An appeal to the country on a new win-the-war policy is likely.

DOES NOT WAIT FOR THE DRAFT

NEW RECRUIT IS TAKEN ON STRENGTH OF 57TH BATTALION.

Another recruit has been taken on the strength of the 57th Battalion for overseas, and it will not be long before the overseas company will be considerably increased, as a number of men have signified their willingness to enlist just as soon as their business and private affairs can be adjusted. Lt.-Col. Walker and his officers are at the Armouries every day and will be glad to give information to anyone thinking of joining.

NO BETTING ON HORSE RACING

THIS PROBABLY MEANS AN END OF ROYAL SPORT DURING WAR.

OTTAWA, June 7.—An order-in-council has been passed by the government forbidding public betting at Canadian race tracks during the continuance of the war. The order does not apply to spring meets which are now being held on the Canadian circuits. It is probable that the order will put an end to racing in Canada so long as the bettin gprohibition is effective.

THREE VILLAGES ARE TAKEN IN EARLY MORNING RAID BY BRITISH TROOPS

Advance Well Over Ridge Where They Are Now Entrenching Tanks in Thick of Fight ---Over One Thousand Germans Captured.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

British Headquarters in France, June 7.—A British rush this morning on the Messines-Wythchaete Ridge on the Belgian front took them well over the ridge, where they are now entrenching. The village of Messines was reported taken early in the fighting. It was also reported that Lenfer and Zareeba had fallen and that Wythchaete had been surrounded by British storming troops.

Tanks were in the thick of the fighting. More than 1,000 Germans were taken prisoners early in the fight. Fighting continues under a midsummer sun. The Germans have not yet rallied for the expected counter-attack.

SURPRISE FOR ENEMY.

The British attack began today, two months after the offensive campaign burst into a flame at Arras, was carried out in that slender strip of Belgium saved nearly three years ago from the German invasion. The blow was struck on a front of approximately ten miles against the high ground known as Messines ridge, from which the Germans have overlooked the British lines ever since October, 1914. It was not long after the battle began that word came from all the sectors of the fighting front that various objectives had been taken on scheduled time.

All prisoners say the Germans had been expecting an attack, but were taken completely by surprise by the hour at which it was launched and the fury with which it was carried forward.

The British captured important trench positions all the way from the observation ridge southeast of Ypres to Ploegsteert wood north of Armentieres. More than one million pounds of high explosives were blown up under the German forward positions.

It is the most gigantic mining operation in the history of the war and spread panic among the Germans.

The British in today's attack used probably twenty per cent. more guns, especially those of heavy calibre, than they employed in the battle of Arras.

CHESTER KEMP LAY DOWN LIFE

Private Chester Kept, formerly of Peterboro, but who enlisted with the Canadian Overseas forces at Edmonton, has been killed in action, according to word received here to-day by a few of his friends.

SAVE DAYLIGHT IN DOMINION

OTTAWA, June 7. The government has decided to put in force daylight saving throughout the Dominion. Sir George Foster has given notice of legislation to put all clocks ahead one hour on a day to be fixed later, and keep them on throughout the summer. Daylight saving has been adopted in previous years by municipalities in Canada, but was not so successful as it would have been had the system been general, as it will be under the government legislation.

DEPUTATION TO OTTAWA TO URGE THAT TRENT CANAL BE OPENED TO LAKE THIS YEAR

Action Taken at Meeting of Municipalities Interested This Afternoon--Minister Cochrane Held Responsible for Delay in Forcing Grand Trunk to Build Bridge.

A meeting of the representative of the different municipalities interested in the immediate completion of the Trent Valley Canal which was held in the City Council chamber this afternoon and after discussing the probable cause of delay in opening of the lower section to Lake Ontario it was decided to have all the cities, towns, villages and townships appoint a small deputation to wait on Mr. Cochrane, the Minister of Railways and Canals, and ask him to have the obstruction to the canal at Campbellford renewed.

Mayor Duffus Explains.

Mayor Duffus in calling the meeting to order gave a complete outline of the efforts that had been made to get the canal opened to Lake Ontario reading the letter of Premier Borden as well as the correspondence of Mr. Cochrane and what Mr. J.H. Burnham, M.P., had done and said in the matter. This correspondence has already been published in The Review. He thought that it was a shame that a small expenditure of money should prevent the people from enjoying the investment of millions of dollars.

Minister to Blame.

Col. J. W. Miller had heard from Mr. Burnham this morning and he was still of the opinion that it was the Minister of Railways and Canals who was delaying the work. The opposition of Mr. Cochrane must be overcome.

Members of the government have not realized the good the opening of the canal to Lake Ontario would be to the municipalities interested along its banks. War should not impede the progress of the country and the G.T.R. must be pressed to go on with their part of the work.

Defends Mr. Cochrane.

Mr. R. R. Hall did not think that Mr. Cochrane was unsympathetic with the object, in fact he thought the fault lay with the G.T.R. Every one knew that the finances of the railway were in very bad shape and to embark on capital expenditure was something they wanted to avoid at the present time. It was these investments that weighed with Mr. Cochrane and did not justify him in taking the Railway by the throat and forcing them to do it. Mr. Hall thought that the advisability of placing a temporary swing on the Campbellford bridge would be worth drawing to the attention of the Minister. A few thousand dollars spent now would open up navigation until such time as the elevation was ready. It would be very short sighted on the part of the Government to oppose the opening of the canal at so small a cost. Mr. Cochrane might adopt

TRADES COUNCIL IN FAVOR OF ELECTRICITY FOR FUEL

Adopt Resolution Last Night Calling on Organized Labor in Ontario to Agitate for Innovation---Civil Coal Yard Does Not Solve Problem.

The Trades and Labor Council at the regular meeting last night unanimously adopted a resolution calling on labor unions throughout the province to agitate for the development of power by the Hydro Electric Commission and for the manufacture of the required apparatus to heat the homes of Ontario by electricity. This resolution was fathered by Vice-President A. J. Bolwell and was adopted after a long and interesting discussion of the coal situation which ended up in the conclusion that even a civic fuel yard will not solve the problem. So long as Canada depends for its fuel supply upon the American mines the householders of this country are at the mercy of the United States.

This is the first definite action that has been taken by any public body with regard to this matter, although it has been advocated as long as two years ago by private citizens. One prominent resident of the city who represents large interests has been a champion of electric heating for years. Last winter he took the matter up with the Utilities Commission and something like an understanding was reached. The commission agreed to supply the electricity provided he fitted up the furnace in his home with the apparatus required for the experiment. The plan that he had in mind, however, which was original with himself proved an investigation to be too costly so that the matter was abandoned for the time being. The rate which the Commission proposed to charge was the usual figure for lighting purposes but this could be lowered if heating and cooking by electricity became general.

There is a firm in Toronto that manufactures electric heating apparatuses. Their plan is to install radiators in the various rooms of a residence, these to be connected by wires. To fit out a home such as the average workingman occupies would cost in the neighborhood of $150. The industry however, is yet in its infancy and the chances are that when electric heating comes into popular favor and the Hydro Commission has sufficient electricity for the purpose this part of the expense can be cut in two.

The Great Drawback.

The great obstacle to the successful operation of such a project is that the required supply of electricity would fall off over fifty per cent during the summer months. It can never be made fully successful until some means of overcoming this difficulty is found so as to keep in profitable operation throughout the year heat the homes in a city as large as such a plant as would be required to Peterborough during the winter months.

"The Trades Council is on the right track," said a prominent citizen to The Review this morning. "There is plenty of white coal in the district for the purpose and the matter of its development rests with the Hydro Commission.

Praise For Mayor Duffus.

Some of the delebates pressed Mayor Duffus for his exertions on behalf of the citizens to relieve the fuel situation.

A communication from British Columbia's labor organizations protesting against the proposed selective draft was received without action or comment.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JUNE 7, 1917

THAT CIVIC COAL YARD.

THE CHARTERED BANKS of the country have recently been authorized by Act of Parliament to loan money to farmers, taking a mortgage on live stock as security. Four years ago the banks were given permission to extend similar accommodation on grain which the farmer might have stored in his granary or in the elevators. Any farmer with a herd of cattle or a stable filled with horses is justified in asking a loan from his banker. The question is, will he get it? The law leaves it optional with the banker. There is nothing to compel him to hand over the money if such a risk does not appeal to him as a good investment. Bankers as a rule, it will be found, are naturally averse to going into the live stock business as a side line. The farmer in need of ready money will probably find himself confronted with the same old difficulties.

Peterborough has been given authority to establish a municipal coal yard, provided certain conditions, by no means unreasonable, are complied with. The first difficulty to be overcome will be the important one of securing a supply. The proposition as explained yesterday at the sitting of the Municipal Board is to keep constantly on hand a civic supply of not less than three thousand tons. The consumer of small quantities will be accommodated, and any man anxious to secure as much as an eight-ton supply will have to do business with the regular dealer. A stock kept on hand for the benefit of soldiers' dependents is an entirely different branch of the new civic enterprise. The branch will be under the control of the Patriotic Fund, not of the municipality.

The dealers are not averse to this arrangement. They believe, to begin with, that it will be only temporary. They have no objection to the city taking care of the householder who makes small purchases, naturally. There are merchants and grocers in the city who would not object to the municipality operating branch stores if only those, the profits on whose small purchases are swallowed up in the cost of delivery, were to be served, while the customers who bought in paying quantities were to be confined to the regular channels of commerce.

The question of a municipal coal yard has been so thoroughly explained that even those who advocated it strongly at the outset have lost faith in it as a measure of relief. In this category the members of the Trades and Labor Council may be included. At the regular meeting of that organization last night a resolution was adopted calling upon organized labor throughout the province to agitate for the development of power with a view to the general adoption of electric heating. This course was decided upon when it was made apparent to the delegates that no municipality or government in Canada can remedy a condition when the source of the trouble lies with the American mines and railways. So long as Canada is dependent upon the United States for a supply of fuel, the trouble is likely to recur.

There is nothing to prevent the American Government prohibiting the export of coal, as a war measure. Should this be done, the situation in Canada would be grave indeed.

THE CASE OF MR. ROGERS.

WHEN JUSTICE GALT was conducting an enquiry into the administration of the old Roblin Ministry in Manitoba, Hon. Robert Rogers, who was a member of that Ministry, was called as a witness. Mr. Rogers and the presiding Justice had a collision. The Minister of Public Works stated that any member of the Bench who accepted an extra fee of $100 a day for sitting as a commissioner while at the same time drawing his regular salary from the province was to all intents and purposes a grafter. The case described by Mr. Rogers applied to Justice Galt so far as the extra fee was concerned. The implication was obvious. The Justice naturally resented the imputation, and in his finding, handed down a week ago, the Minister of Public Works was held responsible to a large extent for the misdeeds of the Ministry that came to grief in Manitoba.

This was a serious charge to bring against a member of the Dominion Cabinet, especially the member who is at the head of the great spending department of the Government. Mr. Rogers promptly denied the statements of Justice Galt and demanded an investigation, pending the result of which he steps down from his position in the Cabinet. Two other judges are to take up his case and investigate the charges made by Justice Galt. It should be stated right here that these two members of the Bench will act in their new capacity without extra compensation. Any intimation to the effect that they are grafting will not be warranted.

The Review has no wish to apologize for or defend the Minister of Public Works. He is, however, entitled to a fair hearing. The fact that he courts a further and impartial investigation of his official career while a member of the Manitoba Government is certainly in his favor. Judges, whether of the county courts or higher up in the judiciary, are, after all, only human. No one is likely to go so far as to say that their findings are infallible. When they are invested with the toga of office they do not suddenly assume a new status and give up all the characteristics, the faults of disposition and the proneness to err at least occasionally in matters of opinion. In a word, no judge, however high may be the standard of his attainments, is absolutely perfect. Under the judicial robe there is that temple of ordinary human clay. Bitter personal feeling was angendered between Justice Galt and the Minister of Public Works. What the Justice said about the latter in his finding the other day would have vastly more weight with the public but for the unpleasant episode of nearly a year ago. Mr. Rogers is at least entitled to a hearing before a judiciary with whom he has had no personal quarrel.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier would accept as final the statement of Justice Galt, and, without further investigation, condemn Mr. Rogers at once. He says that to carry the matter before other judges is a reflection upon the Manitoba Justice. If the latter was a grafter then, the same cannot be said of the two members of the Bench who are to review his decision.

Justice Galt received $100 a day in addition to his regular salary for sitting as a commissioner. The judges who will hear what is really an appeal from his finding will receive nothing in the way of an honorarium. The point raised by Sir Wilfrid Laurier is not well taken.

If it is a reflection on the Bench to carry this case before another court of enquiry, then it is a reflection on a police magistrate to appeal a case disposed of before him, or on the county judge to carry a case higher up from the local court. It is just as essential to the peace and welfare of the community to conserve the rights of the individual as it is to maintain the dignity of the judiciary. The latter will stand higher in the estimation of the public if the judges all follow the example of the member of the Supreme Court Bench who refused to accept one cent for his services while acting as one of the commissioners who investigated the Kyte charges against the administration of the Militia Department.

There is something rotten in Denmark. The Canadian public are justified in a skeptical estimate of the efficacy of investigations into charges of public wrongdoing. The judicial enquiry in Manitoba has so far resulted in the imprisonment of one of the men indicted. The cases against all of the others have fallen through. In the meantime the money expended in the investigation for commissioners' extra pay and lawyers' fees has exceeded by thousands of dollars the amount originally appropriated from the public treasury.

The Canadian public would not object to the expenditure of $1000 to catch a malefactor, provided he was run down or at least a sincere effort was made to effect his capture. They would not be averse, either, to spending public money to secure the restitution of funds out of which the people had been defrauded. But when the transgressor goes Scot free and the money is not recovered, then who can marvel if the long-suffering public regard as sheer waste every dollar paid out to the men who engaged in a fruitless task with no sacrifice, but rather the reverse, to themselves?

MORE FLAGPHOBIA.

IT MUST BE THE RED in the average national emblem that throws our contemporary into a paroxysm every time a flag is brought before its vision. The fact that the aldermen have decided to purchase an American flag to hang beside the Union Jack in the Council chamber started our neighbor off in another rhapsody last night. It winds up a homily, in which patriotism and partisanship struggle for the ascendancy, with the following statement:

> "They (the Conservative party), to add injury to insult, took into the Cabinet as advisers of the King men who had shot holes through the flag."

All of which is pure puerile twaddle, a style of argument that would not pass muster in a debate conducted by schoolboys. No such men were taken into the Borden Cabinet. The statement made by one Minister has been distorted by malicious partisans out of all semblance to its original significance. Other public speakers have spoken to the same effect, and their utterances have passed unchallenged. Hon. George P. Graham, in an address in the Grand Opera House in this city, extolled the patriots of the period referred to as men who had made sacrifices and shed their blood in the interest of the freedom which the Canadian people enjoy today.

One week ago last Sunday the pastor of one of the leading churches in the city, preaching on the patriotic duty of the hour, set up as an example worthy the emulation of all Canadians the sturdy heroes in every uprising in the Motherland for simple justice. No one so far as heard from has branded that preacher as a menace to public safety. It is unfortunate, but nevertheless true, that the great charters that ensure the liberty of the masses have been won from the ruling classes by violence. Such matters are better allowed to slumber. Waking the sleeping canine is always attended with risk.

Only the other day The Examiner deplored the petty partisanship in Canada. To read its diatribe of last night is to be convinced of the validity of its contention that partisanship is the national vice.

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER.

J. W. FLAVELLE, chairman of the Munitions Board, former resident of Peterborough, who has accumulated something over a million dollars in business, has been made a baronet. The title is hereditary and will descend to Mr. Flavelle's heir along with his wealth.

President Falconer of Toronto University is recognized as the leader of thought in Canada. In the profession which he has chosen the compensation allowed him is no better than a mere living wage. President Falconer is never likely to reach the ranks of the plutocrat.

The millionaire is given a baronetcy, the scholar a knighthood, a title which will die with him. The voice of money is as raucous as ever. The man with the millions continues to outrank the mere scholar, who devotes a lifetime to the intellectual betterment of humanity. And to add to the anomaly, Sir Joseph Flavelle has been honored in the face of organised labor's demand that he be deposed from his public position because he is antagonistic to the cause.

BILLY SUNDAY PRAYS WITH THE FEROCITY OF THE ANCIENTS

"Oh, God, paralyze the tongues and strike dead in their tracks any man or woman or clique that dares to raise damnable, infamous hands against our country and the duty of our boys at the registration booths on Tuesday."

That was Billy Sunday's prayerful contribution to America's new fighting spirit at the tabernacle in New York. And Billy meant it with all the fire and power and sincerity that he could give to it—and more, it was a prayer as fervent and pleading as any call for sinners to repent.

With the last word a mighty shout swelled up from all parts of the great audience, a shout that fairly made the pine structure shake with its reverberations. One thousand bluejackets from the navy yard—fighting men dear to Billy's heart—left their seats and shouted and whistled in a drowning din of approval such as no other prayer ever said in New York has received.

When the high tide of cheering had ebbed Billy reached to his platform, threw open the little trap door that leads to the flight of stairs and the foot of the sawdust trail, and shouted for the same bluejackets to come down the paths "that leads to glory." In ten seconds the four lines were making their way down to the front—hundreds of sturdy sailor lads, and for each Billy had a smile and a word and maybe a slap on the back. Before the meeting these same boys had been the guests of the Y.W.C.A. at a dinner in the Cafeteria.

Billy a Good Recruiter

Altogether it was quite a day for good old-fashioned patriotism and Billy proved that he was fully as good recruiter for the army and the navy as for the forces of the Lord. And by the same token he demonstrated that he can hit just as hard at an American slacker as he can at this particular pet enemy, the saloon keeper.

"I think these people who are raising their voices against registration and conscription come pretty close to being traitors," he said at the opening of his afternoon address. "And I have no patience with these so-called pacifist meetings. We've passed that stage now and there's nothing to do but to stand pat and go the limit. We've got to do some hard scrapping and that't all there is about it. We didn't want this war, but when they crammed it down our throat we couldn't do anything else but fight. You can't let a man continualy spit in your face without coming back at him."

Later on in the sermon the foreign born anarchist came in for some of the same treatment. "We've got a dirty rotten gang in this country who brought their damnable Continental custom of Sabbath breaking and a pack of personal liberty lies with them, and every drop of blood in their filthy veins beats against America and our ideals. They come here with tags pinned on their coats waving their red flag of anarchy and shouting their infamous doctrines. I say rip the tags off them and ship them back where they came from if they don't like our country; and when they sail away we'll climb on the Statute of Liberty and sing 'Praise God, from whom all blessings flow.'"

Wit and Wisdom

A colonel in the French army who had a great eye for neatness, but not much of an ear for music, took occasion one day to compliment his bandmaster on the appearance of his men. "Their uniforms are neat," said the colonel, "and their instruments are nicely polished and kept in order, but there is one improvement that I must insist upon."

"What is it, colonel?"

"You must train your men, when they perform, to lift their fingers all at exactly the same moment and at regular intervals on their instruments, so—one, two; one, two!"

Very strong peppermints are grandpa's favorite confection. One day he gave one to 4 year old Marjorie and waited slyly to see what she would say or do when she should discover the pungent flavor of the candy. A few minutes later he saw her take the partly eaten peppermint from her mouth and place it on a small table beside an open window. "What's the matter?" he asked. "Don't you like the candy?"

"Oh, yes," replied Marjorie, "I like it, but I thought I'd let it cool for a little while."

There lives a very matter of fact man, whose wife is, and always has been, a bit sentimental and fond of trying to draw from husband those little endearments he has ever failed to furnish.

"I suppose," said she, one on occasion, "if you should meet some pretty girl you would cease to care for me."

"What nonsense you talk!" said husband. "What do I care for youth or beauty? You suit me all right."

Catherine seemed such a reliable girl that Mrs. Moran had no hesitancy in leaving her in charge of the children while she went for a long drive.

"How did they behave during my absence?" she asked on her return.

"Beautifully, madam," Catherine replied, "but in the end they fought terribly."

"Why on earth did they fight?"

"To decide which was behaving best."

During the impaneling of a jury in Philadelphia the following colloquy ensued between the judge and a talesman:

"You are a property holder?"

"Yes, sir."

"Married or single?"

"Married three years last March."

"Have you formed or expressed any opinion?"

"Not for three years, your honor."

MASON'S MELODIES

Our Uncle Sam is slow to fight, no war-like bluff he tenders; he first makes sure that he is right, then busts his best suspenders. So loath is he to mix in scraps, he is so mild a fellow, that Bill and other bonehead chaps imagined he is yellow. "We'll sink his ships," said Kaiser Bill, "we'll drown his gents and ladies; he is too ladylike to kill, or start in raising hades." But when our uncle sees that peace won't dovetail well with glory, he sherpens up his trusty creese, and things are look ing gory. Since first our starry flag arose, by war-worn soldiers greeted, our uncle's met all kinds of foes and never been defeated. For when he draws his shining blade, defeat must never dim it; and though in carnage he may wade, he'll always go the limit. That's what his shining sword is for, to knock a foeman silly, and this will be no wrist-tap war; write that down, Kaiser Willie. Oh, there'll be grief in German lands, and dark and gloomy weather, now Uncle Sam spits on his hands and cracks his heels together.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: As it was at my suggestion that Mr. Geo. Keen, general secretary of the Cooperative Union of Canada, was billed to address the public meeting held on the market square Monday night, owing to the eagerness of the parties responsible to have the meeting at that date which was only allowing themselves three days to complete all arrangements.

Working on the assumption that Mr. Keen would accept the invitation the dodgers were placed in the printer's hands. I wrote Mr. Keen stating that this was a meeting being got up by the organized workers of the city and owing to the Cooperative Society not being in the coal trade were unable to relieve the situation. In fairness to Mr. Keen for his non appearance and all interested in the above I enclose a copy of his letter to me dated June 2 and which arrived at my address June 5th:

A. MURRAY.

Mr. Keen's Letter.

Brantford, Ont., June 2, 1917.

Dear Mr. Murray, —

I am this morning in receipt of your favor of the 31st ult. Yesterday Mr. Gordon, of Peterboro, phoned me asking me to address a meeting in Peterboro on Monday night and agreeing to pay my expenses. He told me he was acting in the interests of labor people in your city and I was expected to address them on the coal question with the view of offering some solution to the difficulty. He apparently had the impression that I was responsible for some such solution in this city. I told him that while I was prepared to go to Peterborough if I could be of any service I did not wish to put them to expense that they would find had been uselessly incurred. The coal question can only be relieved in my judgment by negotiations between the Federal and the American Governments.

It would seem that certain brokers control the output from the mines and Canadian coal merchants compete for possession of the limited supply by offering premiums upon current prices. I may say in conclusion that the difficulty your society is meeting with as well as other societies is the fact that our national movement is so small and inconspicuous. If we could get a number of societies organized successfully and able to work together through the Union in developing along national lines, all would make much greater headway.

Unfortunately even successful societies seem to concern themselves exclusively with their own local affairs leaving national work entirely to me. They ought to awake to the dangers and possibilities of the future and by concerted effort take steps to make more rapid progress. If I can be of any service kindly let me know.

Yours faithfully,
GEORGE KEEN,
Hon. Secretary.

GREAT IS THE POWER OF SONG

UNITES MEN AND PRODUCES A SENSE OF FELLOWSHIP.

There is a power in song, and an immense one, too. Take, for instance, a man who is in the habit of drinking spiritous liquors to excess perhaps daily; let one of the most successful upholders of teetotalism buttonhole him, and pour into his ears thousands of the evils of the habit in the words of eloquence. What is the result? Why, nine out of ten would either tell him to attend to his own affairs or listen heedlessly to him until he had become exhausted with much talking, and then thanking his stars that the lecture was over, would bend his steps to the nearest saloon to obtain consolation in the shape of a "bourbon sour," for having been compelled to stand whiskeyless so long. But let a sweet singer warble into his ears the pathetic "Father, Dear Father, Come Home," and the whiskey shops will have lost half their charms for him during the balance of the evening.

Civil War Incident.

The following incident illustrates how song unites men and produces a Sunday night on an ocean steamer, a sense of human fellowship. "One man spoke of a hymn which had just been sung as having for him peculiarly sacred associations. He was in the Confederate Army in the American Civil War, and was ordered at one time to lonely sentry duty. As the night wore on he felt his danger, and to keep up his courage, he began to sing, 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul,' and after uttering the great prayer of this hymn he was comforted and felt quite safe. A peculiar expression came over the face of a fellow passenger on the ship. 'Strange,' he said, 'I was in the Union Army, and the night you refer to must have been the one on which we had been sent out with a party of scouts. We saw a solitary sentry and my men had their rifles leveled to fire, but just then we heard the clear notes singing out in the stillness, 'Cover my defenseless head with the shadow of Thy wing,' and I said, 'Boys, lower your rifles; we'll go back to camp.'"

The prayer in the song had brought to the enemy a sense of unity which it was impossible to break.

Great is the power of song!

MUSIC RATHER THAN MEDICINE THE SURGEON'S ASSISTANT

The world is sick and the surgeons are doing their part with a vengence, cutting out some healthy members along with those that are diseased. There are other agencies that work by milder methods, healing wounded minds and hearts and helping us to keep our equilibrum through trying days. On of these is music. Where argument ends music begins. Music gves wings to the footsore pilgrim on the road to reason. Music inspires the listless and gives rest to the overstrained. Music unites the confused and disordered elements in a rhythm of happiness and hope or it may be of comon suffering which finds relief in the very act of expression.

Let us have more music and singing at home and wherever a few people get together. Let us revive old tunes and learn the best of the later ones. A merry heart and a singing voice doeth good like a medicine. And a people that can sing together can fight together and can live together.

The Washington (D.C.) Times.

MODERN MUSIC A NECESSITY

MORE SO IN TIME OF WAR, AND IN EVERY HOME.

In time of war everyone expects to sacrifice a certain amount of luxury. By a simple process of taxation such sacrifices are automatically systematized for the entire community. But the question arises: What is a luxury, what a necessity?

It has been proposed that musical instruments should be classed a luxurie. In other words, music is to be classed with liquor and tobacco as one of those utterly useless frivolities that every serious and patriotic citizen should be glad to give up.

What an anomaly! Music, always a necessity, becomes in time of war absolutely indispensable to a nation. When the nervous system of every individual is working under constant strain, the claiming, sustaining influence of music should be given every opportunity to make its presence felt. When patriotic emotions demand expression and encouragement, it is music that will supply it. When thousands of people have to be brought together to one common purpose, music is the only universal language, the only oratory that reaches every heart. We want the "O! Canada," "The Maple Leaf" and the National Anthem to be sung in every home, in every public place. Yet some so-called economists limit the possibilities of music by placing an embargo on the instruments that should lead us in singing.

The musical sense is one of the highest and noblest possessed by man. It is also one of the most fundamental reaching down to the earliest stages of civilization and the lowest orders of intelligence. The savage goes to war with the beat of the tom-tom in his ears, and the greatest religious and political movements have equally owed their impulse to strains of music.

Time was when music, no matter how universal in its appeal, could be heard at its best only by the rich, but the last ten years have changed all this. The tremendous advance in the manufacture of all kinds of musical instruments, both of the old kind to be played by hand and of those that reproduce the work of great artists, has put the highest type of music into every home.

People are learning better every day the great truth that music is not a luxury but a necessity.

Here in Canada where we have a composite of classes, races and traditions, to be welded into a nation and into an army, we have only one language that all can understand, one means of expression that is common to all. Music to create and foster national spirit and consciousness, music to stimulate recruiting, music to brace and inspire those who march to war and rush to battle, and finally, music to sustain those who have to remain behind and wait—our need is for music, and music, and still more music.

Let us do nothing to discourage the one most powerful influence in the creation of a real and lasting nationalism.

CHURCH PIANOS.

Good Instruments in Churches Important in Child Development.

Usually when any Church organization determines that a piano is one of the most important desiderata of the moment a Committee is appointed with a two-fold function, to collect funds and to buy the instrument. Preliminary calculation makes it clear that four hundred dollars can be secured. If the Committee has luck, it secures about half the money. Then it is faced with the problem of getting a first rate instrument at a second-rate price. Many other persons drifting through this vale of tears—where occasional slants of sunshine are discerned—have determined that the problem is like inventing a perpetual motion machine—it Can't Be Done. Still, as mechanics can yet be found tinkering over models, so Committees go out hunting for a good piano at a poor price. They get either a fairly good instrument in a battered or repaired case, or else a bright-looking case with disreputable musical viscera. Usually they are satisfied with the bargain, for it is the custom of unreasoning humanity to appoint Committees which have no knowledge of the work they have to do. Usually also, the private members of the organization are satisfied being either too indifferent or too kind-hearted to complain. Only the person who plays on the instrument is critically-minded, and what is one against so many?

The result of such a policy, long continued, is to assemble in one church of good size, perhaps three or four pianos of the type mentioned. After a few years without tuning, and with constant variations of temperature, these instruments are musical nightmares, wild and fearsome sound producers beyond all imagining. What a collection of crippled relics of the Stone Age of piano building might be assembled if all the Churches were turned inside out, and their contents displayed at some museum!

tI has been said many times that the child's first acquaintance with the joys of music is at the Church or Sunday School. How can we expect the infant ear to be delicately attuned to musical sound, how can we hope that children will sing well, if they are dulled by custom to the sins of the accompanying instrument? How can children be incited by the allurements of a musical Heaven if the weekly noise before them is to be regarded as a sample of what is to be endured hereafter.

Sometime, somewhere, a Church committee will buy for Church use a first-class small Grand of Canadian make, well built and well encased. Then there will be an Ecclesiastical Trial for Heresy a outrance. Either that or some of the music lovers in the congregation will drop dead.

MUSIC FOR CHILDREN.

Should Be of the Best and By Best Teachers.

Not only should you seek the best music for your children, but you should give them the best teachers—always the best teachers possible. If you want your children to love poetry you do not give them some poor little verse, some bit of popular doggerel, but you turn back to the masters—to Tennyson, Keats, Shakespeare, Burns, Longfellow, Browning; you give them the wealth of the world. You must do the same with music. You must have them taught by one who knows and loves music, who can win a response from them, who can direct and encourage them. The best music in the world is of no avail for children with a poor teacher. Seek good music in simple form, and music lovers as instructors.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR SCOTCH.

Music has had a good many attributes laid at its door. It has been heralded as an inspiration, the speech of the soul, the language of all nations. But only just recently when the "dry wave" has swept over such a wide and lengthy area does the suggestion come that music is a stimulant. And that suggestion comes from Scotland too. In Glasgow the Abstainers' Union has been in the habit of giving a series of musical concerts. A waggish Scot says that the organization does not preach total abstinence through music, but as a healthy stimulant music makes other stimulants superfluous. In Canada, music and Scotch never go together—now. The former is a substitute for the latter.

FAMOUS VIOLINIST

A PARISIAN ORGANIST.

Organists interested in the French School of organ playing had a treat in Montreal recently. M. Joseph Bonnet who is regarded as one of the greatest organists of Paris played a brilliant recital in the Church of the Holy Name, Maisonneuve. M. Bonnet has had a successful tour during the season just closed, and was induced to lengthen it by a few days in order to meet some of the leading organists of French Montreal. He is regarded in Paris as the legitimate successor of Alexandre Guilmant who was his principal teacher. Born in 1884, he was a church organist at the age of fourteen in Bordeaux. Later going to the Conservatoire of Paris he had a brilliant career and was the winner in an open competition for the post of organist of the Church of St. Eustache, all the competitors being first-prizemen of the Conservatoire. He succeeded Guilmant as concert organist of that institution. So far M. Bonnet's success has been mainly as an interpreter.

His compositions have not yet had the popularity of those of his old master, or of Lefebure-Wely. For a man only 33 years of age he has done great things.

The F. W. Woolworth Co's 5 10 and 15 cent stores are said by a writer in Leslie's Weekly to have sold five million talking machines records during 1916.

MUSICAL PROGRESS.

Headquarters Once Where Battle-Front Now Is.

Few persons perhaps are aware when they read of war operations along the Meuse and around the towns of Flanders that once that very district was the centre of the world's musical progress. In the early centuries even when secular song was in somewhat widespread use, the thought and art of the day got its stimulus and guidance from the church, as the social life of the day was built up around their ecclesiastical observances. But beginning with the fifteenth century progress was made along the line of the secular and sacred songs reacting upon each other. The headquarters of this progress was none other than the district north of the Seine in France and west of the Meuse, the provinces of Flanders and Brabant with part of Burgundy.

Through commerce the people of these districts prospered and became wealthy. They began to display a civic and national spirit as do modern nations. Naturally music received more attention as part of their general enterprise. We are told in Pratt's History of Music that at this period music was being substantially developed in England and Northern Italy too but not on the same scala as it was in the Netherlands. The Netherland school of sacred composition took its rise in some way from song in Northern France. At this period came the transition from the later developments of secular solo minstrel-song to the polyphonic mass through the chanson, a secular piece in which a central melody or air was enriched by one to three other voice parts so as to make a rude part-song. The composer's object was not to produce a true chord-sequence for that involved more harmonic knowledge than the age possessed, but simply to match together two or three melodies as such. The foundation melody selected from the stock of existing songs was usually given to a middle voice, afterwards known as the tenor, and the added voices were the bass below, and the alto and soprano above. This gave a four-part effect.

With this glimpse into the past, to those hundreds of Canadians who take part in any kind of choral work, there will be a new interest in the district between the Seine and the Meuse.

Committee Will Work For Technical Schools

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Education Committees of the Greater Peterborough Association was held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday evening, June 6th, with Dr. M. A. Morrison in the chair. Some interesting addresses were given by the Chairman, Mr. A. McWat, Dr. McNulty, Dr. Neal and others. The chief topic of discussion was as to the prospects of securing industrial and technical schools for the City of Peterborough, and some valuable information and statistics were submitted by Mr. Mowat, who as public school inspector takes a deep interest in this subject.

At the close of the discussion, the chairman, at the request of the Committee, instructed the secretary to notify the chairman of the school board that this committee was prepared to support him in any way possible to secure these ends.

It was moved by Dr. Neal, seconded by Mr. Mowat and carried, that the chairman appoint a sub-committee to outline the work to be undertaken. This sub-committee was appointed as follows: Dr. McNulty, chairman, Dr. Morrison, Dr. Neal, Lieut.-Col. Walker, and O. H. Pennefather.

DEPUTATION TO

this middle course. He advised going to Mr. Cochrane direct and not going to the Premier over the minister's head as the latter was the man who would put the project through the quickest.

Mayor Duffus stated a swing was all that the deputation asked for at Ottawa.

Mr. Hall was very strong for the opening of the bridge but disliked to see the minister overridden.

Mayor Duffus thought that the Railway Board should be asked to force the matter.

City Clerk Armstrong stated that the G.T.R. a year ago had submitted their plans to the railway board and they were not approved of and new plans ordered prepared which has never been done. The town of Campbellford was the objectors to the railway's plans. If the elevation is not started this year, it will not be completed next year.

Reeve Fowlds to Help.

Reeve Fowlds of Hastings was anxious to see the canal opened to Lake Ontario and was ready to assist either by a deputation or otherwise. He had noticed that Mr. Cochrane was not inclined to force matters, and felt that some action should be taken. He did not understand that the Minister was opposed to the removal of the bridge.

Mr. Burnham Should Know.

Mayor Kylie of Lindsay thought it was reasonable to conclude that Mr. Cochrane was at fault. Mr. Burnham was on the ground and should know. The town of Lindsay was ready and willing to assist the city of Peterborough in obtaining the opening of the canal in every way possible. He thought it was up to the government to see that the obstruction to the canal was removed. Why should the people not enjoy the expenditure of seven or eight million dollars at a cost of a few thousands? He would go so far as to sanction the government lending the G.T.R. the money to put the bridge in.

Deputation Decided on.

Telegram From Mr. Burnham.

Mayor Duffus read a telegram from Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., which was as follows: "Please tell the meeting that Cochrane's extraordinary and unexplained conduct re Campbellford bridge has no support from the rest of the Government and that a lively deputation from the Trent Valley to the Premier would soon bring Cochrane to reason and help the canal materially."

It was then moved by Mr. Hall and seconded by Mr. W. H. Bradburn that a deputation from all the municipalities wait on the Minister of Railways and Canals and urge upon him the removal of the obstruction of the canal at Campbellford.

This carried

Mr. J. J. Turner thought that a permanent organization with a "Complete the Canal" as its slogan should be formed. He was very anxious to see the waterway opened to Lake Ontario.

All the municipalities will be written to and asked to send delegates on a date to be agreed on.

Warden McTeer of Fenlon Falls sent regrets at not being able to be present owinp to the meeting of the County Council.

FIGHTING THE FOOD SHORTAGE

New Industries From Vegetable Fats

C P. R. Working Out A Solution

THE seriousness of the food situation throughout the world has been frequently emphasized by the press and no one disputes the fact that the world seems steadily marching toward a period of starvation. Efforts are being made in all civilized countries along different lines to avert such a disaster and to devise means of overcoming a situation created by the war

There have been food crisis in nearly every great war, and these have frequently given rise to new processes of sufficient merit to be continued in peace times, as for example, the manufacture of sugar from sugar beets, and the substitution of vegetable for animal fats as in oleomargarine

Oleomargarine has been under discussion in Canada for some time and needs no further comment, except perhaps to point out that under the present regulations prohibiting the manufacture of this material there are undoubtedly many in the Dominion who are not getting the fats requisite for the proper maintenance of the body, because they are unable to purchase this fat at the present price of butter In many countries where oleomargarine has been used for years a larger and ever larger percentage of vegetable fat is being substituted for the animal fat, and the day seems not far distant when hydrogenated vegetable oils may entirely replace animal fats for certain food purposes

Arthur D. Little Limited the organization of analytical chemists which on the instigation of Lord Shaughnessy has been making an exhaustive study of Canadian natural resources have been investigating the utilization of vegetable fat in materials which have proven satisfactory substitutes for cream for all purposes excepting butter making and where whipped cream is required. The material is especially adapted to the manufacture of ice cream and can be produced much cheaper than cow's cream, a quantity of which through the use of such a substitute may be made available for other food purposes

Dry milk, while a very important article of commerce, is known chiefly to bakers, hotels and ice cream manufacturers A good product is now being manufactured in Ontario but recognizing the advisability of establishing drying plants in smaller units and of a size that could be supported by the local community, work is being carried on with this requirement in mind. The installation of such plants would make it possible for dairymen to find a constant market, although they might be located at a distance so great from large centres of population as to make it impossible to sell liquid milk. For example, in Alberta the dairy industry is growing and would undoubtedly develop to a wonderful extent if drying plants requiring small amounts of capital could be established

The same is true of vegetables, and mixed farming would be encouraged in the west if the farmer had a home market for his produce Milk is 85% water, and many vegetables run as high or even higher in their moisture content. They are perishable, require careful handling and a large portion of the crop is composed of sizes too small to market There are objections to the drying processes now employed and it is important to perfect a method of drying vegetables and yet leave them fresh Such material when placed in warm water soon absorbs the moisture which has been removed and the vegetables when cooked in the water in which they have been placed give the same results as do fresh vegetables. The drying process must leave the vegetable with its natural color and with all the flavor with which it comes from the garden. The dried product must not be cooked or discolored, and should provide the housewife with a cleaned, peeled, ready-prepared material which will keep without refrigeration or special storage and enable her to avoid all the losses which accompany the use of most fresh material.

The utilization of that portion of fruits which is considered below standard and therefore unprofitable to ship, is another problem which is receiving the consideration of Arthur D. Little, Limited For example a considerable part of every apple crop falls into such classifications as windfalls, seconds and thirds, poorly formed or poorly colored fruit, and as this proportion of the crop increases the selling price of the standard apple also increases. Methods for preparing a high grade sweet cider are under consideration, as well as the production of other apple products to utilise the portion of the crop considered unsaleable or inferior by fruit dealers.

(1) Drying machine and constant level feed tank showing milk in sheet.
(2) Packing Department—Filling cans in foreground and heap of powdered dried milk.

The desirability of increasing the food content of farm produce is obvious. It may be pointed out that the starch content of potatoes grown in Germany is much higher than that of potatoes on this continent, twice as high in fact The cultivation of certain hybrids producing larger and better varieties of berries etc, should also be encouraged and while this phase of the problem scarcely comes within the province of the chemist, it is under consideration as a part of the general study

Encouraging progress has been made in the various fields outlined above and definite announcements are expected in the near future.

RENTING THEIR COFFINS

Poor in Mexico use Municipal Coffin Many Times

In Mexico many of the poor rent, instead of buy, coffins, and for those who are not even able to pay rental, the municipal authorities supply a casket which is used again and again for such purposes. These publicly owned coffins are merely roughly made boxes with handles at either end. A common practice is for a sturdy, and generally very ragged, peon to carry the burden strapped to his back. On arriving at the burial ground the body is rolled in straw and deposited in a grave, whereupon the wooden box is carried back to the city and held in readiness for the next occasion.

Origin of "A-1"

Few people when they say of an article of excellent quality that it is A number one, know the origin of the phrase which they are using It is a classification of wooden ships used by Lloyd's Maritime Insurance association. The letter stands for the construction, the number for the equipment of the vessel, the whole indicating that the ship is in all respects seaworthy.

Giant Monkey-Bread Tree

In tropical Africa and the East Indies grows the monkey-bread tree, which is of excessive thickness, measuring often 20 or 30 feet, while its branches are sometimes 60 or 70 feet in circumference. The spreading top of the tree may be 120 or 150 feet across.

POOR BLOOD AND WEAK NERVES

(By F. Raymond Ward, M. D.)

Lack of strength is about the first symptom of violation of the laws of health. There come nervousness, unsteady hands and limbs, skin eruptions, dizziness, sleeplessness, heart palpitation, and with the feeling that the life blood is being sapped comes complete prostration. In this condition the sufferer is indifferent to all things—and looks upon life with a gloomy, melancholic view.

It is given as a statistical fact that seven out of every ten people in the United States are suffering from nerve exhaustion, and of this number less than half realize it. They know that they have gloomy thoughts, a depression of mind, an impaired memory, dizziness and headache, wakeful nights and spells of extreme exhaustion, but they attribute it to any other cause but the right one. They feel languid, irritable and restless, the why and wherefore of which they cannot explain. They are suffering from nerve exhaustion, a condition which is undoubtedly the means of causing more misery and crushing more hopes than any other trouble that flesh is heir to.

Nervous exhaustion will not cure itself. The sufferer who thinks that nature alone will bring about a restoration of health is simply deluded by a false hope. He will realise that (if the power of realizing is left him), when he becomes a hopeless victim to one of the many diseases which follow in its path.

Those suffering from nerve exhaustion or loss of energy as a result of overwork, mental worry or violation of nature's laws are quickly restored to sound health by Dr. Ward's special treatments. Dr. Ward's office is located at 79 Niagara Square, Buffalo, N. Y., which is right opposite the McKinley Monument. His office hours are Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. Sundays 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. Consultation and examination is always without charge.

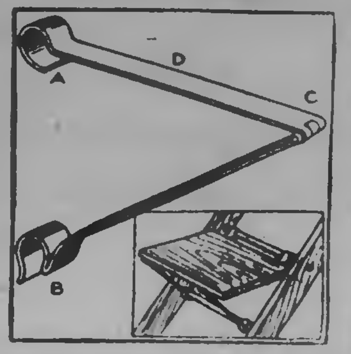
HOW HOUSES EXPLODE

Western Tornadoes Fling Buildings Bodily into the Air

The most remarkable phenomenon connected with tornadoes (such as have devastated towns in the middle West) is the explosion of houses, which literally burst, scattering their fragments in all directions. Sometimes substantial dwellings are carried high into the air and then explode. It is now understood that this is due to the fact that the "funnel cloud" (revolving at a rate of at least 500 miles an hour) has a vacuum inside. Thus it sucks up everything in its path, even emptying wells. It sucks all the air from around a house over which it passes, and the house (a vacuum being thus created outside of it) promptly explodes, owing to the pressure of the air, at thirty pounds to the square inch, from within. The house, in a word, is transformed into a bomb.

Folding Bracket for a Ladder



Pails, brushes, or other tools and materials used in working from a ladder, may be supported conveniently on folding brackets like those shown in the sketch. They are hooked to adjoining rungs and a board is fastened across them. When not in use they are folded out of the way, or removed from the ladder. They are made by forming a hinge joint in two strips of iron, as at C. The upper end A and the lower end B are curved to fit the rung without slipping off easily. The upper strip D is drilled to provide a fastening for the shelf.—Popular Mechanics.

WATCH ON CITY'S MILK

No Half-Measures When Inspectors Find Dangerous Practice

"Dump that milk out!"

"But—"

"Don't argue. Out with it!" And cut it went, right into the sewer—a canful of the cleanest-looking milk that ever came to the dairy—all because the farmer had stopped a leak in the can by rubbing soap over it. Toronto's milk inspectors object to soap when served in that connection. The farmer was the loser.

This is only one illustration of the precautions taken and the penalties imposed by the Department of Public Health to ensure a pure milk supply for a big city. From dairy farm to doorstep the milk is subject to official supervision and control; and the man who would "slip something across" on the department needs to be smarter than a politician. Not even the wicked little disease germs can get through any more; they are cooked to death in the pasteurizing plants.

Even before the milk leaves the cow the department has something to say about it. Twice a year, under the authority of the Ontario Milk Act of 1911, its veterinary inspectors (there are four of them) visit the dairy farms supplying Toronto. They test the herds for tuberculosis; observe the general cleanliness or otherwise of herds, stables, milking utensils, and the milkers themselves; point out sometimes enforce, necessary improvements; and report to the laboratories in Toronto. In the laboratories a card index record of every farm is kept, on which is noted the condition of that farm at each inspection. If it fails to conform to the standard its milk supply is excluded from the city.

NEEDED MISSING WORDS

Languages Have Roundabout Ways of Saying Things

It is a strange peculiarity of almost every language that there are certain words which are entirely missing in it, so to speak, and which have to be indicated by roundabout methods. The French, for example, have no verb "to stand," nor can they speak of "kicking" anyone. They have to say that So-and-so "gives a blow with his foot." "Home, Sweet Home" is quite untranslatable into French, for they have no word for "home," or for "comfort" either, while the terms "upstairs" and "downstairs" are also unknown.

The Italians are a proud race, and it is, perhaps, characteristic of them that they should have no word for "humility." But the Hindoos should not be judged by the fact that their language has no equivalent for "friend." As for the Germans, they employ some very comic, roundabout ways of expressing objects. A thimble they call a finger hat," and a grasshopper a "hay horse." A glove is a "hand shoe," while they call poultry "feather cattle." Oxygen and hydrogen they refer to in very general terms as "sour stuff" and "water stuff."

NEEDS OF WEST INDIES

British Colonies There Might Unite With Canada

Says a correspondent discussing the situation of the British West Indies: There is the duplication in each colony of paraphernalia of Government, Governors, Colonial Secretaries, chief justices, auditor-generals, commandants, attorney-generals, solicitor-generals are simply jostling one another in the West Indies. The only way out of this is some form of federation, either to form a British West Indian Island province, a distinct entity within the Empire, as is New Zealand or South Africa, or to have such a federation attached to the Canadian Dominion administratively. It should reduce the cost of administration, and increase its efficiency.

Another need of the present and future in the British West Indies is the establishment within their borders of technical training centres so well equipped that they can turn out men, and women too, fitted to work in up-to-date agriculture and industry. Communal creation and up-growth is a slow thing, and a thing of stages.

HAS HAD NO GUESTS, NO NEED FOR FIRE ESCAPES

The Ontario License Board has received a communication from one of its inspectors, asking advice as to what action he should take in regard to a hotel in his district that is not equipped with ropes in all bedrooms as a means of escape in case of fire. The hotel in question is located in a former Canada Temperance Act district. The inspector asks if he should force the hotelkeeper to go to the expense of installing these ropes. He says the hotelman objects to doing so basing his objections on the fact that he has not had a guest stay over night since the Ontario Temperance Act came into force on September 16th last.

The Board will take the matter under consideration.

MICHAEL CASEY FROM DOURO A PATIENT OF LUMP REMOVER

Dr. Gerard Douglas Allowed to go on Suspended Sentence at Lindsay After Promising to Return Money.

Mr. Michael Casey, of Douro, arrived in Lindsay on Tuesday last and forthwith proceeded to hunt up Chief Short. It appears that Mr. Casey was a patient of Douglas Hyde or Douglas, the "lump" remover, and reading in the press that the man was in Lindsay jail on the charge of obtaining money by fraudulent purposes, he lost no time in reaching Lindsay. The accused treated Mr. Casey for a lump near one of his shoulder blades, said lump being removed, for which $100 was charged.

The Chief took Mr. Casey to the county jail, where he identified the accused as the man who treated him; Douglas agreed to give Mr. Casey his money back (there being some $285.00 in his grip) but the authorities have charge of this.

In conversation with the Chief Mr. Casey said he had no lump on his back, but the accused seemed to have such an influence over him that he consented to the treatemnt. The remedy used, the accused contends, cost $700 an ounce.

A resident of Emily township named McConnell has also informed the Chief that he, too, was a patient of Douglas Hyde, having had a lump removed, paying the man a tidy sum of money for the treatment.

On Suspended Sentence.

Dr. Gerard Douglas, who has been relieving different parties of lumps and incidentally large sums of money in this district, came up for trial yesterday morning before County Police Magistrate Moore. He was allowed to go on suspended sentence on promising to make full restitution, paying all costs and keeping out of the province.

Police Magistrate Moore gave the prisoner a severe lecture before he was allowed to go.

County Crown Attorney Stinson, who had been looking into the accused's record, read letters from the mayor and postmaster of Queyon, Quebec, where he resided. These letters gave him a good record. It appears that he was a qualified doctor in the old country and took the name Haig because the family estate of that name had recently passed into his hands, and in order to hold it, he had to adopt the name. He claimed to be a cousin of Gen. Haig, commander-in-chief of the British forces on the western front.

The fee which the Fenlon man paid for treatment as well as Michael Casey's contribution of $100.00 were paid over by the accused.

THE BEST IS NONE

day's demonstration by the La France combined hose and pumping engine was a revelation which converted more than one back to the original proposition, and won the endorsation of those manufacturers who saw the test. One leading citizen remarked, "it is the one thing needed," but Mr. Denham of the Quaker Oats replied, "We need two of them." In any event the general concensus of opinion now is that the American La France combination motor hose truck and pumping engine should oust "puffing billy" from its comfortable quarters in the fire hall and give our city an auxiliary machine which is a brigade of no small pretensions in itself, and which can be used on hydrants to four-fold advantage. As to a chemical and hose combination, perhaps 90 out of a hundred fires in factories and business houses are extinguished by chemicals carried on the premises, and in installing a new fire-fighting apparatus it is a machine which will throw the necessary weight of water on a fire beyond control by chemicals which is in the greater demand. And such an engine was here last Saturday, and such a combination seems to meet with popular approval. Anyway a chemical outfit can be added to the apparatus quite readily, and at a reasonable cost.

Second To None.

The American-La-France Fire Engine Co. has been in business for years and enjoy an enviable reputation throughout Canada and the States, where thousands of their combinations are in service. They demonstrated here by special request. They know fire engine construction from A to Z and a La France machine is one built entirely by the La France people, and not a conglomeration of parts of different makes. The huge list of municipalities using their combination hose truck and pumping engine points to the conclusion that a Greater Peterborough cannot go astray in accepting the common verdict that a "La France" is in keeping with safety first and the "greater" measure of fire protection which our manufacturers and citizens in general are entitled to.

AGREEMENT REACHED FOR WAGES INCREASE

Following negotiations between representatives of the Federated Trades and the C.P.R. Co the company's locomotive merchants and car mechanics from Vancouver to St. John N.B., will receive an increase of approximately twenty per cent. over their present wages. The agreement will affect about 15,000 men. They had asked for an increase of approximately thirty per cent.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

There was very little of anything doing on the market this week. A few loads of hay were offered, and the sellers were asking $17.00 a ton for it. A man from Indian River had a load of mill edgings on sale. He only asked $8.00 for the load of fuel.

There was no change in the hog market, but the best authorities look still for lower prices owing to the lack of shipping space.

There is a very good demand for all kinds of choice butcher cattle, but the drovers say that there will be a scarcity until after the first grass fed cattle are on the market.

The egg market is weaker, and a fall of about four cents is noted from the Montreal market.

HORSES

TORONTO, June 6.—At the initial British Army horse inspection at the Union Stock Yards last week, about forty-five remounts were secured out of about double that number submitted for inspection. On Monday of this week, there were fully 160 horses for the British inspecting officers to examine. The officials of the exchange find that fully fifty per cent. of the horses are rejected. The British Army is after artillery horses solely, paying $190 each. The rejects are being disposed of at private sales on Tuesday and Wednesday at prices ranging from $110 to $160. The most of these are below their market value. At an inspection in London last week about forty horses were obtained and a subsequent inspection was held at Peterboro.

The commercial horse trade is fair. There was a steady call for express horses at $190 to $215 each. Heavy waggon horses were taken at $135 to $170. Light delivery horses were also wanted. Little call was experienced for drivers. A ready market was found for ponies at prices between $60 and $125.

Shipments to outside points included two loads of mixed horses for farm purposes at $140 to $200 destined for Montreal and the city of Quebec. Another load of dealers' horses was sent to the West. These were mixed farm blocks a $115 to $140.

BETTER STEEL HELMETS

Describing the British steel helmet, Dr. C. W. Saleeby says that instead of the straight front of the French helmet it has a sloping front which will deflect even machine gun and rifle bullets. Protection against shock is secured by an inside cap, all round which are hollow rubber studs, and between every two studs the air gets in, thus obviating any need for a ventilation hole at the top, as in the French helmet, which is a weakness. "There is going to be attached to this helmet," continues Dr. Saleeby, "something of which I cannot tell you anything, but which will avert nine out of ten cases of blindness.

"I have got my way," Dr. Saleeby further says, "about heart armor for our soldiers. The military authorities have consented to try whether something cannot be devised, and we have now been officially informed they are going to do it. Perfectly wonderful things in the way of shields have been done already with very simple means. Every soldier ought to have a body shield. Already our head cases are disappearing from the hospitals. That is the helmet. I hope we may be able to say the same in regard to shrapnel wounds to the chest and upper part of the abdomen."

WAR OF ALL THE RACES

General Smuts in German East Africa had three divisions under his command—two from South Africa and a third, including the Indian and British contingents—altogether a "heterogenous collection," says he, "including Dutch, Bengalis, Baluchis, Hasmiris, Pathians, Punjabis, Cape Boys (South African half-breeds), East African natives, West Indian negroes and Baganda (natives of Uganda)." There were also British bluejackets operating along the coast, an armored motor battery, and Portuguese and Belgian forces.

PAYS TO HELP WORKERS

Munitions Department Installed a System of Guardians

An English factory expert writes: Under the Welfare Department of the Ministry of Munitions the hit-and-miss method of management has given place to organized control. Understanding women have been appointed whose duty it is, besides seeing that all physical conditions are adequate: Tactfully to supervise the individual so that she cares for her own health. To make sure that she takes advantage of the wise provisions to protect her from accident in the shape of suitable clothing and head covering. To see that messrooms are provided and properly managed.

Many other important details belong to her work which could not possibly be dealt with by the shops manager or foreman. Carried out, however, in co-operation with these practical people, they make for greater efficiency. From eight years' experience in a firm of nearly 4,000 people I have abundant proof that, viewed from the lowest standpoint, to study one's co-workers of all grades pays.

In fact, I am convinced that the phenomenal success of the house of business with which I am associated is mainly due to the careful way in which its chief has studied the welfare of his whole staff. This has engendered loyalty to the house, enthusiasm for their work, causing them to speak well of the man who employs them, and of the business for which they are working. Like a snowball, this permeates into the public from the 4,000 homes of the workers, and must be an advertising asset the value of which is incalculable.

The Brooklyn bar association refuses to admit women as members.

HOW BIG LEAGUE PITCHERS WILL SERVE THEIR COUNTRY

By Walter Johnson.
(Washington pitcher.)

I have no choice as to the capacity in which I could best serve my country. I suppose they'll elect me to toss a few bombs at the enemy if I am called to the colors. Anyway, I'm ready. It is up to Uncle Sam to decide where he can best use me.

By Babe Ruth.
(Red Sox pitcher.)

Like all Americans, I am thinking seriously of how I can serve best. Perhaps being a pitcher will put me in line for the grenade throwing. If that is where I am needed, that's where the old southpaw will bean a few.

By Nick Cullop
(New York pitcher.)

When I'm drafted into the army I reckon I'll go where I am told, do what I'm told and fight like hell. That'll keep me so busy, I guess, that I won't have time to worry about what branch of the service I'm best fitted for.

By Grover Cleveland Alexander
(Philadelphia pitcher)

The cavalry will be my choice if I am called to serve my country. I will be there when the call comes, no matter what job they give me. With cavalry probably in little use, the chances are that I will be an infantryman, and no doubt will be able to break a few grenades over the enemy's head. Bombing will be easy work for a pitcher, so I suppose they'll use me in that capacity.

By George Mogridge
(New York pitcher)

Never having had any military experience till this spring, when we began to drill under Sergt. Gibson's direction, I cannot say that my choice has been guided by understanding. Nevertheless, I would like to work into the artillery. I suppose that choice is an effort to continue the work I am doing now. Pitching requires a practical co-ordination of eye and hand. Artillery firing, I should think, would require the same sort of ability.

IN THE BASEBALL WORLD

Toronto is all "het up" over the prospect of getting big league baseball. The Washington franchise, Walter Johnston and all, is to be placed in some other city for the simple reason that the Senators have'nt been able to draw flies in the Yankee capital. There is talk of shifting to Brooklyn, if the National league will agree, but if Charley Ebberts holds out for an exorbitant rental of his ball park, Toronto is believed to be next in line. Baltimore folks, who have been clamoring for big league baseball for several years, say that they are entitled to the chance, but it is understood that Toronto is financed in preference to the Oriole's roost. None of the big league officials will say much regarding Toronto, but the Canadian city is conceded a royal chance to getting big league ball if Brooklyn's owners can't come to terms with the American league heads over the transferring of the Washington Club to Dodgerville.

Flight Lieut. Art Dissette, outside wing of the Parkdale O.R.F.U. club, has been killed in action. Details of his death have not yet been secured He enlisted soon after the outbreak of the war, and was one of the first Canadians entrusted with the British "Bullet," an airplane capable of a speed of over 100 miles an hur.

ECONOMY IN PAPER

It is not uncommon in an English shop to hear a customer say, "Never mind about wrapping that up in paper; I will take it as it is," and the paper economy will soon be as much a matter of course as the new practice of carrying all small parcels home. It is a great change, for good, strong brown paper has long been known in Great Britain and France, and always seemed typical of solid British methods, after the crackling yellow-brown wood pastes or gaudy tissues of some parts of the continent.

In Bulgaria, one of the poorer countries, where even cheap German wrapping paper is hardly known, parcels are carefully wrapped in a large square of printed cotton, called a bukhta. The bukhta is an institution. The bread is brought wrapped in check cotton; the shoemaker sends your boots home in a gay colored square; even the wedding presents for a bride are sent in a bukhta. It is returned to the sender by the messenger

GERMANY'S UNHOLY MISSION IN INDIA

Exposure of Abominable Methods by a Native Writer—Lies and Bribery —Why India Is Loyal

"The faith of India is the consummation of a belief, a trust, a hope engendered by long years of contact with the British nation. It is the result of a deep study of the history of other nations, the acceptance of a destiny to which of their own free will and reasoned argument the people of India deliberately resign themselves." These words—simple, conclusive, and straight-spoken—strike the keynote of "The Verdict of India," a pamphlet by Sir Mancherjee Bhownagree, K.C.I.E. In these fifty pages we have a brief yet succinct account of the zeal and the unscrupulous cunning with which Germany has endeavored to undermine India's loyalty and blacken British character ever since the outbreak of war, not to mention the more insidious pre-war activities that formed part of her vast scheme for peacefully penetrating the whole civilized world.

Hun "Literature"

Sir Mancherjee asserts that the Germans have left no stone unturned to inflame the minds of down-trodden Indians and rouse the indignation of neutral countries against England's gross misgovernment and maltreatment of millions of long-suffering Asiatics. With this end in view they have poured out a regular flood of official "literature" (save the mark!), handbills, and pamphlets. The titles of these precious productions speak for themselves: "India under the British Fist," "English Over-Lordship in India," and so forth.

They have made repeated efforts to suborn the frontier tribes, flattering them with hints of England's weakness and their own skill. They have waxed assiduous in their attentions to the Amir of Afghanistan, "whom perhaps (adds Sir Mancherjee) the Kaiser, in his contemptuous estimate of Oriental character and intelligence, thought to be green and gullible. He has had the Amir's reply long since, and let us hope he now knows better."

Why the Failure

They have sedulously stirred up the dregs of sedition and discontent to be found in every community, not excepting their own; nor was it for lack of secret encouragement, funds, and skilful organization that they failed signally in their attempt to engineer a serious rising against the British in India. Sir Michael O'Dwyer's full account of that hidden drama revealed that the conspirators were hampered chiefly by the vigilance of the Indian police and the large, passive loyalty of India's own people; those very people whom Germany—in the flaming language of exaggeration—depicts as down-trodden, starved and exploited by the great "robber State" which it is her sacred mission to destroy.

FALLEN HEROES' V.C.s.

Relatives Receive Them From the King's Hands

The King received at Buckingham Palace the following next of kin of ten war heroes and handed to them the Victoria Crosses won by their gallant dead: Mrs. Walford, for her husband, Captain G. N. Walford, who led an attack on Sedd-el-Bahr, in Gallipoli, and was killed in the moment of victory. Mrs. Wright, for her son, Captain T. Wright, who gained one of the earliest V.C.s in the war for gallantry at Mons. Mrs. Vallentin, for her son, Captain J. F. Vallentin, for bravery at Zillebeke in November, 1914.

Mr. John Liddell, for his son, Captain J. A. Liddell, who, though severely wounded, brought his damaged aeroplane back after it had dropped nearly 3,000 feet. Major Charles Turner, for his son, 2nd Lieutenant A. B. Turner, aged twenty-two, who led a bombing attack near Vermelles. Mr. William Williams, for his son, Seaman W. C. Williams, for gallantry during a landing when the ship River Clyde was run ashore. Mrs. Cornwell, mother of Jack Cornwell, the boy hero of H.M.S. Chester. Mr. Robert Drake, father of Corporal A. Drake, who gave his own life and saved his officer, near La Brique. Mrs. Barber, mother of Private E. Barber, who captured many of the enemy single handed. Mrs. Warner, mother of Private E. Warner, who entered a trench alone to prevent the enemy taking possession.

GROWING WITH CANADA

Enormous Expansion of Railway Company Reflects That of Dominion

If all the trackage over which the Canadian Pacific has control—that is, all the leased lines, or lines taken bodily over, or with running rights—be included in a grand total, the company operates to-day 20,000 miles of tracks. This fact alone would tell of the bigness of the corporation, which, thirty years ago, issued its first annual statement on a sheet of note paper. The company owns 100,000 miles of telegraph; 10,000,000 acres of unsold lands, worth $200,000,000; and controls shipping to the extent of 400,000 tons. One of the notable features of the great corporation is, that it takes account of so many things, which, at the first blush, might not seem to be related to railway transportation. The company milks its own cows, and makes its own soap, it bakes its own bread; and it grows its own potatoes.

Jimmy Wilde, the flyweight boxing champion, who was ordered to join the army gymnastic staff at Aldershot, was given leave to appeal by the Rhondda Recruiting Tribunal, as he had not done so within the prescribed period. NEW PROCESS AT, CORDOVA MINE

TO BE USED WHEN PLANT RECENTLY BURNED IS REBUILT.

A recent visitor to the gold mines at Cordova reports that rapid progress is being made in re building the works there which were recently destroyed by fire, and that when completed a new process will be installed for treating the ore. Work underground is also being vigorously pushed forward preparatory to increasing the output when the mill is in readiness. A cross cut extending two thousand feet from No. 1 to No. 3 shaft is being blasted out which will greatly facilitate the handling of the ore. There are about 60 men engaged at present in two shifts, and this number will be increased as the work progresses. The superintendent, Mr. P. Kirkegaard, is a thorough mining man whose knowledge of the future possibilities of the claim, combined with an optimistic and progressive spirit has not altered his faith in the hidden treasure of Cordova, notwithstanding the tremendous loss sustained by the recent fire which completely wiped out the buildings, and it is generally believed by those in close touch with the richness of the mine, that his efforts will be amply rewarded.

AN ANGLER'S ELYSIUM.

The fishing at Algonquin Park this year has been better than for some years. Splendid catches of speckled trout and salmon trout are of daily occurrence. A delightful place to stop is "The Highland Inn" on the shores of Cache Lake, and dozens of lakes filled with the gamiest of the finny tribe are within easy distance of the Inn. HUNS PRAISE BRITISH GUNNERS

BRITISH LOSSES LIGHT IN BIG DRIVE OF YESTERDAY TRIUMPH WAS COMPLETE

Over Six Thousand Prisoners Taken and Captured Officers Praise Work of British Troops---Enemy's Artillery Has no Chance Against Guns of Allies.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 8. — British losses in yesterday's attack in Belgium were light, according to the official announcement issued here today. The statement says the battle became a gauge of the ability of the Germans to stop th British ac[illegible] under conditions as favorable to them as any army can ever hope for, with every advantage of ground and preparation, and with the knowledge that the attack was impending.

NEARLY 6,000 HUN PRISONERS.

Up to last night, 5,650 prisoners had been counted, and more came in to the colection stations early today, bringing the total to well over six thousand, with many more yet to come. Two cmparatively large blocke of Germans overlooked in the first rush forward have been surrounded in a little wood near the northern flank of the ten-mile attacking front and in an oxygen trench down towards the southern flank of this line. The "mopping up" troops were expected to deal with these Germans during the day.

GERMAN OFFICERS PRAISE BRITISH.

Of the more than one hundred officers taken, many are artillery men. All the latter said the British fire of the last seven days had destroyed scores of German guns. In some instances all four guns in the German batteries were damaged, while in other cases three or four guns were lost. The work of the British flying corps in directing the shooting is beyond all praise. The German officers said they felt absolutely helpless when the airplanes came overhead and the British batteries began firing under their observation and direction.

The German losses on their counter-attacks were terrible. The full depth of the British attack was five thousand yards. Three counter-attacks by the Germans, which were not delivered with great force, were broken up last night.

BATTERIES CAPTURED INTACT.

The number of prisoners reaching the collecting station since the beginning of yesterday's drive in Belgium is now more than six thousand, and more are coming in. Several German batteries were captured intact, but no estimate of the total number of guns taken has as yet been made Prisoners say that scores of German guns were destroyed during the bombardment.

NAVAL BASE DISABLED.

Development of the photographic plates of the results of the recent bombardment of Ostend, taken from airplanes, show that Ostend will be crippled as a German base for weeks, if not permanently.

NEW FOOTBRIDGE TO BE NAMED FOR EX-ALD. EDGAR

Ald. McIntyre Proposes That This be Done in Honor of the Former Member of Council Who Worked for the Structure.

The footbridge across the C.P.R. structure over the Otonabee River is all but completed and throngs of citizens are passing over it daily although the barriers have not been removed and it is not yet formally opened to the public. All that is now lacking is the completion of the railing which will be erected along the water side of the structure. The new bridge is four feet wide. On the Ashburnham side it is connected with the city sidewalks by a well built cinder path running through the Burnham estate, and winding up at the handsome residence of Ex-Ald. Evans.

This footbridge has been built according to plans drawn up by City Engineer Parsons and approved by the Railway Company. The agitation for it was begun some years ago by Ex-Ald. Edgar who realized its necessity in the interests of his constituents in the South Ward as well as the residents of Ashburnham. There was no means of direct communication between these two sections of the city before the bridge was put up. Ex-Ald. Edgar never wearried in his campaign and he was among the first residents of the city to cross the bridge when the planking was laid.

Ald. McIntyre, with the generosity which has distinguished his municipal career and with his usual disposition to recognize faithful service, no matter by whom rendered, has suggested that the new thoroughfare across the river be officially named the Edgar footbridge, in honor of the former official whose energy is responsible for its construction. This matter is to be brought up in Council by Ald. McIntyre.

Ex-Ald. Evans, too, is entitled to the thanks of the citizens for his efforts on behalf of the footbridge. When everything was ready for its construction it was found that there was no money in the treasury to defray the cost. Ex-Ald. Evans last year was chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee and his economical administration resulted in a surplus which was used in building the bridge. It seems like the irony of fate that the two aldermen who were most prominently identified with this public work were both defeated at the last municipal election, that, too, by the residents of the wards most benefitted by the improvement. Verily the way of the civic servant is hard, the gratitude of the people deficient and their memory short.

LIBERALS WIN OUT IN ALBERTA

MAJORITY OF PREMIER SIFTON WILL BE AS LARGE AS EVER.

EDMONTON, Alta., June 8.—Results so far available indicate the return of the Sifton Government by a majority of close to that in the last Legislature, where it was 18 to 38. In Edmonton three seats have gone Conservative. All Cabinet Ministers are elected, although Cross is running close in Edson, and only two polls to come from Beaver River, where Gariepy is leading.

Catholic Record For Referendum

Says a Division Along Racial Lines Must Be Obviated.

LONDON, Ont., June 8.—The Catholic Record, which has approved of selective conscription, says in this week's issue: "Partisan politicians and, to a more alarming degree, a partisan press, have suddenly discovered they have been playing with fire. Even after it had become evident that mutual understanding, goodwill and co-operation, if not coalition, had become imperative, the discussion of the crisis was carried on with an eye to party advantage, and a reckless disregard for what all profess to be an issue of paramount importance to Canada, and with equal disregard the serious moral and material effect it may have on the conduct of the war."

The Record adds: "If the people of Canada voted against conscription it would establish the fact that the people of this self-governing country refuse to give the Government a mandate for conscription. If conscription were carried Quebec would undoubtedly abide by the result In either case the division on racial lines which menaces the peace and unity of the Dominion would be obviated."

It is as difficult to start the average man talking about himself as it is to stop him after he gets started.

AMERICAN ARMY LEADER IS NOW IN WAR ZONE

General Pershing and Party Reached England This Morning.

GIVEN A WARM RECEPTION

French Success Continues and Berlin Explains Retreat.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT.

PARIS, June 9.—Heavy fighting continued throughout the night below St. Quentin, the war office announces. German infantry attacks between St. Quentin and LaFere were checked by French fire. The French positions were bombarded with especial violence before the infantry attack. Severe encounters occured at various other points on the front. The French took prisoners in raids on the Somme front.

Berlin Explains.

BERLIN, June 8.—The German troops on the Belgian front have retired from the Salient protruding westward to a prepared "nerve" position between the Canal bend north of Hallebeke and the Douve basin two kilometres west of Warneton, says official statement issued today by the army headquarters staff.

UNION CABINET YET POSSIBLE

MAY BE FORMED ON LINES REJECTED BY SIR WILFRID.

OTTAWA, June 8. — That Sir Wilfrid Laurier's rejection of Sir Robert Borden's proposal for coalition will not mean the abandonment of the idea of reconstructing the Ministry is agreed here, and it is suggested that such reconstruction is now under consideration and will not be long delayed. The report was current today that negotiations were already in progress looking to the inclusion in the cabinet of a number of Liberals who favor the policy of compulsory military service

It was even said, with what truth could not be ascertained, that a union cabinet might be formed on the same lines and the same terms as those laid before Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

In the ministerial session, seven young men were recommended for reception into full connection. Two candidates for the ministry were received on probation.

Albert College Endowment Secured.

A very encouraging report came from the President of Albert College, Belleville, Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker. He had already secured the $100,000 endowment sought for Albert College. Prospects are bright for Albert's future, as the Conference heartily endorses the proposals for enlargement presented by the chairman of the Laymen's Association, including larger grounds, better buildings and greater service. The introduction of expert lecturers on agriculture has brought this institution into increasing favor with the farming world.

ENTIRE CITY WIPED OUT BY EARTHQUAKE; THOUSANDS REPORTED DEAD IN RUINS

Capital of San Salvador Victim of Appalling Catastraphe---Neighboring Towns Also Destroyed---Communications With Wrecked Communities Cut Off.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

SAN JUAN DE SUR, Nicaragua, June 8. — San Salvador, the capital of the republic of that name, with a population of more than sixty thousand, has been totally destroyed, according to a despatch from San Miguel. No details as to the manner in which the catastrophe occurred have been received, but it is presumed to have been the result of an earthquake or volcanic eruption.

Another despatch from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, says that in addition to the wiping out of San Salvador, the towns of Quezaltipeque, Nejapa, Suchichoto, Paisnal, Armenios and Mejicanos also were destroyed. Mejicanos was a suburb of San Salvador. At 9:50 this morning there was still no communication between San Salvador and Tegucigalpa.

LICENSE BOARD CHECK TRAFFIC

WINNIPEG FIRM PROPOSED TO USE EXPRESS COMPANIES AS AGENTS.

The Ontario License Board has been advised of an attempt on the part of a Winnipeg liquor export warehouse firm to enlist the services of express agents in Ontario in an extension of the traffic on a commission basis, in violation of section 42 of the Ontario Temperance Act. The formal letter, containing the illegal proposal, has been brought to the attention of express companies operating in the far western sections of the province, and agents have been warned by the commissioners that prosecution will follow any attempt to engage in the traffic.

HUN LOSSES ARE OVER 1,300,000

LONDON, June 8 — The third article from Prof. Delmar, the Australian professor, who has just returned from Berlin, which appears in today's Times, is headed "War weary but still alive." The writer says the German has no idea of the actual losses on the field. The Deutsche Bank report placed the killed at the end of March, 1917, at 1,300,000. One official commented on this figure and said it was half a million too low.

Lloyd George Heard Mine Explosion

LONDON, June 8.—The tremendous explosions which opened the British attack on Wytschaete bend were heard by David Lloyd George, the British Premier, who was staying for the night at his residence, Walton Heath. The plans for the attack had been long maturing, and when the preparations were perfected the Premier was acquainted with the exact hour it was intended to open it.

Accordingly on retiring Wednesday night, Mr Lloyd George gave orders to be called at three o'clock this morning, on the chance of being able to hear the explosions. The Premier and other members of his household clearly heard the tremendous detonations, as also did persons at the Premier's official residence in London, who supposed they were the sounds of heavy guns, until later they learned from the despatches that they came from the explosion of mines.

From London to the Region where the British mines were exploded along the German front the distance ranges from 130 to 140 miles.

Failure to pay their poll tax caused James Fee and George McCulloch to be summoned before the police magistrate this morning The usual fine of $5.00 and $2.60 costs was imposed with the option of a term with free board at Castle Nesbitt.

There are still a lot of delinquents on the books of the tax collector in respect to poll tax, and if the parties interested do not get busy before the police officer gets them summoned a similar penalty is awaiting them.

DISGRACEFUL CONDITIONS FOUND BY CORONER'S JURY

When the Cause of Death of Mrs. Wright's Illegitimate Child is Investigated at Port Hope.

The inquest to enquire into the cause of the premature birth of the illegitimate infant of Mrs. Pearl Wright, of Bewdley, was held at Port Hope, Coroner McKinley presiding, Crown Attorney Kerr conducted the investigation and Mr. Armstrong, of Cobourg, appeared for Mrs. Wright. The premature birth aroused considerable suspicion in the neighborhood and it was alleged that it was brought on by illegal operation performed by an old woman in that vicinity. The remains of the infant were found buried in the backyard in a tin biscuit box. The babe was twelve inches in length, weighed one pound and its left arm was broken at the shoulder.

The evidence taken was of such a nature that it could not be published. It was shown however, that the premature birth was not caused by an illegal operation but was due to a kick from a cow which Mrs. Wright received the day previous. Wright, the husband of the defendant is in France fighting for King and Country and Mrs. Wright admitted she was living with Rueben Graham as man and wife. Graham also admitted burying the baby in a biscuit box in the back yard. In view of these statements we think it high time that the authorities should step in and clean up such a deplorable state of affairs.

The jury brought in the following verdict.

"We, the jury empanelled to enquire into the cause of the premature birth of the illegitimate infant of Mrs. Pearl Wright, on or about the 26th of May, 1917, at the house of Reuben Graham in the Township of Hamilton, from the evidence submitted are of the opinion that it was caused as a result of the mother having been kicked by a cow and we find no evidence of attempted abortion and we strongly condemn the disgraceful conditions under which the mother and Reuben Graham were living.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, JUNE 8, 1917

OFFICERS AND PRIVATES.

The true basis of a pension scheme in a democratic country like Canada should be equality; that is, that there should be really no distinction between officers and men. The spirit of the pension scheme as outlined in this memorandum which was served upon us all recently would indicate, in fact it specifically states, that the pension shall have no reference to the previous occupation of the soldier. Well, it should have no reference to the subsequent occupation of the soldier. I freely admit my appreciation of discipline and of that halo of distinction that must necessarily attach to an officer in authority over a large body of men, who, like a magistrate, or like you, Mr. Speaker, is more or less clothed in a distinction which is perhaps, though very fitting, nevertheless somewhat artificial. I could, therefore, understand that when a colonel or any such officer is in the actual course of his employment he should have a larger salary, a larger pay, a larger wage, than a soldier. But when he comes out of the fight he should not have a larger pay. I can find no reason why he should. There is no reason why, by reason of any distinction that he has acquired or any service that he has rendered or not rendered, he or any member of his family should have a larger pay than any other retired soldier.—From Capt. Burnham's speech in Parliament on the pension question.

THE ELECTION IN ALBERTA.

EARLY RETURNS from the election in Alberta indicate that the Liberals have again carried that province and that in the next Legislature the standing of the parties will be about the same as it was in the last, which consisted of thirty-eight Government supporters and eighteen members in Opposition. The Sifton Government has not won on its merits, but by means of manipulations and party strategy never before attempted in Canada.

In the first place, the election was forced on the people against the expressed wishes of leaders of both parties. There was no necessity for it, as the term of the Legislature did not expire until May of next year, and there was no burning issue before the people. Alberta has sent 35,000 soldiers to the front, and all these have been practically disenfranchised. Out of the fifty-eight seats in Alberta, elections were held yesterday in only forty-five, so that the verdict is not decisive.

The 35,000 Alberta soldiers did not vote yesterday. They constitute more than one-third of the voting population of Alberta, and by a peculiar arrangement they are to be given two seats in the Legislature, that is, more than one-third of the voters are given a representation of two in a House of fifty-eight members.

Is there any justice in such a plan as that? The man who fights for his country is given one vote in twenty-nine. In other words, twenty-nine soldiers' votes are required to offset one ballot placed in the box by the alien and the slacker who stays at home.

Twelve members of the Alberta Legislature, of whom seven were Liberals and five Conservatives, enlisted. It was decided to permit the return of these by acclamation, and a bill to that ffect was passed in the House. Then one of the gallant twelve lost his lift at the front, and the seat thus rendered vacant was seized upon by those who remained at home as their lawful prize.

The Alberta Government has been returned to power, but not by the votes of the best manhood, the soldiers of the province. The alien, who is opposed to military service, who is indifferent as to the outcome of the war, and the slacker, have stood behind Premier Sifton and his following. With one-third of the voters unheard from, no verdict registered at he polls can be accepted as a fair expression of public opinion.

The election yesterday was interesting as the first in which women voted for members of the Legislature. It seems that they divided along the old party lines, and made no united stand on any particular issue. Alberta has been dry since July 1st of last year, and the election yesterday must be interpreted as a victory for prohibition.

THE SITUATION AT OTTAWA.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER appears to lack a valid excuse, one that will be accepted by the public, for refusing to form a coalition government with Sir Robert Borden, just as he did when asked to co-operate in National Service. The Premier's proposition, as just disclosed, was eminently fair. It provided for a Cabinet of four Conservatives and as many Liberals, besides the Premier, the latter under such an arrangement to have the casting vote and the present Government the majority. After the formation of the proposed coalition government, an appeal was to be made to the country for a mandate to enforce conscription.

Nothing could be fairer than that, nothing more in keeping with the spirit of representative government in a crisis like the present. In an election held under such circumstances, partisan bitterness would be largely eliminated. The main issue would be the further and united prosecution of the war.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has turned down this proposal on the filmsy objection that the Premier announced conscription before he suggested coalition. Sir Wilfrid could not bring himself to the point of going back on his former stand with regard to compulsory service, and he did not care to risk antagonising the people of his own province. The fact is now made apparent that the Liberal party is opposed to the draft, and that the work of raising recruits is to be left to proceed under the voluntary system, which has been proved a failure for a year or more.

An election is impending. There is no way to avoid it, and, according to the announced program of the Government, the House is likely to be dissolved just as soon as the Conscription Bill to be introduced Monday is disposed of. The majority of the Conservatives will support the Government on this issue, as decided yesterday in caucus. There are Conservatives from Quebec who will bolt their party beyond a doubt, but there are Liberals from Ontario and the West who will support the Government that would put the selective draft in force.

When the inevitable appeal is made to the country, the Liberals, to judge from their present announcements, will go to the people assuring them that if returned to power they will make one last effort to raise the required number of men by the voluntary system. That failing, some measure of compulsion will be adopted.

The evil day is to be postponed if the Liberals are returned at the polls. The voluntary system has been tried to the limit and has failed. Nothing any government could do can revive it. It failed in England, and in United States so little was thought of it that it was abandoned at the outset. In the latter country, the leading democracy of the world, ten million men between the ages of 21 and 30 enrolled themselves during the first day of national registration. This should be convincing proof that even in a democracy compulsory military service is not unpopular.

Whatever may be the excuses pleaded by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, his object is apparent. He hopes to force the Government to go to the people on the chance that they will be defeated on the issue which the people of Quebec can be depended upon to oppose almost unanimously. Party advantage is what the leader of the Opposition is playing for. The fate of the Empire is with him and his following a secondary consideration.

ECONOMY IN CLOTHES.

OVER IN THE UNITED STATES the Council of National Defence, as a measure of war economy, has decreed what men shall and shall not wear in the present crisis. The New York Sun is inclined to be dubious. It says that everything is to be subordinated to rigid economy because of a worldwide shortage in wool. Frock coats are to be frowned upon. The long and flowing skirts that impart such awesome dignity to statesmen, preachers and other professionals, are to be curtailed. If statesmen cannot carry their dignity elsewhere than in their coat tails, they must appear like ordinary mortals.

Cuffs on trousers must go. They serve no useful purpose and use up wool. When they first appeared, persons of humorous tendencies esteemed it a witticism to inquire of their wearers, "Rainin' in Lunnon, old chap?" It hasn't stopped raining in London, but too many tons of wool are being buried or burned on battlefields for any to be wasted on needless decoration of garments of utilitarian purpose only.

The youth who would put on maturity with a tail coat, the man of years who would like to disguise them with the pleats and belt of a Norfolk, are to be balked of their innocent purpose. No flowing skirts! No patch pockets, pleats or belts! Such are the stern dicta of the Council of National Defence. The Americans cannot get as many submarines or aircraft as Germany, but they can give her a close race for the variety and numbers of things verboten.

Mere man will not protest much over the invasion of his right to dress as floesily as he chooses. Indeed, if the economists could apply their shears to the length of his tailor's bill as well as to that of his coat tails, he would life up his voice in praise. But wait until in the course of their campaign the reformers reach the raiment of womenkind!

When that breathless moment arrives, the arbiters of clothes will discover something, a task almost as gigantic and disheartening as the war itself.

HIGH EXPLOSION IN THE CELLAR

"It is not enough that we should grow our own corn and tomatoes, cabbages, and potatoes, squash cymlings and cantaloupe," declared the president of the ladies' guild, addressing a full meeting. "It is also important that we should take steps to preserve the vegetables that the garden produces in order to tide us through the long winter."

"When you start to can your vegetables," said the lady from Toronto when the time for discussion arrived, "you want to be careful what you're doing, for canning stuff is no easy matter."

"I have canned things myself. Once when my aunt was away from home on an extended visit my uncle sent for me to come out to his farm and keep house for him. I was ever so glad, because I saw an opportunity to distinguish myself as a housekeeper and try out a few of the schemes that I had read about—and I want to say that some of the things you read are all right for reading and discussion purposes, but that's as far as you want to go.

"In the magazines I had seen pictures of the prettiest girls all dressed up and coiffured and massaged and cold creamed and talcum powdered and manicured, engaged in canning beans through a series of pretty and engaging poses. It was most attractive. I decided that I would can vegetables just as soon as I got to the farm.

"The first thing I decided to can was corn. There was plenty of lovely corn on my uncle's place and I tried to can it all. I placed it on a shelf in the cellar under the dining room table.

"I don't know how long after this the explosion came, but it came very suddenly. It interrupted a meal when the lid of the can hit the other side of the dining room floor.

"I suppose that there was something the matter with that one particular can, because none of the other cans exploded—not then. It was a week before the next one blew up. Then we had an explosion every day for a month."

"Always at meal time?" inquired the president, sweetly.

"No," replied the woman from Toronto, unmoved. "The explosions did not always occur at meal time. They confined themselves to no particular hour. They occurred indiscriminately at all hours of the day and night. We had company on the evening of the grand finals. There was a rattle of musketry that sounded like——"

"Your time is up," declared the president, along with the falling gravel.

Wit and Wisdom

Professor—Is there any connecting link between the animal and the vegetable kingdoms?

Student—Yes—hash.

"Has Jones any trouble with the servant question in his suburban home?"

"No, indeed. He has a woman who cooks, washes, irons, cleans, nurses and sews and takes the wages he choose to give her."

"How did he manage to get hold of such a marvel?"

"He married her."

Mrs. Dasher—No, dear, you mustn't invite the Fannings and the Jeromes for the same evening. The two families don't speak.

Dasher—Fell out over the children, I presume?

Mrs. Dasher—No; their cooks quarrelled.

"He says he's the head of his house."

"No chance for him to get away with that."

"Why not?"

"I saw him and his wife out riding together the other day, and she was driving the automobile."

A very tall, thin English boy reported to a Canadian battalion in Flanders. His colonel was bald and elderly, but adored by his men. After a few days' experience of his new command, the sub. approached the officer commanding and asked permission to ventilate a grievance.

"I wish you would use your influence, sir, to restrain my platoon from referring to me as 'Legs,'" he said.

"Sure! my lad, sure!" replied the colonel, solemnly; "if you'll use yours to stop my whole battalion callin' me 'Old Baldy.'"

The interesting departure in wedding descriptions, which is quoted from an Ohio paper, may be one of the results of woman suffrage:

"The bride was dressed in a conventional wedding gown of white. The groom wore a flowing black coat with an elaborate white vest decorated with real pearls. Imported gray broadcloth trousers of the latest cut and make, white gloves and a white cravat of fine Indian linen, together with collar, shirt and handkerchief of similar material completed his perfect costume. For a travelling suit the groom wore a tailored suit of blue serge, with handsome tan shoes and imported felt hat.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Self-confessed ignorance often indicates wisdom.

Fortunately for the fool he doesn't know that he is one.

When the quiet man makes a noise in the world it counts.

According to the latest statistics there are 7,248,649,513 things a woman can find for her husband to do while he is resting.

Beware of the man who apologizes when he does you a favor.

Somehow a man derives a lot more pleasure from shocking other people than he does from being shocked by them.

MASON'S MELODIES

War is indeed a frightful thing, and any decent, thoughtful chap would gladly help to lynch the king hope this war may be the last that who is the first to start a scrap. I ever this old world shall know, that armies never more will blast the scared stuffing from the foe. And yet I'm glad I've lived to see the captain and his pawing nag, to see our people, proud and free, once more uphold the starry flag. For, in our days of peace and ease, they told me loyalty had died, that nothing but a stack of V's would serve to stir the nation's pride. All o'er the world the story went, that coins become our only god, our dreams are all of 10 per cent, and nothing matters but a wad So often have I heard this tale, that I began to think it so, and said, "The land worships kale must sound the lower depths of woe." I saw it headed for the dump, its institutions all deranged; and then the captain blew his trump, and everything around was changed. Still lives the spirit of our sires, they lie who say our hearts are ice; still for our altar and our fires we'll make the last sad sacrifice.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Your editorial the other night on the usurpation of governmental function by denominational organizations was timely and to the point. The management of public affairs seems to have been relegated to such bodies. Every church court now in session is passing resolutions offering the government advice.

It has occurred to me that it might be a good idea to have these different organizations called together and formed into a coalition for the salvation of the country at this crisis.

WHY MILK TURNS SOUR

Milk turns sour because a little microbe, known as the milk microbe, gets into it, and being very fond of the sugar which is in the milk, turns this sugar into an acid.

If we could keep milk entirely away from the air after the cow is milked, it would not turn sour, but as soon as it is exposed to the air these microbes, which are constantly in the air, drop into the milk. They are alive although invisible to the naked eye. If when they drop into the milk it is warm enough to enable them to do their work, they attack the sugar in the milk and turn it into an acid. Their attempt to sour the milk can be overcome by keeping it at a low temperature in the refrigerator, but as soon as the milk is taken out of the refrigerator and left out long enough to become warm, the microbe begins to work and the milk cannot be made sweet again. If the milk is boiled as soon or shortly after the cow is milked the sugar in the milk is changed in such a way that the microbe cannot feed upon it. This, however, does not imply that milk should always be boiled, as we know that that impairs its desirability as food.

SOUTHERN CORN BREAD

The proper way to make real Southern corn bread: Boil the water to be used in mixing the corn-meal batter. First scald the meal with boiling hot water until the consistency of a thick batter is obtained, working the substance thoroughly and fast all the while; also add two eggs while the batter is being beaten. Add salt to taste and pour into bake pans and bake it slowly in the oven. Do not use any sugar, butter or other grease for shortening; only grease the bottom of the bake pan or other receptacle into which the batter or dough is poured for baking. The secret is in properly scalding the meal before mixing and in the slow cooking.

RHUBARB CANNED WITH SUGAR

Wash carefully rhubard that is tender, but do not peel it, as the pinky skin makes the canned fruit a beautiful color. Cut into inch pieces and measure.

For every three quarts of the sliced rhubarb, allow three cups of sugar and one cup of water. Dissolve the sugar in the water, add the fruit and simmer gently for fifteen minutes.

Have ready sterilized jars with new rubbers and air-tight tops, fill to overflowing with the boiling fruit and screw as tightly as posible. After several hours, when the fruit has cooled, the top can be screwed tighter again. A few raisins are sometimes added to the rhubarb when first put on to cook.

During courtship lovers overlook each other's faults, but after marriage they spend much of their time looking over each other's faults.

He who kisses a maid kisses a miss, and he who kisses another man's wife kisses amiss; so the only thing left for a man is widows.

COUNT YOUR FRUIT JARS

This summer every fruit jar in every kitchen cupboard in the land ought to be filled. From authoritative sources comes the information that tin and other materials out of which the commercial tin can is made are so high that canned or tin goods will be less plentiful and more expensive than formerly. Hand in hand with that fact comes the other —that we will have to do even more than last year to help augment Europe's enormously curtailed food supply. Under these circumstances it would be a positive crime for us to neglect to do all the canning that we can so economically. If we have jars on hand one of the chief costs has been met.

A good many women really believe that to can fruit is an extravagance, owing to the large amount of sugar required in the process. These housewives should remind themselves that the sugar put into canned or preserved goods now will be of actual food value later on, for it has been proved that sugar is a most desirable sort of food when taken in moderate quantities. There are all sorts of desserts that can be made from canned fruits such as canned peaches, cherries, plums and berries that require no additional sweetening beside that contained in the fruit and syrup. When there is more syrup than is needed, this can be drained off and used later boiled down and heated for a pudding or a pancake syrup.

And, of course, it is a mistake to imagine that one needs sugar in canning. According to the new method sugar is not actually needed at all. For the whole secret in canning is to kill and eliminate all bacteria that would spoil the fruit. By carefully sterilizing every glass and cover and everything else connected with the canning this can be achieved. Then, too, all air should be excluded from the inside of the can as the air may carry the harm-working bacteria.

But this year, when none of us ought to carry on any experiments that may lead to the spoiling of good material, it is best to stick to old and sure rules of canning with sugar. If you have had success in canning a certain fruit, can that this year. Wait until a fatter year before trying experiments.

And, whatever you may can, be sure you buy the raw fruit at the minimum price. Wait till the price will go no lower and then shop enough to be sure you have bought to advantage.

In view of the shortage of tins this year experiments are under way toward making effective a good deal of large-scale fruit and vegetable drying. If you are fortunate enough to know how to dry apples, apricots, and other fruit, take time this summer to revive this old-time housewifely art. When fresh apples are soaring next winter you may be very glad to offer your family an apple pie or apple sauce made from apples that you have dried when they were cheapest.

MRS. JUSSPLICED WRITES TO MAMA AGAIN

My dearest Mama:

I am sure you will think me very neglectful, but, really, I have been so busy, I have not had a minute to write.

I have been taking cookery lessons and making all kinds of things.

I made some bread last week, but I forgot to put in the yeast, so I poured it over the top, but it didn't turn out very well.

I made 22 different kinds of cookies last week, and gave some of each to Algy to try. I was going to make some more this week, but the poor boy does not seem very well, and has quite lost his appetite. I think it must be overwork, as he cannot get home for dinner or supper, but has a snack at the office, and in any case, Algy says the weather is getting too hot for baking now, and thinks I should get things that are no trouble to cook. So Algy and I went shopping, and after looking everywhere, we could not see the things we wanted, so we went to my nice grocery man, and told him. He had the very nice things we needed. One thing he had was some lovely little smoked hams—he called them picnic hams, only 29c lb., the one we bought only cost $1.23. Then he suggested custard powder with stewed rhubarb, apricots or figs for desert. We also bought some sweet biscuits, but he had so many kinds from 15c to 30c lb. that we had a job to choose, but I couldn't resist buying a little "Standard Flour," just to try some buns, and Mrs. Oldun helped make them. They were so nice that Algy called at the store and told them to send round some more of the "Standard Flour."

I must close now, as I am going to help Algy plant some of the lovely flowers we got at our store: Asters, stocks, balsams, pansies and others, and only two boxes for 25c.

Now good-bye. Write to me soon, and don't forget your loving daughter

MINCE.

P.S.—I am sending you three boxes of those chocolates I got from my grocery man; they are only 19c on Saturdays. Did I give you his address? If not, it is

RHUBARB GELATINE

Soak one-half box of gelatine in half a cup of cold water for an hour. Cook two pounds of rhubarb in very little water and when reduced to a pulp sweeten to taste. Set aside and cook one cup of sugar with one of water for twenty minutes. Stir the soaked gelatine into the boiling syrup and stir dissolved. Remove from the fire, add the rhubarb, and set away in a mould to cool.

Bran Cookies.

Rub one tablespoonful shortening into two cups flour, add four cups bran, one teaspoonful baking soda, one teaspoon salt; then rub in one half-cupful sweet cream; make soft dough with sweet milk, roll to half inch thickness, sprinkle thick with granulated sugar; cut out with biscuit cutter, and bake in quick oven.

RYE BREAD

One cup of scalded milk, one cup of boiling water, one tablespoon of lard, one tablespoon of butter, one-third cup of brown sugar, one and one-half teaspoons of salt, one quarter yeast cake, dissolved in one-quarter cup of lukewarm water, three cups of wheat flour, and rye meal enough to knead. To the milk and water add the lard, butter, sugar and salt; when lukewarm add the dissolved yeastcake and flour, and beat thoroughly, cover, and let rise till light. Ad rye meal until the dough is stiff enough to knead; knead thoroughly, let rise, shape into loaves let rise again and bake.

Raisin Jam.

A recipe for this jam was asked for lately by a reader, and this one has been kindly sent by Mrs. N. W., Sask., who has our thanks: Boil one pound of seeded raisins in one cup of water for fifteen minutes; add the juice of half a lemon and one cup of sugar, and boil again for fifteen minutes. The lemon can be omitted if preferred.

GRIDDLE CAKES

Stir one cup of sweet milk with one lightly beaten egg, and pour upon a cup and a half of flour that has been sifted with one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder and half a teaspoonful of salt. Mix well, adding a teaspoonful of molasses and two tablespooufuls of melted shortening and dilute to a thin batter with more milk if necessary. Bake on a hot greased griddle in large cakes. As they are baked brush with softened butter and pour over them a little maple syrup piling one on top of the other until there are seven or eight; then cut like pie in wedge-shaped pieces and serve hot.

Red Cross Parcel Service Improving

IT IS EXPECTED CANNED GOODS CAN BE SENT TO CANADIANS.

LONDON, June 8.—Lately there has been a considerable increase in the number of acknowledgments received from prisoners in Germany by the Canadian Red Cross, proving that the parcel service is improving. All prisoners' parcels were stopped by German authorities for a few days, but have since been continued. The Germans have been taking out all the canned goods lately, declaring that some allied prisoners, though not British, were discovered getting communications in this way. However, this illicit practice was promptly suppressed by the allied Government in question, though only a few instances were discovered. It is expected the Canadians will be allowed canned stuff very shortly.

ATTRACTIVE DINING CAR SERVICE

Probably nothing helps more to make a railway journey really enjoyable than a visit to the "Dining Car," especially if it be a Canadian Pacific Dining Car, where the passenger is assured of the highest form of efficiency in the culinary art; the choicest provisions that the market affords prepared on the scientific principle known as "Dietetic Blending."

Your favorite dish, as you like it, may be enjoyed at reasonable cost, amidst ideal surroundings, while travelling on the Canadian Pacific.

WOMEN'S STOMACH TROUBLES

The Great Woman's Medicine Often Just What Is Needed.

We are so used to thinking of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy exclusively for female ills that we are apt to overlook the fact that it is one of the best remedies for disorders of the stomach.

For stomach trouble of women it is especially adapted, as it works in complete harmony with the female organism, since it contains the extracts of the best tonic roots and herbs. It tones up the digestive system, and increases the appetite and strength. Here is what one woman writes showing what this medicine does:—

Newfield, N. Y.—"I am so pleased to say I can recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as an economical and beneficial remedy in most ailments pertaining to women. At least I found it so by only taking two bottles. I had Indigestion in a bad form and I am now feeling in the best of health and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. BURR WILLIAMS, R. D. No. 29, Newfield, N. Y.

Many women suffer from that "all gone feeling," and "feel so faint," while doing their work. Ten chances to one their digestive system is all out of order. A tablespoonful of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after each meal should completely remedy this condition in a few days.

SYNOD FAVORS CONSCRIPTION

WOULD LESSEN REPRESENTATION OF PROVINCES THAT FAIL IN DUTY.

TORONTO, June 8.—At the meeting of the Anglican synod notice of motion was given by Rev. Lawrence Skey, seconded by Rev. Canon Dixon, by which the Provinces which do not recruit enough men will lose representation in the Government of the Dominion.

In view of the possible refusal of any province of the Dominion to furnish the full number of men demanded by the application of the Militia Act, or other form of selective or conscription which the Government in the present crisis may choose to adopt, it is the opinion of this Synod, clergymen and representative laymen of the diocese of Toronto, that a fair and just basis for the treatment of such provinces is upon the basis of national service; That the right of vote carries with it the right of defence; That national representation shall only be allowed on the basis of national service so that the number of representatives in the Government of the nation shall be in due proportion to the number of men contributed to her defence. On such a basis of each province which does its national duty will retain its governmental power, and any province which refuses to contribute its proportion of men for national defence should be refused a like proportion in the national Government."

The resolution which was loudly applauded will go to a special committee before being presented to the Synod.

Cheered Ottawa News.

Bishop Sweeny announced the news from Ottawa that conscription would be enacted next week. The Synod cheered the announcement to the echo.

FAILED TO GET DOG TAGS AND COSTS ARE IMPOSED

Charles Smith failed to take out a dog tag, and he was due to appear before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning. He was fined $2 and $2.60 costs. W. H. Sabine also forgot to take a license out for his canine, thinking that as he had taken out the license last August that the tag was good for a year. He has since taken a tag out, but the magistrate did not allow the expense to stand, so he will have to pay $2.60 costs.

AFTER THE WAR WHAT?

Where You Cannot Prophesy — PREPARE !

NOT even the best-informed man in government or business circles dares to attempt a prophecy of conditions after the war. We hope for the best—meantime wise men are preparing now for anything.

How ?

By regulating their expenditures according to their actual needs rather than by their prosperity—by husbanding the surplus—and by investing to the limit in Canadian War Loans that help so much to maintain present prosperity.

Money saved and loaned to Canada by Canadians is a two-fold safeguard for the future. The lenders will benefit directly from the excellent interest return and absolute security—and indirectly because the interest thus kept in Canada will help to keep business good after the war.

Canadian War Savings Certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, repayable in three years. At the purchase prices of $21.50, $43 and $86 respectively, they yield over 5% interest. Buy them at any Bank or Money Order Post Office.

FORTY YEARS AT THE THROTTLE

THOS. CHARLTON, C. P. R. EMPLOYE, MAKES HIS LAST TRIP.

Mr. Thomas Charlton, who has been engineer on this division of the Canadian Pacific Railway for over 40 years, made his last trip to Toronto last Saturday afternoon when he took train No. 35 which leaves here at 3.43. Mr. Charlton was engineer on the Klondyke Flyer 20 years ago. He is now on the superannuated list.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Sanol Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

NO TRACE IS FOUND OF DROWNED MEN.

It is ten days since Mr. J. T. Lekking and Mr. Lee Lindsay disappeared at Drag Lake, and practically no trace of them has been found. Men have been on the lake every day and night dragging and patrolling, and even the woods in likely places have been searched in the possibility that the lost men might have reached the shore and perished.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham Severs Connection with Herald.

OTTAWA, June 8. Hon. Geo. P. Graham, who has been President of the Montreal Herald for the past three years, has resigned from the position. Mr. Graham's public duties as first lieutenant to the leader of the Liberal party require his constant attention and energy, and he has accordingly decided to leave to someone else the responsibility and the time required for properly discharging the duties of the presidency of a large daily paper.

"LEAD KINDLY LIGHT" LEFT AS THE AUTHOR WROTE IT

Number of Familiar Hymns Have Been Dropped From Methodists' New Book of Sacred Song.

A new hymn book is under preparation for the Methodist Church and will be shown next week at the Conference in Toronto. Thirty ministers and one layman began their labor of revision six years ago. The new book to be issued this fall will have one third fewer hymns and twice as many tunes as the old book and the hymns will represent the choicest of Methodism as well as many from the Presbyterian and Anglican collections.

That there will be no tawdry tunes in it is the assurance of Rev. A. C. Crews.

Some changes in phraseology are made. There will be found no references to human kind as "worms of earth," one time so common in devotional books. Three hundred hymns have been dropped on a three-fourths vote of the committee. A large proportion of those dropped were found to be of most infrequent use.

The verse of "Lead Kindly Light," added by Bishop Bickerstaff has been left off. It reads:

"Meanwhile, along the narrow, rugged path
Thyself hath trod,
Lead, Savior, lead me home in child-like faith,
Home to my God.
To rest forever after earthly strife
In the calm light of everlasting life."

Two of Charles Wesley's have been left out, "All Ye That Pass By" and No. 60, and "Depth of Mercy," by Wesley has been cut down from five eight-line stanzas to three, an omitted stanza being:

"I have spilt His Precious blood,
Trampled on the Son of God,
I, who am not yet in hell!"
Filled with pangs unspeakable,

Among the hymns added are Kipling's "Recessional," "Fatherland Hymn," Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar" and "Ring Out Wild Bells."

The arrangement of tunes was left in the hands of two eminent Methodist musicians, Mr. W. H. Hewlett, Mus. Bac., choirmaster of Centenary Church, Hamilton, and Dr. Herbert Sanders, choirmaster of Dominion Church, Ottawa, with Mr. W. S. Dingman, of the Ontario License Board, as chairman of the sub-committee.

ANNUAL OUTING TO STONY LAKE

NORMAL STUDENTS HAVE A CHILLY DAY FOR EXCURSION.

The students of the Peterboro Normal School held their annual outing to Stoney Lake this morning. The party left the local wharf per steamer "Stoney Lake" for a trip north over the Lift Lock and up the Canal to the lakes. The circuit of the lakes will be made and the party will get back to the city in time to allow the members to take the trains for home.

Despite the unfavorable weather a good crowd took advantage of the opportunity to get a glimpse of the beautiful resorts to the north.

ENLISTING USUAL MEN

The attention of officers, especially recruiting and medical officers, is drawn, in district orders, to the number of men enlisted who are over age and unfit for any service. Greater caution should and must be taken that the enlistment of such men will not occur in the future.

IN MEMORY OF GREAT LEADER

MONUMENT OF SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD AT TORONTO DECORATED.

TORONTO, June 8.— The monument of Sir John A. MacDonald in Queen's Park was decorated Wednesday in commemoration of his death on June 6, 1891. A number of palms and ferns were placed around and over the figure floated a huge Union Jack. A laurel, placed on the monument by the Centre and South Conservative Club and the Women's Conservative Association, bore a card on which was inscribed the following:

"Father of Confederation, 26th anniversary of his death, Right Hon. Sir John A MacDonald, empire builded, 50 years of confederation of the provinces into the Dominion of Canada, 1867 to 1917."

G.T.R. MEN RESTLESS WANT INCREASED PAY

The members of the brotherhoods of railway men employed in the service of the G.T.R. are becoming a little uneasy because they are not sharing the increased wage scale granted to men employed by the C.P.R. management. Some time ago it was understood that the representatives of the men would go to Montreal and demand the same scale of wages, but this was not done, and men are wondering why not. The representatives of the men meet the officials of the system next week.

Council of Women Recommend Church Halls As Such.

WINNIPEG, June 8.—Dancing in church halls as a means of meeting an acknowledged social problem under Church control and religious influence has received the approval of the National Council of Women. This clause was included in a resolution brought in by the Winnipeg Local Council and passed at yesterday afternoon's session of the Council.

Another resolution, carried unanimously, reaffirmed a motion passed at Ottawa urging the Dominion Government to grant immediately the Federal franchise to all women.

The resolution was carried unanimously and forwarded to the Dominion Government.

Premier Praises Salvation Army

SAYS ORGANIZATION HAS DONE SPLENDID WORK IN CANADA.

TORONTO, June 8.—Sir William Hearst, Premier of Ontario, presided over a ceremony at the Salvation Army Temple last night, at which 50 cadets and life-saving guards, who have graduated in first-aid, were presented with their certificates by Lady Hearst. There was a crowded attendance in the large hall and with Sir William and Lady Hearst on the platform were many prominent citizens and the entire headquarters staff of the Salvation Army. Members of the graduating class, under the direction of Dr. W. A. Young, gave a demonstration of first-aid methods, and many musical numbers were given by "The Songsters" and a massed band. Controller Shaw represented the Mayor and City Council.

Sir William Hearst, in an address which of itself was a splendid tribute to the work which is being carried on in Canada and throughout the world by the Salvation Army, said that the worth of Canada's great natural resources was not based upon the vast wealth of material things, but upon the character of the men and women of the Dominion. He regarded the Salvation Army as an organization which had taken a foremost place in the training of the masses in the lessons of good citizenship.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE.

Advances in prices of hardware lines have, if anything, been more numerous than in recent weeks and higher prices in other important lines seem likely to be recorded in the near future. Everything wherein steel or iron enters can be said to be in a steadily firmer position. Prices on these commodities are largely nominal as the large mills are sold up far ahead and to continue to take care of their regular trade must refrain from quoting in the open market. Smaller mills, on the other hand, that are able to make deliveries are quoting various premiums according to tonnage and delivery. Some indication of the trend of the iron and steel market may be gathered when it is pointed out that the average price of pig-iron in the United States f.o.b. furnace, June 1, 1917, was about $43.75 compared with an average of $12 to $12.25 during the last two months of 1911. For finished products of steel the average price of Pittsburgh on June 1 of this year was 4.59c per pound as compared with the low point of 1.42c in December, 1914.

Advances have been made in black steel sheets during the week, while galvanized sheets are very scarce and dealers find it almost impossible to place orders for same with manufacturers. List prices on sand and coal shovels have been advanced. Scales are in very firm market and advances are highly probable in the near future. Readjustments have taken place in the list prices on curry combs, in some instances advances having been recorded while lower list prices were made effective on two numbers. Other lines in which increased prices have been made effective include cotton wrapping twine, whips, crosscut saws, malleable fittings, malleable unions, charcoal, valves, machinists' and parallel bench vises, cut nails, hand shears, hand cleaner, oakum, shaving soap, breast and hand drills. Linseed oil was in firmer market with an upward movement from the lower levels. Turpentine was weaker and declines were registered. Certain lines of wall finishes were increased in price. Business was somewhat slower during the week, owing to damp, unseasonable weather. The freight situation at Toronto is improving as the railways are now accepting all outgoing freight, but incoming freight to Toronto is still under an embargo from some points.—Hardware & Metal.

HONUS WAGNER BACK AT SHORT

John Henry (Honus) Wagner, star shortstop, who failed to report to the Pittsburg Nationals at the beginning of the season, after twenty years as a player in the National league, yesterday signed a contract with President Barney Dreyfuss of the Pittsburg club. It was announced that Wagner will appear at first base in today's game with Brooklyn. No statement was made as to the salary Wagner will receive under the new contract. For the past two years, it is said, he has been receiving a salary of $10,000, and according to some reports it was because of a reduction that the veteran shortstop failed to report this spring.

After signing a contract Wagner sent the following telegram to A. Herrmann, chairman of the National baseball commission:

"Finding the call of baseball too strong to resist, I desire to continue to play the game I love and to which I owe all I possess, and I hereby petition the National commission to grant my request for reinstatement, so that I may play with my old club tomorrow."

Prancing over the fresh grass and soil with the abandon of a school boy at recess, Honus Wagner got his first real workout of the 1917 season at Forbes field on Monday.

The irresistible call of the diamond finally proved too much for that lovable character who helped to place the great pastime on such a high pedestal, and, arrayed in full battle togs, Honus took a very active part in the regular morning practice.

Wagner had more life than a kitten with a spool of thread, according to the score of Pirates who enjoyed the antics of the famous star. Going to the short field, he could not ignore the challenge of the comforting sun, and before the session ended he was picking them up and throwing to first in a manner reminiscent of Pittsburg's pennant days.

After it was all over Wagner repaired to the showers. He took the beneficial bath which never fails to put new life into an athlete after a strenuous time on the field. This singular character, who has always placed the sport ahead of the dollar, has probably found it difficult to pass the hours without a touch of the ball and bat and his initial performance did not surprise the other Pirates. They feel how he loves the game and feel that he should gratify the desire.

John Henry Wagner was born in Mansfield, Pa., February 24, 1874. He is five feet eleven inches in height, and weighs 193 pounds. At the age of seventeen he broke into baseball wit ha semi-pro team in his home town, where he played for three years before going to Dennison, O. In 1905 be played in the Iron and Oil League, and was drafted to the Interstate league, where Ed. Barrow found him and took him to Paterson, N.J., of the Atlantic Coast league.

After two season with Paterson he went to the Louisville club of the National league, and afterwards to Pittsburg, where he has played since 1900. Until last season he did not play any position but shortstop. Last year, however, he was used in a few games at first base.

Wagner's best year with the bat was in 1900, his first season with the Pirates, when he hit .380. He did not fall below .300 until 1914, when he batted .252. In 1916 his mark was .274, and last year .287. In 1907 he stole 61 bases.

All of which goes to prove that anything is fair in love and baseball —even to the extent of scooping your former side-kick on the gilded dome.

MELBA DISPLAYED GREAT ENTHUSIASM AT ILSODE MENGES DEBUT IN LONDON.

The interest is growing in the Canadian debut of the eminent young English violinist, Isolde Menges, who is being presented at the Ritz Carlton, by Howard Edie on the evening of Friday, March 23rd. The subscription lists at Lindsay's and Archambault's, already indicte the great interest that is being displayed in the coming of the brilliant young lady violinist.

Among the many distinguished social and artistic luminaries who were present at Miss Menges debut in London, was Madam Melba, who showed exceptional enthusiasm and appreciation of the young artist's work. Madam Melba, at the end of the concert enthusiastically greeted Miss Menges as a great artist. An identical opinion is held by most of the people in musical circles in London. Even Professor Leopold Auer said that Miss Menges was not only a great violinist, but that she was one of the greatest artists in the world.

The extraordinary number of the best concert engagements that followed her London debut, was the best testimony with regard to her genius that could possibly be presented. She appeared that season five times at her own concerts at Queen's Hall, London, three of which were given with a symphony orchestra with Savanoff and Mengelberg conducting.

After her debut she was immediately engaged for the Hague orchestral concerts at Amsterdam. This, following a large number of "At Homes," by her Berlin appearance with the an Irish tour, which was succeeded Symphony Orchestra and Karl Panzner.

Miss Menges will give a concert at the Conservatory of Music, Peterboro, Monday evening next, June 11th. Tickets now on sale at Heintzman Piano Co. store, Hunter street, or at the Conservatory of Music.

KAISER BARELY ESCAPES DEATH

GERMANS COUNTER ATTACK ALONG FRONT OF SIX MILES BUT BRITISH HOLD GROUND

Nothing Lost of Positions Taken Since Battle Began—Enemy Trenches Entered on Six Mile Front for Depth of Half a Mile.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 9.—At 7 p.m. yesterday after heavy atrillery preparation the enemy launched a counterattack against nearly the whole of our new front south of Ypres, from Slyves to the north of Ypres, a distance of about six miles.

The attack was delivered with large forces composed of fresh divisions brought up from the enemy's reserves and was pressed with great determination. Under the destructive fire of our artillery and machine guns it was completely repulsed at all points.

BRITISH HOLD THEIR GROUND.

The fighting was particularly fierce east of Messines and also in neighborhood of Klein Sillebreke north of the canal. By midnight the enemy's attacks had broken down with a great loss all along the line. Our troops retained possession of the whole ground captured by us since the commencement of the battle, operations were carried out by us with complete success.

ANOTHER SIGNAL SUCCESS.

Last night further south on a wide front from the south of Lens to Labasse, south of the Souches River, our troops entered German positions on a front of over two miles and penetrated to a depth of more than half a mile. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy and more than seventy prisoners and a number of machine guns were captured by us. Our own casualties were light. Enemy's trenches were also entered successfully north of the Souches River, southeast of Loose and southwest of Labasse. Large numbers of Germans were killed and great damage done to the enemy defences. An additional forty-four prisoners including three officers and several machine guns were taken by us.

The sector of the Hindenburg line still held by the enemy west of Bullecourt was raided by our troops last night and most of the hostile garrison were killed or taken prisoners.

ENEMY SACRIFICES.

PARIS, June 9.—In the region north of St. Quentin batteries were very active during the night. Along the Chemin Des Dames the Germans renewed their efforts at several points from our positions south of Filain as far as the region east of Cerny. While artillery fighting was being continued with violence in this whole sector four attacks were made on the trench northeast of Cerny. The attacking troops were dispersed by our fire. Two surprise attacks north of Froidmont were also repulsed. The enemy sustained appreciable losses without obtaining the least results. Southeast of Corbeny, south of Courey, and in the Chevaliers wood enemy detachments which attempted to approach our lines were repulsed easily. We took prisoners including an officer.

Hydroplanes Attack Subs.

PARIS, June 8.—Official announcement is made that naval hydroplanes stationed at Boulogne have made several attacks with bombs on submarines recently.

TROUBLE IN CHINA GIVEN TINGE OF LOCAL COLOR

Mrs. H. D. Robertson Receives Letter From Husband in Chengtu College Describing Riots in Celestial Kingdom.

The political unrest and rioting in China takes on a touch of local color from a letter received by Mrs. Robertson, of Gilmour street, from her husband, Rev. H. D. Robertson, who is professor of economics in the West China Union University in Chengtu, West China. Mrs. Robertson has been heard on sevral occasions during the past winter at church gatherings, when she gave interesting addresses on life in China.

The university in which Professor Robertson is a lecturer was practically in a state of siege, as there was fighting all around it, and class work had to be abandoned: Several windows were broken by bullets from the contending forces. Perhaps the two factions at war knew what was at issue. If they did, they were alone in the possession of the information, for even the college authorities were at a loss to define the trouble. Day and night the strife raged, and the innocent bystander was in as much danger as the actual combatants themselves. Living on the fringe of the war zone in Europe would be but a trifle more exciting than existence in a Chinese city, according to Professor Robertson's letter.

"The British Consul has been most pessimistic about conditions in China," writes Prof. Robertson, "and expects widespread unrest in the near future. I should not be very much surprised, as very little seems to have been done in the way of binding the provinces together and getting the central government recognised."

Prof. Robertson and the Consul proved good prophets, as only a few days ago the press despatches contained the information that eleven of the provinces of China, the one containing Pekin, the capital, included, threw off all allegiance to the central government, and revolt became general.

Firing All Night.

Under date of April 19 Prof. Robertson writes: "The city gates are still shut, and the telephone is not working, so we do not know very much about just what is going on. There was firing on and off all night. This forenoon there has been intermittent firing of both rifles and big guns. I had to let out classes for the boys simply could not follow with the guns going off in their ears. Both sides have dug trenches across the streets, and what is now going to happen no one can tell."

The letter is in the form of a daily chronicle. The events just recorded happened on a Thursday. On the following day Prof. Robertson wrote that things were getting worse There were great fires all around the FAIRY TALES IN THE U. S.

Washington Called on to Deny Reports of a Naval Engagement.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 9.—An Exchange Telegraph despatch from a Dutch frontier correspondent says Emperor William with his son, Prince Eitel, Von Hindenburg and other members of the Emperor's staff were inside the station at Ghent, which was bombarded by airmen the other day. The Emperor's party escaped injury, but three army officers nearby were killed.

RUMORS AT WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, June 9. — Naval Department officials have found it necessary to issue a statement contradicting persistent false reports which it is evident are being maliciously circulated by disloyal conspirators. One of the worst of these reports is to the effect that the German fleet has engaged the combined British and American fleets, sinking sixty ships two of them being the American battleships Pennsylvania and Texas. These rumors further say that the American hospitals are overflowing with wounded, that incoming steamers passed through the battle area and found the sea swimming with corpses, and that the American government and newspapers are in a conspiracy to keep the truth from the people. Naval Secretary Daniels characterises these stories as outrageous falsehoods The American fleet has not been in action and no vessel has been lost There are no wounded American sailors in British hospitals.

CANADIANS CAPTURE 150.

LONDON, June 9. — A new record in the number of prisoners captured in a raid is reported by Reuter's. The Canadians brought back 150 prisoners from German lines to the southwest of Lens. Other successful raids were made, and the Germans are being harried as never before.

MORE FICTION FROM BERLIN.

BERLIN, June 9. — The British were unable to obtain any advantage in fresh fighting last evening on the banks of the Ypres-Comines canal in Belgium, says an official statement by army headquarters.

REDMOND'S BROTHER KILLED.

DUBLIN, June 9. — Capt. Wm Redmond, member of Parliament and brother of John Redmond, is reported as having died of wounds received in the fighting of Thursday.

HUN CRUELTY IS BEYOND BELIEF

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, June 9. — A despatch to the Matin from the British front says the German hatred against the British grows daily. British prisoners are forced to work under the fire of the guns, and for the slightest misdemeanor are bound to a stake and deprived of food for whole days. A repatriated French ambulance worker says he himself buried a party of two British soldiers who died of illtreatment and hunger. Such victims are often left unburied. In one case a sick prisoner was excused by the surgeon, but the field officer had him bound to a stake naked, and he died during the night.

MR. C. FESSENDEN RETIRES AFTER 41 YEARS AS TEACHER

Distinguished Member of Collegiate Staff Concludes 27 Years of Faithful and Efficient Service—Sketch of His Career.

Mr. Cortes Fessenden, for the past twenty-seven years a member of the teaching staff of the Collegiate an institution which he has helped to place in the first rank of educational institutions in Ontario, put in his last day of faithful service yesterday and retires from the profession in which he has been a shining light for the past forty-one years. It is Mr. Fessenden's good fortune that the government has at last decided on some measure of compensation for those who have devoted a lifetime to service in the schools.

Mr. Fessenden has been a teacher for the past forty-one years and in all that time has held only three positions, a fact which is his best possible recommendation. He never made formal application for an yexcept his first school, securing his two subsequent appointments solely on his reputation as a teacher.

Mr. Fessenden began his professional career in the Brampton high school in 1876 aftre taking his degree in the old Trinity University. While at college he took a high place in mathematics and he soon established his reputation as a teacher. The late Dr. J. A. McLellan, one of the greatest mathematicians Ontario has ever produced, and author of a number of text books on the subject, was at that time one of the inspectors of high schools. In one of his text books an intricate problem was published with a solution by Mr. Fessenden to whom Dr. McLellan referred as "an accomplished mathematician."

In 1881 Mr. Fessenden was offered the principleship of the Collegiate Institutes at Napanee and Brockville, being recommended for both positions by Dr. McLellan. The offer from Napanee was accepted at what in those days was a high salary for a teacher. He remained at Napanee for nine years and in 1890 came to Peterborough where he has been ever since.

During the years he has been teaching Mr. Fessenden has had pupils who have since achieved highest distinction, both in scholarship and business careers. Sir Thomas White, minister of finance, was a pupil of Mr. Fessenden at Brampton. Chancellor Bowles of Victoria College was another. Many of his former pupils now hold prominent positions in the United States, two of them at present being supervisors of schools in New York. Gardiner L. Wagar, mathematical teacher in the Mt. Hermon Boy's School in Massachusets received his first start in the science while attending Mr. Fessenden's classes at Napanee. In a recent letter to his former teacher he thanks him for the inspiration he was to him in his school days and for not only showing him how to understand but also to teach mathematics. This letter is one of many received from time to time by Mr. Fessenden from his former pupils who now realize the value of the services that he rendered them as a teacher.

Mr. Fessenden is known all over the country as the author of a work on physics which was used as a text book in the high schools of Ontario for over twenty years.

Mr. Fessenden's only two sons are in the service of the Empire and have been from the first. The elder, Lieut.-Col. J. H. Fessenden was in the regular army in England and went to France in August, 1914. He is attached to the headquarters staff and is now on a secret mission for the Allies. Lieut.-Col. Fessenden has been decorated for distinguished service by the Kings of Ltaly and Servia.

Both sons were graduates of the Military College at Kingston. The younger, Charles V., had decided on engineering as a vocation and had established himself in Toronto when the war broke out. Four days after Canada went into the fray he was drilling men in Toronto and went overseas with the First Battalion of Highlanders from that city. He was taken prisoner by the Germans at the second battle of Ypres and has been in a prison camp ever since.

Conscript Wealth and Talent as Well as Men

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, June 9.—The General Assembly passed a resolution with much enthusiasm endorsing the policy of selective conscription as applied to the battlefield and also as applied to the wealth and the talent of the country for the service of Canada at this time when so much is at stake."

Church Union Again.

Sir Robert Falconer reported for the Church Union Committee that it had sent out notice to the sessions of the Church informing them as to action of the Assembly in favoring union with Methodist and Congregational churches. He had been instructed to request that this notice be inserted in the Record, but the editor of that paper, acting on the advice of his committee, refused, on the ground that it was controversial matter. The church union committee had nothing to report regarding obtaining legal advice and plans to secure Dominion and Provincial legislaton conveying the properties of the Presbyterian Church to the United church.

The report states that the central union committee composed of representatives of the three denominations, met in Toronto in January and drew up a recommendation that until organic union is consummated the principles of cooperation should be applied in the adjustment of oferlapping in the existing field in arranging religious work in absolutely new districts and in work amongst the foregn nationalities.

SERGEANT EDWARDS TELLS HARROWING TALE OF LIFE IN GERMAN PRISON CAMPS

Parcels Sent by Red Cross in Many Cases Prevent Death of Prisoners by Starvation ---Necessity and Success of Contributions Clearly Shown.

The lecture delivered by Sergeant Edwards, one of the few survivors of the famous Princess Pats, at the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall last night, was the one argument needed to demonstrate the value of the work that has beeu done by the local branch of the Red Cross Socity in sending aid to the prisoners of war in Germany. Sergeant Edwards was taken prisoner at the battle of Ypres with ten others. He was wounded at the time. He made two unsuccessful efforts to escape and on the third succeeded in reaching Holland thence making his way to England where he had been officially regarded as dead for eighteen months.

Sergt. Edwards told a plain unvarnished tale of life in the German prison camps, speaking with all the conviction of the man who obtained his information from actual experience. His ancedotes were brightened by characteristic Scottish humor and the only drawback was the fact that some of the audience that thronged the large hall had some difficulty in hearing the speaker distinctly.

The main facts brought out by the lecturer were that the prisoners would praitically starve to death but for the help sent them by the Red Cross and kindred organizations. Prisoners are abused as well as starved and the wounded are neglected. Not all of the parcels sent may reach the prisoners, but even if only a percentage are delivered the relief thus afforded is welcome. There is no use in sending money orders as these are appropriated by the Germans. In this connection it may be stated that the Red Cross abandoned the sending of money some time ago.

Prisoners are allowed to write and receive letters but when the censor grows weary of his work he puts the uncensored communications in the stove and this accounts for the number never received by the prisoners and their friends at home.'

Hun Frightfulness.

Sergt. Edwards and others who were taken prisoners with him were suffering from wounds. They received no medical aid but were obliged to treat each other. A French doctor who was a prisoner bandaged their wounds and this was all that saved the lives of some of the men. When they were taken to Germany even the women abused them, spitting in the faces of the prisoners.

Sergt. Edwards gave an interesting account of his attempts to escape, the two failures and the third successful get-away. The flight was made in each case under the cover of darkness and the hardships and hunger endured were almost beyond belief. He described too, in detail, the daily routine of prison life and the work that the half-starved men are required to perform. Of all the Allied prisoners the Russians fare the worst because they make no effort to defend themselves. The Russians receive no parcels of any kind from their friends at home and would be in a sorry plight indeed but for the generosity of their fellow prisoners.

Questions Asked And Answered.

At the close of his address the Sergeant answered a number of questions submitted by the audience. Some who have relatives in German prisons naturally asked after their welfare but Sergt. Edwards had not met any of these.

He said that even if some of the parcels sent went astray or were appropriated those received were often all that lay between the prisoners and actual starvation. The daily bill of fare in the camps is half a pound of black bread for breakfast with a mixture called coffee made from acorns and burned barley. For dinner the bill is boiled potatoes and for supper the water in whilh the dinner was prepared. It is next to impossible to keep alive on the fare. The only way which the bread can be eaten is to take a quick breath and swallow the stuff at once.

The Letter That Never Came.

The prisoners are allowed to write four times a month. They can put nine lines on a post card and thirteen on their letter paper. If the censor finds it hard to read the writing he throws the letter or card in the fire and the same course is adopted with the letters sent in by friends of the prisoners. Still there is nothing like keeping on writing on the chance that some will get through.

Mr. G. H. Logie presided and solos were rendered by Miss Florence Scott and Corporal Lightheart, an invalided hero.

The Society's Thanks.

The executive of the Red Cross Society desires to thank most heartily Mr. Kenner and the Board of Education for granting them use of the Collegiate Hall; also the eight young ladies of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., for taking up the collection; Messrs. J. J. Turner, Limited, for loaning flags, and to the Examiner and the Review for their kindness in making Sergeant Edwards' meeting known to the public, and to Mr. Logie for presiding.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, JUNE 9, 1917

THE NATION'S WARDS.

"I may say in general terms that the soldier and his family should be, so far as necessary, even to the straining of a point, wards of the nation. Therefore I give utterance to my absolute dislike of the provision that after a boy is 15 years of age and a girl 17 there should be no further payment of pension on his or her account. That is preposterous; it is absolutely improper. Wards in chancery are taken care of until they are 21, being the children of the court until they attain that age. It has never been suggested that a boy is of age when he is 15 or a girl when she is 17. We should try to find out, not how little we can do, but how much we can do without offending the soldier and his family. Let us be ever ready to help.—From Capt. Burnham's speech in Parliament on the Pension question.

THE RED CROSS SUSTAINED.

IF THERE EVER EXISTED any skepticism with regard to the work of the local branch of the Red Cross, that should be disposed of at once and for all time by the address delivered at the Collegiate Assembly Hall by Sergeant Edwards, the first man ever heard in Peterborough with a message direct from the German prison camps, of which he had been an inmate for over fifteen months. Sergeant Edwards' address proved to the satisfaction of his audience that the parcels sent by the society are all that the unfortunate prisoners have to hope for, all, in fact, that keeps many of them from starvation.

Perhaps some parcels do go astray. It may be that a few are appropriated by the Germans, but, as the speaker said, even if those for whom they were intended secure only a percentage of their gifts, that is something to look forward to. It is almost impossible to keep body and soul together on the bill-of-fare allowed the unfortunate prisoners. The food sent in by the Red Cross and the clothing contributed by the same society stand between the recipients and utter destitution.

The necessity for this branch of philanthropic war work has been proved to a demonstration. The local Red Cross Society officials who have labored so long and so effectively for the cause, have every reason to feel gratified that they have persevered in the face of numerous discouragements and contradictory reports, and that they have accomplished so much. The public who have been asked for aid should now be convinced that their contributions have attained the purpose for which they were intended. All classes should now enter into the work more heartily than ever. The life of some Peterborough soldier may be saved, a slow and grinding death by starvation may be averted by the parcel you help to send to him.

Sergeant Edwards made it clear that it is useless to send money to the prisoners, as such contributions are sure to be appropriated by their jailers. There need be no mistrust on the part of the public in this regard, however, as the sending of money has for some time been discontinued by the Society.

GIVE THE BOY A CHANCE.

CHAIRMAN EASTWOOD, of the Board of Education, Inspector Mowat and others interested in school affairs, are in favor of establishing technical schools in this city. That, it is realized, is the one thing lacking in a system otherwise as perfect as it is posible to make any human device. The educational committee of the Greater Peterborough Association have taken the matter up with the completion of their organization and have promised co-operation. The prospects are that the rising generation will yet be given a chance to prepare to some purpose for the great business of life, that of earning a living in a line for which nature has gifted them.

The great objection to modern education as it is promulgated these days is that it is lacking in real, practical value. The boy who leaves the public or high school is in nine cases out of ten still in the dark as to what occupation or profession to take up. Too often he is left to his own devices. Worse still, he may be overpersuaded by friend to enter some line of endeavor for which he lacks equipment. The result is that life is filled with misfits. Happy is the man who has found his work. The trials of life have no terrors for such. The one who is out of place, on the other hand, is constantly trying to make his way up a steep and narrow trail, and life for him has nothing but discouragements. Nature has fitted almost every one of her children for some particular calling. To find out what that is, is the supreme duty of those who are entrusted with the responsibility of training the young idea.

The business men and the manufacturers of the city are heavily taxed for the support of the schools. Naturally they look for some return for their money in this as in the case of any other expenditure. When they set out to recruit the ranks of their working staffs they are obliged to make selections at random from among the graduates from the schools which they have been required to finance. The majority of such experiments result in failure, discouragement for the beginners themselves and endless loss and annoyance for the employers.

How different it would be, how much better for both parties concerned, if the mechanic knew just where to lay his hand on a helper, the manufacturer where to find a young man to fill a position in some particular department of his factory, the business man to enlist the services of a young man or woman who showed a marked talent for accounting or salesmanship, the milliners and dressmakers where to find assistants, and so on through every branch of industry. Efficiency would be developed, energy would be conserved; and the waste of time between graduation and final settlement in an occupation would be largely avoided. There is no occupation in life but what can be made an art if followed by those possessed of the required gifts. The man designed for commercial life by native talents would regard farming as a drudgery. The man who possesses the true love of nature can find that occupation one of daily delight and study.

The average growing boy, after he passes the years of coy babyhood, when everyone is his friend, is really to be pitied. He is generally regarded as a nuisance. The principle of repression is applied to him. "Don't" is the one word constantly dinned into his ears, until he may well marvel as to the other side of the proposition and why he is not told what to do rather than what to avoid. He thirsts for human knowledge. Interrogation marks burst from every part of his anatomy, and yet he is regarded as impertinent if he persists in asking questions, even from his teacher. Anything in the shape of a machine has a magnetic attraction for the average boy, but let him attempt to operate it on the sly or even investigate its construction closely, and he is at once suspected of destructive tendencies. "Let that alone" is the encouragement he is given in what are really attempts at self-development.

All things considered, the wonder is not that so many boys fail in life, but that such a number succeed in spite of the educational obstacles that are thrown in their way.

REV. R. POGUE WRITES A BOOK.

REV. R. POGUE, pastor of St. Paul's Church, has added a contribution to the literature for which Canadian Presbyterianism is distinguished, in the shape of a small volume called "The Children's Guide to Christ and the Lord's Supper," a book for very young communicants. Mr. Pogue did not make the venture without warrant, and the work may be regarded as one of the official publications of the denomination right from the start. It was approved by those high in authority in the church before its publication was decided upon.

Rev. R. Douglas Fraser, who is high in the councils of Presbyterianism, has long recognized the necessity for such a treatise as a supplement to the church catechism. Ample provision is made for the very young in the church, for those in the Sunday school classes, but the needs of those entering the church as members for the first time, especially in the matter of preparation for this the most important step of all in religious life, has been to a great extent overlooked. When Mr. Fraser set out to find someone to prepare such a textbook, it was brought to his attention by church workers that Mr. Pogue had delivered some admirable lectures to young communicants in the course of his pastoral work. The minister of St. Paul's was accordingly requested, with other prominent pastors in Canada, to submit the manuscript of these addresses for consideration. In all of those laid before Mr. Fraser, the work of the Peterborough pastor, was regarded as of the highest value, and its publication was decided upon. The little book in question was the result, and, issued as it was under such circumstances, its general use as a textbook in church work is assured. It is entirely free of anything like denominationalism, and can be utilized by the followers of any creed.

In the preface, the author, after explaining the object of the book, says that it may be used by parents and teachers, and by ministers in communicants' classes. Mothers may use it to great advantage by reading it chapter by chapter with their children. Used thus, it will serve as a basis of further instruction in the way of life and as a guide to the Lord's table.

The book is written in the charming conversational style so characteristic of Mr. Pogue. Friendship is the theme that runs like a thread through the pages, and the reader is led up step by step to a contemplation of the highest example ever given of this sentiment in the supreme sacrifice on Calvary.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THIS WAR IS a struggle between frightfulness and efficiency, and efficiency always wins.

• • • •

IN THE UNITED STATES it seems to be ten million for civilization and not one for kultur.

• • • •

A NATIONAL CRISIS, like a worldwide war, shows up the strength and weakness of public men.

• • • •

THE SLACKER may continue to live after the war, but only the man who has done his duty will enjoy life.

• • • •

ALL THE CHURCH COURTS are for conscription, and the churches, all must admit, are truly representative of public sentiment.

There is no small percentage of fiction in the outcry about labor shortage on the farm. Most farmers have all the help they really need or are willing to pay for.—Orillia Packet.

PERHAPS able to pay for would be the better explanation.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Boom in Cabbage.

(Guelph Mercury.)

Upon reading that England had conscripted all the tobacco we immediately revised our garden patch and will go furiously and diligently into the cultivation of cabbage this season. We look for tremendous prices.

Very Likely.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

Had Sir Robert Borden proposed conscription a year ago, those who have been sneering at him for not having proposed it before now would likely have been denouncing him for proposing it at all.

A Neglected Source of Revenue.

(Buffalo Express.)

With the war debt getting more formidable every day, it is surprising that the Canadian government has not gone very far toward taxing excess profits of munition makers. Even since the entrance of the United States into the war and our allowing only cost price plus 10 per cent. to makers of war supplies there has been little talk of similar treatment of manufacturers over the border.

LIGHTING AND EFFICIENCY

By Addington Bruce)

Mr. Employer, in casting about for ways and means of raising the efficiency of your employes, have you given any real thought to the lighting problem?

Do you realize that one of the most insidious, as well as most common factors lowering efficiency is faulty lighting of the working place?

I ask these questions to-day because I have just been reminded by a report of the Pennsylvania department of labor and industry that many employers still pay insufficient attention to the lighting of factories, stores and offices.

Some err by having too bright an illumination of their places of business. When workers are subjected to a glaring light, whether of the sun or of an artificial illuminant, they cannot escape eye-strain.

And eye-strain always causes general sensations of fatigue, with resultant inability to do sustained work, mental or physical, at any high level of efficiency.

But most employers who thoughtlessly inflict eye-strain on their employes do so by failing to give them sufficient light. As the report just mentioned points out, they usually err in one of three ways—sometimes in all three.

They provide windows too few in number, and too small and narrow. Or their artificial lights are of too low a candle power and placed too far from the point of operation.

Or, having windows sufficiently large and numerous, and artificial lights of ample power, they more than offset these advantages by neglecting to keep windows and lights clean.

Dirt and dust, it is just as well to remember, are not transmitters of light, but obstructors. Experience has proved that their obstructing power may indeed be a source of eye-strain. Also, particularly in crowded working places, dirt and dust are always liable to be laden with the germs of disease. Whether on tables or chairs, or on windows and electric light bulbs, they may be potent carriers of infection.

Besides, dusty windows mean a lowering of efficiency quite apart from any weakness due to eye-strain or disease. For grimy, dusty windows give any working place an atmosphere of gloom, and in such an atmosphere workers can never do as well as in bright, clean, cheerful surroundings.

It will pay, accordingly, to have a careful inspection made of your lighting facilities.

Don't be satisfied to make this yourself, or let one of your managers make it. Engage an expert in such matters to make it for you.

And, remember what is true of the working place is true likewise of the home.

In too many homes windows and electric light bulbs, lamp chimneys, or gas shades are not kept sufficiently clean. None too well lighted at best these homes are seriously underlighted as a result of this neglect in cleanliness.

Consequently those who read or write or sew or otherwise closely use their eyes in such underlighted homes soon or late join the big army of eye-strain.

Don't let this state of affairs continue. Both in the home and in the working place make it a rule to have windows and lights cleaned frequently and thoroughly.

THE FAULT WITH THE AUTO

"I hear you consider buying an automobile," said the polite salesman. "Let me take you for a ride in the great Stemwinder car, and I'm pretty sure you'll make up your mind it's the car you want."

"Is that your car, standing out in front?" inquired Gangling.

"Yes, sir, that's the Stemwinder, and it's about the smoothest proposition now in the market. Let me show you."

"It would'nt be any use. I know I would'nt like that car. It has yellow wheels, and yellow is a color I despise. I can't imagine a man with any self-respect riding around in a car with yellow wheels. I don't see what the manufacturers are thinking of, that they put together such things.

"I don't believe the ideal car has yet been produced. I've examined about 500 recently. I've ridden in them and investigated them thoroughly and found grave objections to every one. A man was here this morning with a Humper car, and I wasted an hour riding around with him, he insisted so strongly. That car certainly has some strong points, but it has cantilever springs, and I don't want a car with that type of springs.

"I also took a ride in a Hustler car and am willing to admit that it has power and other good features, but it has elliptic springs, and they're worse than the cantilever. It's a wonder the engineers who design cars don't get wise to a few elimentary facts. What is the most comfortable thing we know of? It is the modern bed. There a man may repose for hours or days together and be refreshed. What kind of springs has your bed Has it cantilever or elliptic springs? You know it hasn't. It has spiral springs. This fact is staring the automobile manufacturers in the face all the year round, yet they are blind to it. Some day an inspired designer will produce a car with spiral springs, and if he brings one around here I'll buy it without asking him any questions.

"But the fatal objection to all present day cars is the fact that the engine is in front, instead of behind, where it ought to be. With the engine where it is, the man who drives the car has to inhale noxious fumes and his feet are baking, and the noise of laboring machinery distracts his attention from the scenery.

"My friend Mr. Chuckletree purchased a new car last fall, and one crisp, cold day in the winter he invited several of his church friends to take a ride with him. He hauled them many miles and tried to show them a good time, but when he returned to town and they disembarked from the car they all had frozen faces, and would hardly speak to him.

"He found that he was being ostracized by his former friends, and so he went to one of the deacons and demanded an explanation. The deacon said: 'It seems you took a party of friends riding the other day, and they say you smelled so strongly of rum that they were shocked, and naturally an inebriate has no warm welcome in our circle.'

"The fact was that Chuckletree had some wood alcohol in the radiator of his car to keep the water from freezing, and when the car warmed up there was quite a booze smell. So you see how one good man's reputation was ruined by this idiotic plan of placing the engine and radiator in front."

MASON'S MELODIES

I'd like to be as slim and straight as when I was a middleweight. I wouldn't run so much to waist if sternly I refused to taste the kinds of grub containing starch, and if on foot I'd daily march, instead of riding down the street, while thinner people use their feet. It's easy to reduce one's fat—the doctors all agree on that, the doctors of a dozen schools; but when I've read their list of rules I have a sad and soulful sigh and call for porterhouse and pie. Vain longings I have often felt to wear a smaller, shorter belt; of double china I would dispose, and once again behold my toes. I now I ought to live on rice and divers garbs just off the ice; I ought to walk ten miles a day, and with the hefty dumb-bells play, and in a year the doctors state, I would have lost a ton of weight. But one may pay too great a price for looking willowy and nice; the cost of beauty comes too high, when you must shun the gaudy pie, forsake the gravy and the roast, and live on tea and brick-hard toast. No prudent man of ample girth will for a figure leave the earth.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor The Review:

In your account of the meeting held by the mayor on Thursday, to promote the early opening of the Trent Canal, at its present completed depth, I was amazed to read the stand taken by Mr. R. R. Hall, who spoke up strongly for the G.T.R., but had not a word to say for the early opening of the canal. What can all that mean? You heard the Chief engineer at the Mayor's banquet, you know that for five years we have all been warning Mr. Cochrane against the bridge difficulty, you know that Mr. Cochrane stated that he had taken the necessary measures to obviate the difficulty. Yet Mr. Cochrane's recent "explanation" is before the government and the people.

I have met his objections or explanations, or whatever one may call them, and I can assure you the members of the government seem to be astonished. If Mr. Cochrane is like Mr. Hall, he has more sympathy for the "poor" Grand Trunk than he has for an early opening of the Canal, and for cheap coal and other necessaries that could be brought in by water now if the bridge difficulty—foreseen by everybody—had been met in a businesslike way.

We do not ask for expenditure. We ask for fair treatment, and so long as I represent West Peterborough, I shall try to represent its interests and those of Canada and not those of the "poor" heavily-subsidized railways. If you want the canal, get after it, and keep after it, or the railways will beat you out. It was to moderate and control railway charges that the canal was projected, and now we have men standing up for the railways and not the canal. If this sort of thing is kept up, it will be a long time before we shall have the canal. Governments expect constituencies and their representatives to look after their own business and our government is no exception. It is sympathetic, no doubt, but that the Minister of Canals needs waking up, is plain, at any rate in this particular.

However, I have done my duty, and if there is not a big deputation down here next Friday, or at least a strong one, then the G.T.R. will have triumphed in connection with something that at very little expense could have been got out of the way. When, however, ministers see political opponents, ex. M.P.'s, like Mr. Hall opposing my representations would they not be justified in concluding that I was wrong in my urging, and that any old time for opening the canal would do, so long as it suited the railways?

The Premier would not have taken up this matter if the Minister of Canals had not already given his answer. Does anybody accuse the Premier of consenting to a humiliation of his Minister?

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of June 9, 1900:

Mr. Wm. Rudkins, superintendent of the Lock Works, was presented by the employes with a gold-headed cane on the eve of his departure to become deputy collector of Inland Revenue.

Annual convention of Otonabee Sunday School Association was held at Coldsprings.

The Review said editorially: "Bourassa, with his anti-British speeches in Parliament, should not be tolerated by the Canadian Government for a moment."

Yes, What?

"I hope you will pardon me for being late," said Dr. Cutter, when the stately hostess met him at the door. I'm afraid my tardiness has spoiled everything. If I could have done so I would have telephoned you to go ahead with the dinner and not wait for me. But circumstances prevented. I have just operated on a man for appendicitis."

"Oh, you have," she replied. "What was the matter with him?"

Pacific and Atlantic Fisheries Need More Gareful Methods

The profitable utilization of the immense quantities of waste material which characterize practically every branch of the fisheries presents one of the chief problems in securing efficient conduct of the Canadian fishing industry. As a result of investigations on the Pacific coast, it has been estimated that the sheer waste of the fisheries of Alaska amounts to 70,000 tons per annum and of those of British Columbia to from 15,000 to 20,000 tons. The proportion of waste material in the lobster canning industry is extremely high. Mr R. H. Williams of Halifax makes the startling assertion that of 32,000,000 pounds of lobsters required for an average Canadian season's pack of 160,000 cases only 6,500,000 pounds are utilized, 25,500,000 pounds being absolutely wasted. In other words, the lobster industry as now conducted uses only 20 per cent. of the raw material. Even under such conditions, the annual value of this industry to the Dominion is normally around $4,000,000. From the foregoing figures it will readily be appreciated that few industrial improvements could render more substantial aid to the fishing interests than the perfection of practical methods of converting the offal to economic use.

HISTORY OF PEARLS

Date Back as Far as Twenty-Third Century

"The modern recognition of pearls dates back to about 300 B.C., but they were known to yet older peoples and especially to those of the East," says an author. "The Chinese records go still farther back, and oyster pearls were received as tribute in the twenty-third century B.C. It is probable that they were found in the waters of Ceylon and India two thousand years ago, and the Greeks of course knew the pearl and recognized its value. But it was not until the Roman Empire was beginning to rise that the knowledge of the value of the pearl became general. It seems that in early times Britain played its part in the production of these gems, and Tacitus refers to British pearls, but calls them dull-colored and dirty brown. Origen, on the contrary, declared that the pearls that came from Britain held the second rank in value. It was not, however, until about the twelfth century that pearls were used in England, when they became conspicuous in church ornamentation."

Actors at Drill

An Englishman writes: I was at a dinner the other day given in honor of the Artists' Rifles, and Sir J. Forbes-Robertson spoke in affectionate terms of his own days in the famous corps. "I was a very humble member of the Artists' Corps," he said, "but I rose to the rank of sergeant. I remember Victor Horsley as a private, and how I, as sergeant, reprimanded him for wearing his watch-chain outside his tunic. We used to drill in Richmond Park, and actors like myself bolted on Saturday afternoons to get back to town for the evening performance."

I am perfectly sure that the best of the men at the front will return with the reforming spirit, with the determination that many injustices thought to be invincible shall be set right.—Dr. J. H. Jowett.

THIN-BLOODED MEN AND WOMEN

Need the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

Thin-blooded people do not remain so from choice but from indifference, in some cases from despair. People who are pale, languid, with palpitation of the heart, some difficulty in breathing, and a tendency to be easily tired are suffering from thin blood. They need only the resolution to take the right treatment and stick to it until cured. The remedy that can be relied upon is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. With every dose make new blood, and new blood means health and strength. The red cheeks, good appetite, increased weight and strength that follow the use of these pills prove their great value to thin-blooded people. Here is an example: Mrs. J. McDonald, Jr., Hay, Ont., says: "I honestly believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life. Some years ago I had anemia and as I did not realize the seriousness of the trouble, I soon became a complete wreck. I got so weak I could hardly walk. I neither ate nor slept well, and could not go upstairs without stopping to rest. At times I had an almost unbearable pain in my back and would have to remain in bed. I suffered almost constantly from a dull headache, and when sweeping if I would stoop to pick up anything I would get so dizzy that I would have a smothering sensation. My eyes were sunken and my hands and limbs would be swoolen in the mornings. I tried several kinds of medicine without benefit, and my friends thought I would not recover. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Ping Pills, and before long could see and feel that they were helping me. I gladly continued to use the Pills until I was completely cured, and I cannot say enough in their praise and I strongly recommend them to all run down girls and women."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

I was treated by a physician for a year and a half and he did me no good at all. I tried "Fruit-a-tives" as a last resort. GREECE AND ITALY

Serbia and Italy to Gain at Expense of Athens

An Italian publicist writes: The Greek problem has been one of the many deplorable results of the blind policy of years past, when Germany and Austria-Hungary, France and England distrusted Italy and helped Pan Hellenism as a spoke in the wheels of the Italian chariot. The behavior of the King and the people of Greece in the present war has caused the last thick and sticky scales to fall from the eyes of England and France, and at the Conference of Rome finally prompted them to realize that what Italy had always told them was too true. Greece has forfeited her right to territorial expansion. While part of what she would have received had she been proually, will be lost to Greece (the vilayet of Smyrna), Saloniki, which is no more Greek than Bulgar, Serbian, Turkish, or Hebrew, must go to Serbia, and thus afford her (besides the commercial ports of lower Dalmatia that she will get at the end of the war) the full-fledged commercial and military port which she needs for the important role that she is entitled to play in the Balkans. This is another lie given to those who have proclaimed to the world that Italian expansion means the slavery of the Serbian people.

It is not practicable to make other naval honors than the V.C. posthumous Dr. Macnamara stated.

CHRISTMAS IS IMPERIAL

Australians Share Great Festival as Link and Holiday

During Christmas week the Australian railways are working at full pressure. One of the earliest signs of the approaching festival which the bush people notice is a long double-engined train racing past at an unusual time of the day. This is the "special" taking people home for their holidays, and runs through about 500 miles of bush.

In the interior of the continent where the communities are very small and very scattered, the Christmas traditions are just as strong. Two or three drovers, travelling stock down to the coast, will halt and spend Christmas day with as much luxury as their supplies will allow. The men who live on the distant boundaries of the big sheep stations will ride into the homestead for Christmas. Here the owner, or manager, will give special orders for a feast of some kind, and a Chinese cook will struggle with time-honored British bill of fare.

But one little thing, and a very important thing, too, is always absent from the Christmas feast, and that is the sprig of holly with red berries to put in the Christmas pudding. Some people are fortunate enough to have friends in England who post them a bit.

One thing is certain, that Christmas will never die out in Australia. There will not even be a chance for another day to share the grandeur of Christmas day. It is a link with the old country; it is one of those bonds of empire; the Australian feels that it is a day he shares with the homeland and likes to know that he is carrying out the traditions of the great and beloved mother country.

Town Girls on Farms

With reference to the statement that the Wiltshire War Agricultural Committee had decided to close their school for girl farmworkers, Mrs. H. P. Rogers, of Potterne, Devizes, the superintendent, writes that the school concerned, the Shaw Farm Scheme, was a private experiment, and it has been closed not on account of the results attained, which have been by no means disheartening, but by reason of the isolated position of the farm. Out of 23 girls 12 have done well, 4 were found unsuitable, and 7 left, finding farm work too hard or uncongenial.

VEGETARIAN JAPAN

Japanese Eat Little Meat—Large Producers of Vegetables

Very little meat is produced or consumed in Japan, the people depending mainly on vegetables such as rice, fish, certain bulbs such as tiger lily and seaweed, which are very nourishing and different from anything found along our seacoast. Peas and beans are largely cultivated in Japan, which resemble our bush beans and are very prolific, including twenty or more varieties; radishes in all sizes, including the sakurajima, which grows to an immense size, weighing from half a pound to a pound. Eggplants, turnips and a pumpkin which in size and flavor rivals our best, excellent as a pie filling or cooked as we cook turnips. The udo compares favorably with asparagus. The delicious Chinese cabbage makes an excellent table dish and is used in many ways. In Japan vegetables in seasonable assortment are peddled in two baskets carried across the shoulders on a bamboo pole, brought fresh daily to the door for the housewife's selection.

HUDSON BAY COMPANY

Great World Commercial Enterprise Chartered by a King

It was in 1670 that one of the greatest commercial enterprises the world has seen was chartered, namely, the Hudson Bay Company, the last of the great pioneer English corporations. This company, chartered by Charles II., exercised its authority on the continent of North America for 200 years. The principal trade of the company was in furs, and enormous profits were made. The company originally owned and had a monopoly throughout Rupert's Land. In 1821 the jurisdiction of the company, which had the authority to make war on savage tribes, was extended to the Pacific, this jurisdiction to last for a period of twenty years. It was not until 1869 that the British Parliament took away from the company its powers and merged the land it possessed with the Dominion of Canada.

WHERE NOSES COUNT

Large Noses in Japan Hold High Favor

The nose plays a very important part in Japan, owing, probably, to the fact that a difference in noses constitutes about the only distinction among the Japanese. The nose is the one feature which attracts attention. As there are very few large noses to be found in Japan, a lady with a large nose is regarded as one specially gifted by nature. She is invariably a reigning beauty and the envy of her less favored sisters. In all Japanese pictures in which ladies are portrayed the artists are particularly careful to make the nose of liberal dimensions.

CASTE CURES OUTCASTS

Sepoys Retrieved Honor at High Price in Battle

Edmund Candler writes from Mesopotamia: There have been occasions when ritual and caste-exclusiveness have been turned to disciplinary uses. There was a company of Rajputs somewhere in the neighborhood of Suez which contained a draft of very raw recruits. Four were holding a picket on the east bank of the canal when they lost their heads. One blazed off at a shadow. A panic set in and all four threw down their rifles, bolted as if the devil were behind them, and were only held up by the barbed wire of their own outpost.

The officer commanding and the adjutant were considering how to deal with them when the Subadar major entered the orderly room. The man was a veteran, with a double row of ribbons on his breast, and he had never let the regiment down in all his service. He begged as a special favor that Rajput officers should be permitted to wipe out the stain. "Leave it to us, Sahib," he said; "we will put such an indignity on them that there will not be a jiwan in the regiment who will shrink from bahadri (brave deeds) again."

The colonel saw the wisdom of this. So the Indian officers of the regiment were deputed to deal with the case themselves. The jiwans were tapped on the head with a slipper, the last ignominy that can befall a Rajput. After such disgrace they could not enter the chauka and mess with their caste companions. That is to say, they were socially excommunicated until their honor was retrieved. For nearly eighteen months they lit their outcast fire and took their meals apart at a measured distance from the chauka, at such a distance that no ray of contamination could proceed from them to it. They were still under the ban when the regiment left Egypt for Mesopotamia. When they went into action with the relieving column before Kut all four rehabilitated themselves. Two died honorably, one was awarded the Indian Order of Merit, and the fourth was promoted.

ROUMANIA'S GREAT NEED

Trained Officers Were Too Few—Some Inside History

The following is from Hamilton Fyfe, British correspondent in Roumania: When the new German military attaché arrived in Bucharest early in 1916 he made a proposal to the Roumanians that they should join the Central Powers. He said: "We know all about your army. As a small army it was a good one. You have enlarged it and weakened it. You had not a sufficiency of good material for officers. You could not expand your equipment to meet the increased number of men and the needs of modern warfare. If you fight alone you will fare badly. What we suggest, if you will join us, is this: We will send you all the munitions you require. We will send also generals to assist your Headquarters Staff and a number of officers skilled in the technical arts of war, as well as regimental officers, one or more to each regiment. Finally, we will give you two German army corps to stiffen your inexperienced troops.

That was Germany's proposal. Roumania rejected it. She threw in her lot with the allies. They welcomed her with much shouting and throwing up of caps. They sent her munitions as quickly as they could, but they took no account of the flaws in her military preparedness. They made no such proposal to Roumania as Germany had made. The Roumanian army entered upon its disastrous campaign with all its imperfections on its head. The result is seen in the overrunning of Roumania by the enemy and the state of her army to-day. What the Roumanians especially lacked was a sufficient supply of trained, vigorous, resourceful officers. Everyone in the country now admits this. There were many such, but not enough. The value of energy and force of character are more to be seen in the field than in any other activity of life.

Countess Destroyed Wine

Rosalind Countess of Carlisle, who was for many years one of the foremost total abstinence advocates in Britain, ordered the destruction of the whole of the contents of the wine cellars at Castle Howard, her Yorkshire seat. There were 1,500 bottles of old vintages, and it is understood that for thirty years the cellars had been sealed. A large hole was dug not far from the mansion and the contents of the bottles poured into it. The countesses' action caused much comment. Lord Carlisle, a grandson of Rosalind Countess of Carlisle, was an officer in H.M.S. New Zealand.

The lieutenant-governor in council yesterday issued a proclamation to the citizens of Ontario, calling on them to commemorate by special services, the fiftieth anniversary of the confederation of the provinces of Canada. The proclamation in part is as follows:—

It was further urged that a liberal use be made of flags and suitable decorations in order that the jubilee of confederation might testify to the patriotism and loyalty of all Canadians.

COMBINED CHEMICAL AND HOSE TRUCK FOR BRIGADE

Committee of Whole Council to Recommend Purchase of La France Fire Fighting Apparatus Demonstrated Here Last Week at Cost of $8,800.

The city of Peterborough will have a combination chemical and hose truck built by the American La France Fire Apparatus Company, at a cost of $8800, if the recommendation of the committee of the whole Council last night is adopted by the Council in regular session. This conclusion was reached after the representatives of the larger companies had been heard and after the mayor and aldermen had found out exactly how much money they had to spend on the new machine.

The new combination will have an engine of 105 horsepower, and, according to Mr. Thomas, will be able to climb the highest hill easily, as well as being sufficiently powerful to overcome the heavy snow of winter. The committee also have the satisfaction of being able to say to the underwriters that they had followed the recommendation made by the inspector by letter.

The Tenders.

When Mayor Duffus had called the meeting to order, a few matters of minor importance were disposed of before the tenders for the combination hose and chemical engine were opened.

Mr. G. A. Gilelspie on behalf of the Studebaker Co., offered to furnish a Studebaker combination chemical and hose truck of 40 h.p., having a carrying capacity of 1,500 feet of hose, 200 feet of chemical hose, a 40-gallon chemical tank, and the weight of the apparatus was given as 5,000 lbs., without hose or men, for $3600.

The White Motor Co. of Toronto tendered for a machine of 66 h.p. capable of carrying 1,500 feet of hose, with a 40-gallon chemical tank, 200 feet of chemical hose, and weighing 7,000 lbs., with a guaranteed speed of 40 to 50 miles an hour, and the price quoted was $8207 f.o.b Peterborough.

The American La France Co. had four styles of machines for the consideration of the committee, and they ranged from the large to the small.

Their No. 12 type is of 105 h.p., weighs 6,500 lbs., and is equipped with a 40-gallon chemical tank, 200 feet of chemical hose, ladders, etc. The price for this machine with the Dayton Airless tires was $8800 f.o.b. Peterborough, and delivery in all cases will be made in 120 working days after receipt of order.

Their No. 10 type is of 75 h.p., weighs 6,000 lbs., with the same equipment as the other. The price was $7925. The engine in this machine is only four cylinders.

Their No. 20 type is of 65 h.p., weighs 5500 lbs., and is not an all La France machine. The price for this was $6775.

Type D was 50 h.p., weighs 5500, and, with the same attachments as the other cars, could be bought for $5500.

The Discussion.

Ald. Smith, as a citizen, was very much in favor of a combination chemica, pumper and hose truck. He had talked with a number of the leading citizens, and they felt the same way.

Mr. Fellers, representing the White Co., addressed the committee, pointing out that the main thing for the municipality to consider was to get the best chassis. Any local blacksmith could build the body, and the chemical attachments could be purchased anywhere. The White truck was recognized as the best truck on the market, and he noted with considerable pride that he had sent 8000 trucks to the Allies, and were about to send an additional shipment of 200 to Russia. Chicago, New York and all the large cities were putting in White motor apparatus, and he asked the members to find out what the captain of the College street firehall, Toronto, thought of the White truck compared with the other makes he had tried.

After Mr. Fellers had retired, Ald. Worth suggested that the committee decide on the question as to what kind of a piece of apparatus they were going to buy. He was in favor of a pumper and hose truck.

Ald. Dobbin queried as to what the Council thought about getting a small chassis for a chemical engine and a combination hose and pumper.

Ald. Weir was for getting everything in one piece. "You do not always know what kind of a fire you are going to," he remarked.

Ald. Smith would not consider anything smaller than a capacity for the pumping of 750 gallons. He was positive that the triple combination was the proper thing.

Mr. Thomas of the American La France Co. was called, and recommended to the committee that they buy a chemical, pumper and hose truck at a cost of $12,565. He pointed out that the chemical attachment often saved a heavy loss by water, as the 40-gallon tank would do the same work as 1,600 gallons of water, and whether it was possible to put out the fire by means of the chemical tank could not be decided until the fire was reached. The pumper guaranteed the water pressure instantly

After taking 1000 ZUTOO TABLETS
Says they are Harmless

Mrs. (Dr.) Shurtleff, of Coaticook, says "Zutoo Tablets must have cured 500 of my headaches, for I have taken 1000 tablets. After trying every remedy within reach, I discarded them all four years ago for ZUTOO, which I have taken ever since.
I find the tablets a harmless and efficient cure for all kinds of headache."

PLENTY COAL IN UNITED STATES

ONLY TROUBLE IS TO GET IT TRANSPORTED TO CANADA.

TORONTO, June 9. "There is an abundance of coal on the other side, but the difficulty is to get it here," said Mayor Church on his return to the city from a visit to the coal fields of the United states. "There is the same scarcity in all parts of the United States as there is in Canada, and every citizen of Toronto will have to look after his own coal requirements. The city cannot be responsible for the individual supply. All it can provide for is the relieving of the situation if there is a scarcity. The information we gathered showed that someone was getting a tremendous profit with coal prices as they are in Toronto. Allowing for the cost of coal at the pit mouth, plus the freight rates, the margin is $3. The question is as to who is getting the profit."

MRS. MARY MIDDLETON BROWN PASSES AWAY AT BUFFALO.

Chief of Police Thompson received notification on Friday from the authorities at Buffalo, N.Y., of the death of Mrs. Mary Middleton Brown. Mrs. Kate Douglas and Mrs. Emma Castle of Peterborough are sisters, and they were informed of the death by the local police.

COUNCIL OF CHOSEN FRIENDS CHOOSE ADDITIONAL OFFICERS

The final sessions of the Grand Council of Chosen Friends at Toronto completed the business for the past two years and it was decided to hold the next meeting in Hamilton.

The additional officers elected were: Grand Prelate, M. Emmett, Toronto; Grand Marshal, M. Graham, London; Grand Warden, J. B. Ferguson, Renfrew.

W. F. Campbell, of Hamilton, who was present at the sessions, was the organizer thirty years ago of the order, and has attended all the meetings since. He states that this was the most harmonious meeting that has ever been held. Originated thirty years ago, there are now 570 councils throughout Canada, and between thirty and forty thousand members.

WOUNDED SEVEN TIMES AT VIMY

And Indian River Man Is Still Able to Write Home.

Mr. George Jefferies of Indian River has received a letter from his brother Lance-Corporal Charles Jefferies, who went overseas with the first contingent from this city, and who was wounded in the battle of Vimy Ridge. He says:—

Birmingham,
Sunday, May 13, 1917

Dear Brother and Sister:

Just a line and hope it will find you quite well. I am pleased to say I am no worse up till now, although I have got quite a bit of pain, but hope to soon get well again. I am going under the X-ray to-morrow, so I guess that will mean another operation; I have had two already. Well, George, Old Fritz got me—a pretty bad smash this time. Seven wounds all on the left side—two through the shoulders and two through the arm and in the hip, so you see I have enough to go on with for a few weeks. I got this little packet after we had taken Fresnoy. You see he had to get me with a shell, he could not come and do anything like that himself. There was a German who would not say "Me comarade," so now he can't speak at all. See the joke? He is dead.

Well, I must tell you we had some rough old time around Arras, but I guess Old Fritz got rather more than he gave us. I can't grumble. I had a good innings out there. I put five months in the front line without a miss and that is more than a good few of the fellows out in France to-day can say. But, believe me, I was glad to get out of it, as it was getting too much lie murder for me. You simply could not help killing, as they were so thick. My God! I saw some awful sights over there.

Say, you must excuse bad writing. I am lying on my back. Will write more when I get up. Love from

KINGSTON LADY SEES THINGS WHILE FISHING

A lady from Kingston secured one of the surprises of her life on Friday evening when she was fishing at Collins Bay. She and another friend were patiently waiting for a bite when she felt a strong tug at her line. Thinking that it was a large-sized pike, she pulled hard. Unfortunately, however, owing to her excitement, she fell in, and when her line was pulled in it was found that she had hooked a snake.

Fools learn nothing from wise men but wise men learn much from fools.

TROUBLE IN

Imperial City, and both the French and British consuls were inside and could not get out.—They went to propose peace to one faction, the other side agreeing to observe a truce pending the negotiations, but the fray was resumed while the officials parleyed.

Provisions Scarce.

On Sunday Prof. Robertson wrote: "The gates are still shut, and only a little rice has been brought in. Vegetables are being hauled up over the wall in many different places."

Window Broken by Bullet.

The wife of one of the professors in the university says in a letter to Mrs. Robertson: "When a bullet comes through the window where one's children are undressing, it gives one a queer feeling. Charlie, Jr., was only two feet from it. We were not long in getting everyone into the rooms on the south side of the house. Both sides had been using shells which have exploded over the city, wrecking houses, and the hospital is full of wounded. One of the worst features of the affair has been the burning. All the section about Whong Cheu has gone up in flames. The soldiers used kerosene. They acted atrociously, if all reports are true. The W. F. M. S. moved their girls' school out here. They are occupying No. 8, kitchens, sixty odd. The Chun Lung Kai people had a terrible experience for two nights, and then came out here. Mrs. R. J. D. was al in. The last night they did not attempt to undress, but stayed in the dining-room, barricading it with mattresses. The British and French consuls have been doing all they can to make terms, and today there is some hope that things will subside."

TURN IN SOCKS.

The Canadian Kitchener League are preparing for another shipment to the trenches, on Tuesday, June 12, and they ask all those with socks on hand to please turn them in before this date.

A thing that someone doesn't find fault with is seldom worth having.

MARKET PRICES

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

The market this morning was well attended and prices as a general rule were lower. Eggs were to be had at 38c but the most of the ladies received 39 for their offerings. Butter was very much lower and it was easy to get good butter for 42 while there were lots offered at 40c.

The fowl market was plentifully supplied with hens and prices were much easier. There were good 5 lb. birds to be had at $1.25 and a few ducks could be had for $1.50. The few turkeys that were on sale did not appeal to the buyers being as a rule poorly fed and not properly dressed.

Hogs are quoted at $15.00 for next week's delipery.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:—

Flour was again on the downward trend during the week, a decline of 50c per barrel having been recorded in Manitoba first patents. Ontario winter wheat flour showed a similar downward tendency for the most part, but in some instances was quoted even higher than Manitoba flour. Sugar held in steady position during the week with demand still light. Encouraging reports continue to come forward of the way production is mounting in raw sugar in Cuba. There are a larger number of sugar factories grinding than there were at the same time last year. If the rainy season holds off a while longer there is every possibility that the production of raw sugar will be fairly heavy.

All dairy products were in easier tone. Production of butter is heavier under the stimulus given by plenty of grass feed to the milk producers. Production of eggs is also greater, and there was a tendency to lower prices. Cheese was quoted down. During the week the purchasing commission for the British Government named the price they would pay for Canadian cheese at 21¾c per lb. Commission men take it for granted that this price will establish the basis at which the factories will sell their product. In some quarters lower prices prevailed.

Advances have been recorded in various soap lines, including laundry soap, washing powders and soap chips. Baking powder, soda and yeast have been altered upward. Rices are quite generally quoted at higher levels. Teas were quieter under the stimulus of recent arrivals, but the situation has not changed materially. Business in wholesale grocery lines was slower during the week than it has been for several months past.

A DAILY NOVELETTE

"Ysobel," said Gobsen Gobs, the former millionaire pepper grower, "if anyone had told me how nice it would be to be poor once again, I wouldn't 'a' believed 'em. Another helping of corned beef and cabbage, Ysobel, please."

"Yes, Gobsen," replied his wife. "After all, it's the plain substantial foods that are the plainest and most substantial."

"To look at us now Ysobel, so happy and contented," went on Gobs, "who would think that we had once been used to gold door knobs and diamond pointed toothpicks?"

"Nobody," replied his wife instantly.

"I know now that only the poor are truly happy," mused Gobs. "The simple things of life are all that are worth while. More corned beef and cabbage, please. Hee, Hee! Just to think—time was when I didn't have lark's fin soup every meal, I . . ."

II.

He awoke, still the millionaire pepper king.

"Ysobel," he said to his wife at breakfast. "I had the cutest dream last night. I dreamed—hello, how's this? Buckwheat cakes? How dare you? Where's my caviar omelet?"

"There doesn't seem to be any caviar in the house, Gobsen," explained his wife, timidly, "and the chef thought a few nice buckwheat cakes——"

"Won't eat 'em!" stormed Gobsen Gobs, and rushed from the house in a fury.

AT THE FRONT

It was a battle to make the strong tremble and the weak climb trees. Only there were no trees to climb, for the great guns had reduced them all to toothpicks.

Shells filled with lizzyite dropped apparently from the clouds and dug holes in the earth large enough for 400 elephants to stand on their hind legs in.

Occasionally it would appear to be raining in downpours, but it was only bullets from the thousand shots a second scowitzers.

Everywhere were flashes, spurts, and sheets of flame.

"Tom," said Agnew Wartle with a gulp, "I think I'm sorry I'm at the front."

"Sorry!" replied his brother Tom with a grim laugh. "Why?"

"Well, it always hurts my eyes to be so near the screen," exclaimed Agnew.

"I'd just as soon move back further myself," acknowledged Tom. "This man with the trombone gets on my ears."

And they moved back to row M, while the moving picture moved on.

English Lord of American Stage

(The Porcupine)

England, which has given to the stage Shakespeare, Sheridan, Congrove, Goldsmith, Colman, Farquhar, Milman, Bulwer Barrie and Pinero, does not contain in all its literature such a character as the "English Lord" of the American theatre. No one in England has ever seen a Lord with any likeness to the American caricature. But he "goes his way," and it has proved a profitable one for the actor who specializes, so to speak, in stage English Lords. Will the procession ever end? Can any one halt it? Can the silly ass Lord change? It does not seem probable, and I can hear him now in reverie as he calls out, "Come now, my bally old top, and watch me making love to the blooming heiress, and, my word, it will be ripping!"

DEMENTED MAN FOUND LYING ON RAILWAY TRACK

William Joyce, who gives his address as Brock Township, was brought to Lindsay yesterday by County Constable Conquergood and after a hearing before Magistrate P. P. Moore, was remanded for a week and placed in charge of Governor Balfour at the jail.

It appears that Joyce's mind is slightly unbalanced and Thursday afternoon he was found lying across the tracks on the C.P.R. line near Grass Hill station. Luckily the eyesight of the engineer was good and the train was brought to a stop in time to prevent the man being crushed to death.

IDLE OFFICERS TO BE DROPPED

HUNDREDS OF LIEUTENANTS IN MILITIA UNITS TO BE REDUCED.

According to a recent order-in-council, some hundreds of unqualified lieutenants on the strength of the various militia units throughout the Dominion will be stripped of their commissions. This action has been forced pon the military authorities bp the militia units themselves because of their having many times the authorized number of lieutenants on the strength of the Canadian militia.

The order will not affect the higher ranks, or lieutenants at present attending the schools of instruction to qualify for their commissions. It will be promulgated in every military district, in order to disqualify those men who have not taken any measures to qualify for their commissions, but are simply using the uniform as an excuse for not enlisting for overseas service.

It is thought probable that similar instructions will be issued by the department to affect the higher ranks.

COMBINED CHEMICAL AND

at all times. Reference was made to the failure of the Pembroke water service on Wednesday, when damage was done to the extent of $150,000, and which would have been very small had a pumper been available. The chemical attachment itself would cost, ready to attach to any apparatus, $675.

After Ald. McIntyre, Ald. Taylor and Ald. Weir had spoken in favor of the pumper, Ald. Duncan thought the chemical and hose would be the proper thing, as Peterborough was practically assured of a good water pressure at all times.

Ald. Stratton pointed out that the city had expended about $700 of the $10,000 appropriated for this purpose, and the Council would have to live within it.

Mayor Duffus wanted to get the best apparatus but must not saddle a deficit on next year's Council.

After both representatives had been called back to answer questions relative to their trucks and the possibility of future changes being made, talk was indulged in by the aldermen.

Ald. Stratton thought that the best buy was the combination chemical and hose truck, and the pumper could come with a future piece of apparatus.

Ald. Smith moved that the city purchase from the American La France Engine Co. a combination chemical and hose truck with equipment as per specifications, the machine to be of type 12 and to be equipped with Dayton tires, the price to be $8800 and delivery to be within the time set.

Ald. Duncan seconded the motion, which carried.

POINTS TO CONSIDER WHEN PURCHASING A RAILWAY TICKET

A Canadian Pacific Railway ticket does not represent merely a means of transportation between given points. It, in addition, provides the traveller with every comfort and convenience developed by modern railway science. THE WEIGHT OF ICE

To find the weight of ice, as requested by a reader, multiply width, length and thickness in inches and divide by 30. The result gives the number of pounds. A cake of ice 10 by 10 by 12 inches equals 1200, divided by 30 equals 40 pounds.

BRITISH AGAIN ADVANCE LINE SOUTH OF MESSINES AND TAKE MORE PRISONERS

Artillery Still Active on Both Sides and Hostile Raiding Parties Are Repulsed---Germans Driven Out of Positions---Lord Northcliffe Reaches America.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 11. — An official statement says there was considerable activity on both sides during the night east of Epehy. Bodies of hostile troops assembling in this area were dispersed by our fire. We made a successful raid last night to the southwest of Lebassee.

Much damage was done to enemy trenches and mine galleries, and 18 prisoners were captured. Parties of our troops also raided German positions east of Vermelles and south of Armentieres. They inflicted a number of casualties on the enemy. Our own and the enemy's artillery showed great activity last night south of Ypres.

Our line has again been advanced slightly south of Messines.

Lord Northcliffe Arrives.

Lord Northcliffe, commercial representative of the British Government, arrived in the United States on the American steamship St. Paul.

GEN. BYNG GIVES UP COMMAND

IN HIS FAREWELL ADDRESS SPEAKS HIGHLY OF CANADIANS.

(By Stewart Lyon.)

Canadian Headquarters in France, June 11.—The Canadians in France are no longer "the Byng Boys." Sir Julian Byng bade good-bye to his associates at Headquarters yesterday. Before his departure the Corps Commander issued a special order, in which he said:

"In bidding good-bye to the corps, I find it very difficult to give expression to the feelings of pride and affection which dominate all other sentiments. During the year of my command the unvarying success in battle, the progress in training and in discipline, and the unswerving devotion and loyalty of all ranks are features which stand out prominently in the history of the corps. That history will last forever, and my association with you in the making of it is a joy that can never be impaired."

The men in the ranks, as well as the officers, with whom he was more intimately associated, regret deeply his departure.

MR. PATENAUDE QUITS CABINET

SECRETARY OF STATE OPPOSED TO CONSCRIPTION FROM FIRST.

OTTAWA, June 11.—Hon. E. L. Patenaude, Secretary of State in the Borden Government, has resigned, and his resignation has been accepted by Sir Robert Borden. When the Cabinet Council broke up early on Saturday afternoon, Sir Robert Borden was asked as to the truth of a report that the French-Canadian members of the Cabinet had resigned and he said there was nothing in it. It is understood that a few hours later Mr. Patenaude's letter of resignation was sent to the office of the Prime Minister, and that it was almost immediately accepted. The reason for Mr. Patenaude's step is his opposition to conscription.

SUIT STARTED AGAINST OWNER OF EXAMINER

Mr. R. M. Glover Called on To Complete Purchase of Newspaper.

HEIRS CLAIM SUM OF $40000

That Amount Is Alleged To Be Still Owing the Late J. R. Stratton Estate.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, June 11.—Action is being taken at Osgoode Hall by four legatees under the will of the late Hon. J. R. Stratton for an order compelling Mrs. Eliza Jane Stratton, widow, and R. M. Glover, trustees of the Estate, to take proceedings to compel R. M. Glover to complete the purchase of the interest of J. R. Stratton in the Peterborough Examiner. Under the will, R. M. Glover was given the option to purchase this interest for $50,000. Of this $10,000 was to be in cash and the balance to be paid within a year of the death of Mr. Stratton or by April 19th, 1917.

It is claimed that $40,000 is still owing and that the non payment of this sum materially prejudices the legatees.

LIBERALS IN TORONTO FOR CONSCRIPTION

Rousing Mass Meeting Is Held in That City Saturday Evening.

LEADERS FAVOR DRAFT.

Michael Clark, M.P., and N. W. Rowell Were the Chief Speakers.

TORONTO, June 11.—By attending in thousands the great rally at Massey Hall, Saturday night, in response to the call of their leaders, Toronto Liberals demonstrated that they, at least, will respect no party barrier when Canada and the empire are in danger. That party ties and affiliations will not alienate them from performing their supreme duty to their homeland in time of peril was manifest in the infectious wave of patriotic enthusiasm that swept from floor to ceiling of the crowded auditorium. There was not the clamor and unrulliness that sometimes characterize great demonstrations, but the solemn discussion of earnest and determined men of a national crisis, and, from the crucible of opinion went forth to the rest of Canada and the leaders of the peo-

ATTORNEY GENERAL LUCAS HAS BEEN ASKED TO INVESTIGATE DEFUNCT CORDAGE COMPANY

Matter Recently Called to Attention of Department and no Decision Has Yet Been Reached---Rumurs Should be Set at Rest.

A request has been made to the authorities at Toronto to have the affairs of the Peterborough Cordage Co. investigated and it is understood that the authorities propose to take the matter up in the public interest. This investigation will no doubt set at rest rumors that have been circulating for some time in that connection. Attorney General Lucas to whom the matter has been referred, has not yet returned an answer.

The old Cordage Company the affairs of which are just now being wound up in court had a stormy and a checkered career. It was organized with a flourish of trumpets and a long list of gilt-edged promises and work was started on July 10, 1902. The avowed intention was to manufacture 10,000 pounds of binder twine, a day, this output to be doubled in a month, and 18,000 pounds of rope a day. The farmers were led to believe that the price of binder twine for them would be cut in two and that meant considerable of a saving every year. Stockholders all over the country were interested in the venture.

On November 3 the corporation found itself in deep water and the directors held a meeting. It was decided to issue stock to the value of $250,000 this to be used as a working capital to tide them over the rocks.

Like Finnegan's train it was a case of "on again off again," mostly off and on November 2, 1911, the final rock was struck and the plant went into bankruptcy for good. It was taken over by the International Harvester's Company a few weeks later.

The stockholders were naturally indignant at the failure and in 1902 when the affairs were in one of their periodical spasms a petition was circulated asking the then Attorney General to hold an investigation in order to satisfy those interested that everything was regular or to establish the contrary. Nothing came of this request but there has been a change of government since that time and the chances are that the matter will now be taken up.

Gunner McCamus went overseas with a Toronto University battery, and has been at the front for several months. He was through the battle of Vimy Ridge. BRITISH AND AMERICANS ARE IN ACCORD AS TO AIMS IN MAKING WAR ON GERMANS

Former Answers Request of Russia for Statement and President Wilson Explains Object of United States to Government of New Republic

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 11. — Great Britain has sent Russia a note in reply to the latter's request for a statement of the British war aims. The note, although not made public yet, is stated to be in general agreement with President Wilson's note to Russia.

Mr. Wilson's Statement.

President Wilson, in a communication to the new government of Russia, has made plain the war aims of the United States and its position on "no annexations, no indemnities."

"No territory must change hands except for the purpose of securing those who inhabit it a fair chance of life and liberty," says the communication.

"No indemnities must be insisted on except those that constitute payment for manifest wrong done.

"No readjustments of power must be made, except such as will tend to secure the future peace of the world and the future welfare and happiness of its people."

In unmistakable terms President Wilson declared against Germany's proposal to restore the "status quo" before the war.

"It was the status quo ante out of which this iniquitous war issued forth," he says, "the power of the Imperial German Government within the empire and its widespread domination and influence outside of that empire.

"That status must be altered in such fashion as to prevent any such hideous thing from ever happening again."

CANADIANS USE BURNING OIL

DRUMS FILLED WITH IT LAUNCHED AGAINST ENEMY FRONT.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Headquarters in France (via London), June 11. — The raid of Saturday morning, it is now known, resulted in the infliction of far more serious losses on the enemy than at first estimated, while our casualties were relatively light, considering the number of men engaged and the depth to which the enemy's position was penetrated. In one section of the front, it is stated in the official report, thirty dead were counted and twelve prisoners were taken by our men, whose losses were only two killed and five wounded. If the enemy's loss along the entire front was in the same proportion to ours on this small portion, the raid must have cost the Germans more casualties than any affair on this part of the line since the battle of Vimy Ridge.

A new method of warfare, used by the Canadians for the first time, was the projection, before the assault, of two hundred drums of burning oil into part of the enemy front.

ENNISMORE WELCOMES BACK ITS FIRST RETURNED HERO

Gunner Perdue Presented With a Flattering Address by Rev. Father McGuire and With a Purse of Gold.

On Thursday evening, the people of Ennismore Township were present in large numbers to give a welcoming cheer to Gunner John Perdue, their first returned soldier, Rev. Father McGuire acted as chairman and, in a flattering address welcomed the returned hero. The address was accompanied by the presentation of a purse of gold.

Gunner Perdue made a suitable reply but modestly refrained from telling his experiences. He thanked Father McGuire and the audience for their kindly thought in making his home-coming such a pleasant one and assured them that, although soon to depart for the West, he would carry away with him the remembrance of one of the most enjoyable evenings he had ever spent.

Speeches suitable to the occasion were made by Mr. John Telford and Mr. Noble Kelly of Bridgenorth. As Mr. John Young, reeve of the township, was unavoidably absent, Clerk Moloney was called upon instead. Mr. Michael Perdue also said a few words. A splendid musical program was then given by the choir, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Telford and Mr. Jim Jopling, Bridgenorth. After three cheers for Gunner Perdue, the evening was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Address.

To Gunner John Perdue:

On this the happy occasion of your return from the blood-stained battle fields of France, we feel ourselves called upon to express, in some way, our admiration for your manhood, which felt and responded to Duty's sacred call.

We have known you as a child in our public schools, we have seen you grow physically strong and watched you pass from our public into our high school; there you were always ready and willing to do what seemed to you the best. Boys and girls, teachers and villagers found in you no mean principles and, as we tonight look back on those days, we realize that, though many a prank you played, yet you expected us to smile as you did, when we "played back."

Whether from books or not, while still young the impulse of adventure took possession of you and, with little warning, you left us, as many another has done, for the golden op-

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, JUNE 11, 1917

THE OPENING OF THE TRENT CANAL.

IT IS REALLY UNFORTUNATE that the question of opening the Trent Canal is to be made a political bludgeon by the party in opposition and that the rights of the people are to be placed secondary to the interests of a railway corporation, not from any apparent principle that is involved, but purely as a partisan strategy. The Liberal party in this district have exhausted the canal as a political asset, and now they are willing to discard it as an orange that has been sucked dry and consigned to the garbage can. Coddling a railway company promises more in the way of reward that attempting to make the canal what it should have been years ago, a highway at least from this city to Lake Ontario. The completed canal will be a business rival of the railway that now stands in the way of its ultimate purpose. The railway's opposition is easily explained, while the reason for any politician taking the side of the latter rather than of the other is likely to be correctly surmised by the people.

The Government at Ottawa, as Capt. Burnham has been at pains to ascertain, is in favor of the early opening of the canal, in the construction of which millions have been expended. Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, is, to put it mildly, indifferent. He attempts to place the responsibility for delay upon the railway corporation. Mr. Cochrane has power enough behind him to bring the railway to time in short order, and the people most directly interested in the canal will insist that that power be exercised.

Mr. Cochrane has been nearly six years in office and he knows the situation. This matter has been repeatedly urged upon him for three years or more, and his latest pronouncement is to the effect that it is no further advanced now than it ever has been.

Even if the country is at war, that is no reason why everything in the shape of public improvement shall come to a standstill. The canal completed is required to relieve the very conditions that the war has created, and it is past belief that anyone should advocate the part of the railway corporation that holds the key to the situation and which blocks the way of a utility owned by the public and designed as a rival to the railway in the matter of the transportation of supplies.

The opening of the Trent Canal will go a long way toward relieving the coal situation in Peterborough. Lake towns in Canada are not complaining of such a shortage of fuel as exists here. Coal can be brought in by boat while the railways find excuses for delay in pleading a shortage of cars.

There should be a large deputation to Ottawa next Friday to take this matter up with the Cabinet. The member for West Peterborough must be supported in his efforts on behalf of his constituents. No political opponent, actual or in prospect, should be allowed to make capital for himself out of this issue. The matter is one that should be disposed of by the department of which Mr. Cochrane is head. If the latter fails in his duty, then the Government can be depended upon to take the matter out of his hands, if the mandate from the deputation is deemed sufficient to warrant such a course.

THE MAN WITH THE SINGLE TALENT.

A CERTAIN CAPITALIST, according to the parable, on the eve of setting out on a long journey, resolved to do something handsome with three of the servants whom he left behind. To one he loaned ten talents of silver, to another five, and to the third one. On his return he demanded an accounting. The first two were able to show an increase as the result of successful investments, while the third, who had kept his money hidden in a napkin, was able to do nothing better than to return the original amount rusty with disuse.

We all know what happened to the servant who lacked commercial enterprise. He was without an excuse. The opportunities for the small investor were as ample in those ancient days as they are in modern times. He even lacked the support of the specious pleadings of a newspaper, which, had it been in existence, would probably have argued that lacking the fad of a penny bank system in the then educational curriculum he was helpless to do anything.

No man these days finds his means so limited that he he is unable to save more than a few cents at a time. If he wishes to start a bank account for his children, he can easily spare them as much as a dollar at a time, and let them deal directly with the banks, all of which will be glad to receive their deposits. The children will be given some practical idea of business, the system of legitimate banking will be maintained in its integrity, and the public schools will be saved from a useless burden

The penny banks have been on trial for over fifteen years. Even at that age the institution finds itself unable to walk alone, and special legislation has to be invoked to come to its assistance and bolster it up with artificial props.

The conscientious objectors to penny banks are not necessarily wastrels at heart. It is all a question as to the most desirable method of saving. It does not follow, either, that because the penny banks can show a total of $352,000 in deposits that the country is just that much richer. A man with $1000 in a particular bank is no better off than if he had the same amount of money in another. It is not fair to infer that if a man does not own a house and lot he is a financial failure. There are men in this city who live in rented residences and yet have ten times the price of a home of their own tied up in other investments.

Why attempt to force penny banks upon an indifferent public? The fact that there is no popular demand for them has been clearly demonstrated. Why attempt to introduce a fad into the school system when there are other matters of vastly more moment to engage the attention of the Board of Education? One technical school would be of more practical value than all the penny banks in existence. The members of the Board of Education will soon find themselves confronted with the grave problem of providing more school accommodation for the children of Peterborough. At present all the rooms are crowded to the limit.

The members of the Board of Education are all hard-headed business men. The system that they have built up is all that is required to establish the fact that they were worthy of the trust the public has so long reposed in them. In all their transactions in the past they have been able to act independently of the advice so freely offered them by The Examiner that would have blindly led them into error. No one need wonder if in the work that now lies before them they are disposed to ignore all suggestions from that quarter.

SIR WILFRID'S SETTING STAR.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO CONCEIVE how Sir Wilfrid Laurier can longer remain the leader of the Liberal party. His following is hopelessly divided on the conscription question, and even his chief lieutenants appear to be against him. If Sir Wilfrid led his party in another general election the Liberals could not dream of success outside of the one province, which is already conceded. Sir Wilfrid's star, once the brightest in the constellation, is now on the decline, and the indications are that it will set behind a cloud.

"Let Sir Wilfrid Laurier do it," is the burden of the contention of the Globe. Leave it to that journal and the chieftain is the nation's last hope in a crisis. Make him Premier of the Dominion and Quebec will immediately fall into line behind him and do its duty with the other provinces.

So that is the high price Sir Wilfrid demands for his services, which the disinterested patriots would render voluntarily. No Conservative newspaper could possibly present the Liberal leader in a worse light than that. If Sir Wilfrid Laurier has that much influence with the people of Quebec, he should use it even in his capacity as a public citizen. The great trouble in Canada since the beginning of the war is that there have been too many just such lip patriots as the Globe represents Sir Wilfrid Laurier to be, too many men who refuse to serve the Empire as privates in the ranks, but who are not slow to make boastful claims of what they would be able to accomplish if they were commissioned as officers. Sir Wilfrid would, according to the Globe, shine as a general, but he refuses to put on the uniform of a private.

Whether there is a union government formed or not, a general election under any circumstances, dividing the country, as it would be sure to do, would be nothing short of a national misfortune. Conscription would be the leading issue, and the silent vote would decide the problem. The slacker might preserve a neutral attitude during the campaign, but it is not hard to conjecture how he would vote. The father of the slacker would support him. If the federal franchise were extended to women by special Act of Parliament, the new voters would divide on the issue just as the men would. The mother who did not raise her boy to be a soldier would vote against the draft.

The great objection to an election on such an issue is that he men most directly interested in conscription, the soldiers themselves, would not have a chance to record their votes.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

IT NOW APPEARS that the fiftieth anniversary of Confederation will be marked by the introduction of daylight saving, and that on July 1 next all the clocks in the Dominion will be put ahead one hour, the change to remain in force during the summer months. This will do away with the conflict in time which always worked against the success of daylight saving when introduced by municipalities.

The great objection to checkerboard daylight saving was not the conflict which arose, but the fact that it was really illegal when applied to the employment of children. The law specifically provides that no child shall go to work before 7 o'clock in the morning, standard time, so that any factory employing children from what was really 6 a.m. was violating the statute.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

ALL THE REFERENDUMS, all the general elections in the world will not win the war.

• • • •

CONSCRIPTION in war time is better than conscription in peace as the Hun has it.

• • • •

ADMIT THAT Sir Wilfrid Laurier is a great leader, and the bitter fact remains that he lacks followers.

• • • •

MR. R. R. HALL'S LETTER in today's issue discloses the plan of campaign before the big drive begins.

• • • •

"PEACE WITHOUT indemnity" is especially significant when it is recalled that the phrase was made in Germany.

• • • •

THE MAN WHO WANTS a referendum on conscription is just as certain to vote against it as the man who refuses to enlist.

• • • •

THE MAN SO JEALOUS for his personal liberty is not apparently alarmed about the liberty that is threatened by Kaiserism.

• • • •

THE MEN who would vote against conscription are not representative of the manhood they profess so much anxiety to protect.

• • • •

SPEAKING of farm help, the scarcity will be painfully felt if the quack grass persists in asserting itself in some of these amateur gardens.

• • • •

THE MEN who are held to their duty in the trenches know something of what compulsion means. Then why not compulsion for the slackers at home?

• • • •

THE LOCAL MEN who are willing to serve their country only under the shoulder straps of an officer have Sir Wilfrid Laurier as an illustrious example.

• • • •

THE BOY WHO commits the extravagance of indulging in an ice-cream soda can salve his tender conscience with the reflection that if there was a penny bank handy he would not have sinned.

APPRECIATION OF SCOUTING

The National Union of Teachers accorded an impressive and enthusiastic reception to the ideals of the Boy Scouts movement last month at their conference in Manchester. The chairman of the Education Committee at Chiswick said that after many years work amongst teachers he thought that scoutmasters were showing the way to schoolmasters in the all important matter of character training. In South Africa and other overseas Dominions Scouting is gaining ground with educationalists and the French Government, the Portuguese Governments and other foreign countries are investigating the systems employed by Boy Scouts with a view to encouraging the work in their respective countries. In Russia the Czar himself gave the movement every encouragement but unfortunately the Government of Finland was to say the least not sympathetic with the tastes of the inhabitants nor had he ever learned signalling. He supressed the lads as revolutionaries when he saw them at work. He has since been reported to have died "somewhat suddenly" and there is every hope that scouting will revive and flourish under the new regime.

THE FARMER AND HIS AUTO

"I never had any luck," complained the retired farmer. "I own a good car, two years old, that I want to dispose of, in order to get a bigger one. I don't like to trade it in to a dealer, so I have been trying to sell it myself, and have had several prospective customers, but they all got away.

"Whenever I take my family out in the car it behaves beautifully, but just as sure as I want to show it to a possible buyer the things throws some fits. Yesterday I told Cumback about the boat, saying that it was as good as new and in perfect order, and in the evening he came around to take a ride and see how it acted. All day the blamed car had been working as smooth as the solar system, but, when Cumback entered, it bucked and heaved until he was seasick, and he said he wouldn't be found dead in a junk yard with such a car, and he had his opinion of the man who would try to work off such a thing on a friend. He actually had the money with him to buy the car, and if it ha dbehaved respectably he would have taken it home with him.

"Most of us have had that kind of trouble at one time or another," observed the liveryman. "Anyone who has dealt in horses knows all there is to know about such perversity. When Judge Bingfelter died I bought his family horse. The judge had driven it around for years, and everybody in town knew it was perfectly gentle and reliable.

"I had the nag all slicked up and put a nice harness on him, and drove him around, and he surely was something to be proud of. He had style and gait, and was absolutely gentle and foolproof, and that was an unusual combination.

"I believe to this day that Dobbin had the situation sized up to a hair. He had the best box stall in the barn, wore a glad harness and had all the delicacies of the season to eat. He wanted to stay right where he was, and so he knocked the bottom out of every sale I framed.

"Grigg, the lawyer, came around one day and said he'd always wanted that horse, and if I'd sell him reasonably he believed he'd buy. He'd like to see Dobbin hitched up once, just to see that the valuable animal was in his usual form. He was standing by the box stall at the time, and that steed took in every word. I hitched him up to my best buggy and Grigg and I climbed in. I felt that the money was as good as in my pocket, and the price I was asking was a long one.

"Well, sir, we hadn't driven a block before Dobbin gave a whoop and pushed his hind feet through the dashboard of the buggy. Grigg was so scared that he yelled for the fire department and jumped out of the buggy, dislocating a shoulder or something, and he has been suing me for damages ever since.

"It sounds like a fairy tale, but every time I tried to show Dobbin off to a customer the ornery critter would back the buggy into a tree or kick holes through the radiator or bust something, and I finally had to raffle him off to get rid of him at all."

Wit and Wisdom

The Dog that Failed

When Wilkinson went to his office one day last week he felt calm and contented. He hadn't any need to worry about his wife's loneliness any more, for he had bought a capital watchdog for her.

But, alas! when he arrived home his wife met him with the news that the dog had gone.

Eh," said Wilkinson, "did he break the chain, then?"

"No," she replied, "but a great ugly looking tramp came here and acted so impudently that I let the dog loose. But instead of tearing the tramp to pieces the nasty dog went off with him."

"Great Scot" said Wilkinson, "that must have been the tramp I bought him from!"

No Danger

A few days ago a well dressed and very charming young lady hailed a four wheeler there being no taxi in sight. Just as she was getting in she noticed that the horse seemed inclined to be frisky.

He was jumping about and switching his tail in a way that alarmed her. She was a timid little thing.

So she addressed a few words to the ancient Jehu:

"I hope," she said, smiling bravely, "that you will not run away with me."

The cabby sighed mournfully.

"No, mum," he replied, "I have a wife and seven kids at home already!"

His Best Ally

The young physician was tired, but as he settled back in his easy chair, and his newly wedded wife took a seat beside him, he asked affectionately:

"And has my little wife been lonely?"

"Oh, no," she said, animatedly; "at least, not very. I've found something to busy myself with."

"Indeed!" he said. "What is it?"

"Oh, I'm organizing a class. A lot of young girls and married women are in it, and we're teaching each other how to cook."

"What do you do with the things you cook?"

"We send them to the neighbors."

"Dear little woman," said he, "always thoughtful of her husband's practice."

The Artless Child.

Phoebe was bored. In all the six long years of her life she had never spent such a miserable day. Circumstances at last grew too strong for her, and she cried. She was one of those who do not often cry, but who, when they do, make no secret of it. In short, Phoebe nearly lifted the nursery ceiling off.

Upstairs came Phoebe's mother, already dressed in her smartest clothes ready to have tea with a friend.

"Why, what's the matter, Phoebe?" she asked.

Phoebe, standing hopelessly, in the middle of the nursery, only howled the louder, and refused to see anything cheerful about life.

Lifting the unhappy child up in her arms and cuddling the tearstained little face against her own, the mother walked over to the mirror.

"Just look, Phoebe, at that ugly little face in the lokking-glass."

Phoebe immediately became interested and stopped crying.

"Which one, mother?" she asked.

Poor Bings!

It was very late when Mr. Bings came home. To his great annoyance he found that he had forgotten his latchkey and was obliged to rng the bell.

Mrs. Bings opened the window.

"Who's there " sh inquired.

"It's me, love!" said Bings.

"Where have you been at this time of night "

"I've been sitting up with a sick friend, my dear."

"Oh, you have, have you?" snorted Mrs. Bings. "Well, you'd better go right back to him. You ought to be ashamed of yourself to desert him at this hour."

Then she slammed the window down and retired,

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: I am not at all surprised that Mr. Burnham, M.P., has misconceived the object of the meeting of representatives of municipalities along the line of the Trent Canal that was held in the Council Chamber last week and presided over by Mayor Duffus.

The object of the meeting was either to get a swing put in the Grand Trunk Bridge at Campbellford or to have a high level bridge erected at that point so that there would be an unobstructed waterway from Peterboro to Trenton.

To accomplish this purpose as speedily as possible the Mayor was authorized to organize a deputation of representatives along the line of the canal to wait on the Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, and to point out to him the great loss and inconvenience every one on the line of the canal was suffering from by reason of this Grand Trunk Bridge blocking the way.

A little bit of foresight on the part of Mr. Burnham during this last five years would have avoided all this trouble, as there was nothing to have prevented a high level bridge being built at this point long ago, had Mr. Burnham been alive to his duties and urged the Government to have this obstruction removed by the time the canal between Peterboro and Trenton was completed.

Mr. Burnham in his explanation which appeared in your Saturday evening issue says "Governments expect constituencies and their representatives to look after their own business and our Government is no exception." He therefore acknowledges that he must share the responsibility of this great delay that is taking place in the opening of this canal and the loss that is being borne by every one in not being able to get coal and other necessaries at lower freight rates. He now sees he has committed a blunder and has been short sighted and he is now seeking to throw the blame on the Hon. Frank Cochrane the Minister who has charge of the canal. He has quarrelled with the minister. He wanted this deputation to join in his quarrel, to ignore Mr. Cochrane, treat him with disrespect and go over his head direct to the Prime Minister.

At this meeting I took exception to this course, and said that the deputation would defeat its object if it took this unwise course. I further pointed out that Mr. Cochrane was not unfriendly, and was, I thought, anxious to see the canal completed, and would do what he could to have this unfortunate Grand Trunk Bridge built on a higher level or a swing opening made in the present one as quickly as possible.

I thought this explanation was due to your readers owing to the wild and reckless statements that were made in Mr. Burnham's letter to you, not only against the Grand Trunk, but against the Minister of the Crown he supports in the House of Commons and talks against outside of it in the hope of concealing his shortsightedness.

Yours etc.,
R. R. HALL.

NATURAL HISTORY, A TALE OF A FARMER AND POSSUM

Only Way to Kill Him Is to Beat Him to a Jelly—One the Soldiers Let Go.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

A possum he lived in a tree,
And a jolly old fellow was he,
Took life as he found it
And walked all around it.
Which is the best way, don't you see?

WHAT is called the Virginia possum is found in almost every middle and southern state, but while the farmer often catches sight of foxes, coons and woodchucks he seldom gets a squint at a possum. The animal hardly ever moves out by day, and at night he is very sly. He makes his nest in a hollow tree, hollow log or among the roots of a tree, and he hides it well. He is a poor runner and not much of a fighter, though if he once gets his teeth into a dog he will hang on until killed. It is owing to this grip of his jaws that the fox, the coon and the "chuck" give him half the path when they meet at night. Any one of them can roll him over, but so tough is his hide that they might chew on him for an hour without hurting him.

Near by lived the good Farmer Dwight,
And the possum he went every night,
He went looking for scraps,
And he thought that perhaps
With the dog he'd get up a fight.

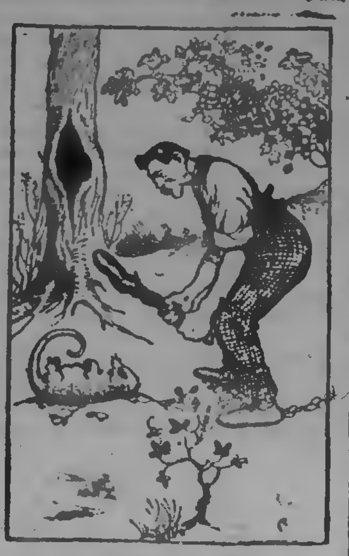
The possum does not wander far from his lair. This is because he is like no other animal in his eating. He will eat fowls, young rabbits, birds, eggs, roots, berries, vegetables of all sorts, scraps from the table, mice, bugs and almost everything else you can think of. He can therefore get his living around any farm. If living near a marsh he will feed on crabs and frogs. If there are snakes on a farm he will thin them out. A fight often takes place between a possum and a blacksnake, but the former is always the winner. It is said that the bite of a rattlesnake will not poison him. In gathering fruit from a tree the possum hangs to a limb by his tail and uses his forefeet to gather with. He can eat more persimmons than any three colored men, but when it comes to the watermelon he doesn't care for it.

He'd pick up a chick now and then
Or strangle a goslin or hen.
He was after the best,
And he ate it with zest
Before he'd returned to his den.

The two oddest things about the possum is the way he uses his tail to hang by and his "playing dead" when attacked and overcome. If the farmer clubs one to death, or thinks he does, the animal will remain quiet for hours and then get up and walk off. To actually kill him with a club he must be beaten to a jelly. He has a hide on him like a bull, and he has few nerves to feel pain. A bulldog may worry one for an hour after he is supposed to be dead, and he will come to life again and make for his tree.

There were nights in the full of the moon
When he was mistook for a coon,
And the dog made him hump
Around bushes and stump
And get out of that pretty soon.

Naturalists used to assert that when the mother possum had a litter of five the old man turned to and ate up three of them so as to keep the number down where all could make a good living. This has been found to be incorrect. As soon as the house is full of children papa takes his departure and finds another boarding house for himself. They may live or die, but it's nothing to him. It is only at such times that if he meets another daddy possum he will get up a row without the least excuse. He's mad about it, you see; thinks two in the family enough.



"BUT POSSUM HE PLAYED"

Three times he was caught in a trap
And over the head got a rap.
But possum he played,
And dying he stayed
And winked as he woke from his nap.

In the New York zoo several years ago a possum was struck fifteen times with a baseball bat in the hands of a strong man. He went dead, and a man was set to watch him. He was watched for ten hours, but as he stayed dead the watcher went away for half an hour. Upon his return—no possum! The next day the animal was as lively as if he had not been clubbed. During the civil war some Union soldiers captured a possum in Virginia and let him curl his tail over a limb. He was closely guarded for three days and was still "all there" when the boys let him go.

At length 'twas the farmer who said:
"That possum shall sleep with the dead.
I'll catch him once more,
And, b'gosh and galore,
His blood I truly will shed!"

When a fox or coon finds he is discovered at his little game and is chased by the dog two or three times he pulls up stakes and hunts a new neighborhood. Not so with the possum. When he finds a good thing he hangs right on, and the result is that his wife looks for him to come home some morning and he does not show up.

He has eaten of ducklets full ten,
And my goslins are gone from the pen.
He has sucked scores of eggs
And then used his legs
To tote himself homeward again.

At the Cincinnati zoo they put a basket containing six dozen eggs into the cage of the possum. He was willing and went at it. They thought he might suck the whole seventy-two, but he was no hog, and he stopped at fifty. The hole he made in the shell was no larger than a darning needle, and not a shell was broken. Just how much eggnog a possum can drink is not known, but about a gallon would probably do for him.

By thunder, I'll stand it no more,
But dabble my hands in his gore!
I've sworn it and said
That I'd have him dead,
And to life he shall come nevermore!

The stupidity of the possum is shown in the fact that he can be easily trapped. He is not looking for anything of the kind, and it is said that he cannot scent a steel trap like the fox or wolf. A trap set anywhere around the henhouse will eventually get him.

And next morning the captive was there,
And the ax the old man did prepare.
One look he just gave him,
And then he did shave him
And cut him in two, I declare!

Sure Enough.

ONTARIO BABY MADE STRONG

Mrs. Jarvis Says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Cured Her Delicate Child When Nothing Else Could

Mrs. Jarvis, Box 286, Penetang P.O., Ontario, writes: "It is a pleasure to tell you what Dr. Cassell's Tablets have done for my baby. When only five months old he fell ill, and though I had medical advice for him he got worse. I tried several special foods, but none of them would stay on his stomach, and he became so thin that he seemed just skin and bone. He only weighed 10 pounds, and we never thought he could live. But chancing to hear of Dr. Cassell's Tablets I got some for baby, and am thankful I did. He is a bonny boy now, quite cured, and weighs 25 pounds at twelve months old."

COSTLY FOREST FIRES

CAUSED LOSSES OF $9,000,000 DURING LAST SUMMER.

More Attention is to be Paid to the Work of Preventing These Great Conflagrations as the Country Desires to Conserve Its Valuable Natural Resources in Timber.

MORE attention is to be given by the Provincial Governments to forest protection. Canada lost $9,000,000 by forest fires in 1916, more than six times as much as has been spent on forest protection work. Most of these fires were preventable. In British Columbia, on account of the efficiency of the forest-protection service, and somewhat more favorable weather conditions, the number of fires last year was only about one-half that of the preceding year. Yet a substantial loss was suffered, and a better protection service would have been profitable.

The presence of a protective force, the construction of trails, and lookout towers connected with headquarters by telephone are merely for the purpose of dealing efficiently with the fires that break out. A more important measure is to curtail the quantity of dry material on the forest floor, reducing the danger of fire, and diminishing the heat of fires that do start, so that less injury is done to the trees and soil.

The lumbering slash makes such a hot fire that the outlook for another tree crop is very poor. The tree seedlings and the uncut trees are generally destroyed or greatly damaged. A most important part of forest-production work is to dispose of this slash as soon as possible after the lumbering operations have been finished. In this slash disposal the lumber companies have been urged to co-operate with the forest service.

Many destructive fires have been started by settlers using careless methods in the burning of slash produced in land clearing. The advice that is now given to them by fire rangers as to the proper methods of burning their brush, and the permit system, has reduced the danger from this source.

The protective work that has been done by the railway companies under regulations issued by the Board of Railway Commissioners relating to the clearing of rights of way, the construction of fire guards, the patrolling of the line during the dry season, etc., has been effective. This legislation requires the railway companies to extinguish fires starting within 300 feet of the track unless a company can show that it did not cause the fire. The principle throughout is that the railway companies themselves must undertake the work of protecting the public against damage by railway fires.

The Ontario Legislature has passed a law to preserve the forests of the Province from destruction by fire. It provides for the creation of fire districts, and a close season within which time fires shall not be set out in the districts except under permit and under close supervision of an officer. It also provides for the appointment of a provincial forester.

In the practical working out of the bill, the northern country will be divided into three fire areas or districts, and a supervisor will be appointed to take charge of each district. Under the supervisor will be a fire chief, with his quota of fire rangers.

A departure has been made by the Land, Forest, and Mines Department taking the entire charge of the forest protection. It will be responsible for the operation of the Act, and make a charge on the licensees and permit holders, as a contribution toward the protection of their interests.

The new Act is expected to prevent such disastrous fires as those of 1910, 1911, and 1916, when many lives were sacrificed and many square miles of timber lands razed.

How German Submarine Stopped Canadian Hospital Ship.

How a Canadian hospital ship encountered a German submarine not long ago is related in the following article sent by a London writer:

"After a stormy passage for the first part of the journey, the Canadian hospital ship which arrived here a few days ago ran into fine weather. Ireland would soon be in sight, and the crowd of nurses and the doctors and orderlies aboard were out on deck enjoying the sunshine and the prospect of an early landing. Suddenly a tiny dark object showed away in the middle distance. A moment later a deep 'Boom!' sounded, and with it the whistle of a projectile, which a moment later struck the water with a roar. A wave of excitement swept over the crowd of nurses. Wraps were tossed aside, and every deck chair instantly vacated as every one crowded to the rail. A German submarine was shelling them.

"'The submarine was about four miles off when we sighted it,' stated one of the nurses, relating her experience, 'and from that distance it opened fire. After a shot or two from the undersea craft our captain stopped the ship, and presently — very quickly, indeed—up glided the German, for all the world like a huge black shark. They said the submarine was making 23 or 24 knots an hour. Its speed was much faster than ours. Meanwhile all our boats had been lowered, for though we were a regular hospital ship and protected by The Hague convention, there was no telling what the Germans would do. There have been too many irregular sinkings with them.

"'By this time the submarine was close up. The gun crew stood ready at her cannon, and several figures showed on the conning tower. After a swift circle around our ship the submarine stopped alongside. "Are there any soldiers aboard that vessel?" bellowed a deep voice in fairly good English from the U-boat. It was the commander. Our captain megaphoned back from the bridge that there were not, that we were an ordinary hospital ship carrying nurses, doctors, and a few orderlies, and observing The Hague convention to the letter, as we most certainly were. What the captain stated was gospel. "Well, send your second officer aboard," called back the German commander. So the second officer was sent across in one of the boats. He went alongside and had a short conference with the submarine officer. The German was satisfied, told him he might go back, and shouted to our captain that the ship could proceed.

"'During all this colloquy,' declared the narrator, 'we nurses had felt pretty uncomfortable — thought we were probably booked for the boats, and didn't look forward to such an outing, even on a smooth sea. We had, however, a good look at the submarine and her crew. No name or number was visible on her. My, but she was a rusty, battered-looking craft! Then one of the orderlies taking heart, called out: "Say, you look as though your boat needed a good coat of paint." This seemed to sort of break the ice, and the German made a joking reply. Then, presently the U-boat moved off, at the same time hoisting her flags. A voice from her conning tower shouted: "Safe journey to you."

"'Whereat someone among us called for a cheer. But only half responded. The other nurses declared it was not the thing to do, and for the next day numerous arguments centred around this point. Evidently not all the pirate captains are cutthroats. This man played the game. Though, after all, and quite apart from the illegality of the whole mode of German submarine depredating—he only observed the rules of civilized warfare. And well he might, considering the humanity and downright generosity with which Britain treats the crowd of Germans she has taken prisoner from captured U-boats and zeppelins, and the thousands upon thousands of German officers and soldiers who sleep safer and feed better than our own brave men in khaki.'"

Some Mistake.

"You are not the one who was here when I called last year," said the business visitor, looking down at the fussy little man seated at the desk.

"I am sure I am. I have been here ten years."

"I wouldn't have recognized you."

"There may be a reason for that."

"Yes?"

"Looking you over, I don't believe you are the one who called."

The Way It Works.

"Are riches dangerous?"

"Well, a rich man is apt to get into trouble."

"Explain."

"Brown had always been poor until last year."

"Well, what of that?"

"He got rich, and now he is being sued for alimony."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

BLINDNESS OF BABIES.

ONE-HALF of all the blindness is preventable. One-tenth of all the preventable blindness is due to babies' sore eyes, which is "an inflammatory disease of the conjunctiva usually appearing with the first few days of life and generally due to micro-organisms."

Let us state it again in simpler language. Within two days after the birth of the baby some matter is noticed in the corner of the eyes. Within an hour or two it will be noticed that the eyes are red, and yellow pus is oozing from between the lids. A little later the eyelids are noticed to be puffed. If a little of this pus be placed under the microscope it will be seen that the suppuration is due to pus germs.

Babies' sore eyes is preventable, is contagious, is curable if treatment is started early. If treatment is delayed a single day it may be found that the sight is gone, since the disease runs a very rapid and violent course.

Some mothers think that babies' sore eyes are due to the light or to cold. Some even think that it is due to the conjure put on the baby by some evil person. The first group of mothers laugh at the ignorance and superstition of the second group, but without justice, since their opinion is not nearer the truth than that of those at whom they laugh.

Babies' sore eyes are an infection and are due to pus cocci getting into the eye during birth, at the time of birth, or soon after. Thirty-six years ago an hospital surgeon, by name Crede, noted that one-ninth of the babies born in his hospital developed babies' sore eyes. He commenced the policy of dropping a two per cent. solution of nitrate of silver into the eyes of each baby as soon as it had had its bath. In six years the babies' sore eyes rate in his hospital dropped from one in nine to one in four hundred.

The result of this experience was a new policy in caring for the eyes of a newly-born babe. Immediately after birth the baby is given his bath and his eyes are treated. Each eye is wiped with a piece of absorbent cotton dipped in a saturated solution of boric acid (boiled water will do as well as boric acid solution). A separate pledget of cotton is used for each eye. The cotton is not put back into the solution after touching the eye. Next the eyelids are gently separated with the fingers and one drop or two drops of one per cent. solution of nitrate of silver is dropped into each eye. This is done only once. It is done not to cure sore eyes but to prevent eyes from becoming sore.

If the eyes begin to suppurate the doctor must be sent for without delay. The sight cannot be saved unless treatment is begun at once.

THE CAUSE OF DEAFNESS.

Consanguineous marriages, heredity, infections, fevers, middle ear diseases resulting from colds, sore throats, infections of nose sinuses, and bad tonsils, tuberculosis, and syphilis, accidents and injuries, working at noisy trades, and taking quinine or salicylates in large doses are the causes of deafness.

Where both parents are congenitally deaf the percentage of children congenitally deaf will be large. Where one parent is congenitally deaf such percentage will be small. Where there is a family tendency toward acquired deafness the percentage of "hard of hearing" in the progeny will be large.

Among infectious diseases scarlet fever ranks first as a cause of deafness. The most frequent cause of deafness is neglected earaches, abscesses in ears, chronic colds, and chronic sore throats.

Deafness and persons on the road to deafness should be taught how to lip read.

A boy is to be educated through his playthings. The mother gets a series of different-colored balls. Directing the boy's attention to her lips she says: "Give me the blue ball." "No, that is the red one."

Making use of different-colored objects he can be taught the lip movement for the colors and objects. He will acquire a considerable vocabulary of nouns, principally the names of objects, in a short time, if the mother will talk to him persistently, directing attention to the objects talked about.

Next teach him a vocabulary of verbs by throwing, bringing, carrying, drinking, eating, playing, while descriptive words are spoken and the child's eyes are watching the mother's lips.

Taken into the out-of-door's world he can be taught colors from flowers and [illegible]; shapes and sizes, adjectives, verbs, and adverbs from [illegible]

A deaf child must be constantly entertained, or, better, must have a mind [illegible] occupied. "The deaf look comes on a child's face as the [illegible] of a soul denied expression."

French Women Get the Vote

FRANCE is to grant suffrage to its women. Female electors twenty-eight or more years of age will have a voice in municipal elections in cities of the first and second class on or before July 15 of this year.

This is a stupendous reform, both from the European and Latin perspective. It is positively assured through a substantial majority in both the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate and is to be granted in gratitude and recognition of the devotion and sacrifice of the women of the nation to the cause of France during the war.

Details surrounding these facts were disclosed in a joint interview with Mesdames Schlumberger and Seigfreid, presidents, respectively, of the French Union for Suffrage for Women and the National Council of French Women. This in substance is what they said:

"We are about to experience very presently, in late June or early July, a success in seeking votes for women that will be unique in the world's history of this reform," said Madame Schlumberger. "Under restricted conditions our sex is to receive the vote and our nation to be the first in Europe to grant this justice to its women.

"So far as the world generally is concerned, this information will be as lightning from a clear sky. For aside from those directly interested, the question of suffrage for the women of France has been a sealed book to other nations. Twenty years ago in France it was the butt of jest and ridicule and a favorite theme with cartoonists. Ten years ago it had here and there a partisan among men in and out of official life and virtually none among women, save perhaps 10,000 members of our two associations. Six months before the war sympathy with the project had increased perhaps 10 per cent. among French people of both sexes. Eighteen months after the war's beginning both the nation and the world had fully recognized the patriotism and devotion displayed by the women of France, and suffrage for our sex found its partisans doubled, although a strong majority against votes for women remained.

"Now, thirty-odd months after the beginning of hostilities and, as it were, spontaneously following a great wave of admiration, gratitude, and appreciation due to the role played by women in these trying times, suffrage for French women, without a fight, won its first victory, and finds the majority in and out of official life in favor of making it in some form a law of the nation. From this sentiment has come the concrete proposition that is to become a law. A canvass of members in both houses of Parliament denotes that the bill about to be presented by Alexander Varenne, Deputy from Havre, awaits only legalized formality to become incorporated in the laws of France. It proposes, and we have accepted, as the entering wedge that the vote shall be given to women of twenty-eight years of age and over and in matters of municipal election only in gratitude for the services rendered the nation by its women during the war.

"We frankly want universal suffrage without restriction upon the basis of justice and equity, but we are willing and glad to take in restricted form at the outset a feminine right to vote, believing it will only be a question of time, and little time relatively at that, when the women of France will be free to vote upon all matters.

"How long have you had an active organization working for suffrage?" was asked.

"For about ten years," replied Madame Schlumberger, "eighty active groups of Suffrage for Women Societies have existed in France, to which women in all walks of life were attached. We have worked quietly and persistently within our own land, so much so that, aside from official relation with the international association in the United States, little has been heard of our efforts beyond our frontiers. We were working upon lines that we felt would end in success, but we realized that success was far off. Now, through the war, it is coming to us in a modified form. We welcome it in the gratitude it expresses, as well as in partial justice to a just cause."

The Use of Opium.

Opium is the dried juice of the white poppy, a flower that grows in many parts of Asia. A few days after the flowers have fallen off the plants men go through the fields in the afternoon and make little cuts in the poppy-head. Out of these cuts a milky juice oozes, which dries into a brown sticky paste. Every morning the men go through the fields again and scrape off this paste, which they put into jars. Later on it is made into half-pound balls and then packed for shipment. In China it is usually used for smoking, either with tobacco or pure. In America and in Europe it is used chiefly for making laudanum and paregoric. Opium quiets the nerves and allays pain, and for that reason is a valuable drug, but it should never be touched except as ordered or used by a physician.

CADET GEORGE LOGAN DESCRIBES FIRST FLIGHT THROUGH THE CLOUDS

Son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Logan Writes Interesting Letter to His His Sister Telling of Experiences With Aviation Corps.

In a letter to his sister, Cadet George Logan, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Logan, 14 Murray street, who is training as an aviator with the Royal Flying Corps, near Deseronto, gives a splendid description of his first flight: His letter is as follows:

Deseronto, June 5, 1917.
87th C. R. S., R. F. C.

Dear Agnes and All.—Well, here we are in camp and under canvas. I didn't write last night as you knew I was all right when I phoned, and also because our rising hour was 3.45 a.m.—some hour!

Got to Toronto safely, Friday morning, though we hit a cow or sheep on the way up and caused expiration of same. Got to barracks at 8.15 and at 9 we were ready to leave the residence. Arrived at Deseronto by C.N.R. at 2.40. We first went to headquarters and got posted to squadrons. Only 11 of our flight came to Deseronto, the remainder to Long Branch. Two of us went to Camp Rathbun, just east of Deseronto, the rest to Monawk, three miles west of same place; four of us were posted to Squadron 84 (O. C. Vernon Castle), the other five to Squadron 87 (O. C. Capt. Pollard), and were brought out here in an R. F. C. tender, and got here at 4.15 p.m.

After getting fixed in our tents we got a light lunch served us in the mess and had nothing to do until morning. The four in Squadron 84 got their first flight that evening, of about fifteen minutes. The rest of us were billed to fly at 3.45 this (Tuesday) a.m. So, people, I've had my first real "fly" and it's great, believe me. I was one of the first at the aerodrome, so our Capt. (Ballard) took me first. We rose going west and kept a steady course up the lake, or bay, I should say, to Belleville, about 30 miles each way, arriving back in 40 minutes from time of starting.

When you leave the hangar you run first just far enough to get full flying speed, and on the take-off you just feel one or two big leaps, as she leaves the ground, flies a bit, touches and leaves altogether. Then all the jolting ceases and its just as near being a feeling of nothing at all as you could expect, and just as I expected it would be, though I thought there would be a little more of a "gone" feeling. There is nothing of that except in a series of abrupt dives and elevations.

The country looked much as I expected it would, as in photographs; the fields all looking as level as hardwood floors, being checekd off in green and browns with the roads running like white ribbons across it for miles. But the houses struck me as funniest of all. I couldn't pick out any at first till I realized the little wee specks were they — just dotes. Then you begin to realize your height from the ground. Trains also looked funny—just like snakes; but as for water, it appeared quite natural, and you can see the bed of the lake for quite a long piece out. I was able to identify Belleville alright from its bridges and other landmarks. Over Belleville he tried "to put the wind up me" (as they say here for our "getting your Angora." He throttled his engine right down 3 or 4 times, gliding right down to a couple hundred feet over the city, each time climbing back to old level. He then did some nice bouncing and bumping vertical bank—almost up on one wing tip and he just seemed to pivot there and circle with occasional nose dives and side slips. But I had absolute confidence in him and knew he would not do anything he couldn't finish up with, as he was in for all that was coming. On the way back I spied a train moving east about three miles ahead, and though it seemed we were travelling slowly, so far as ground speed went, we overtook and passed the choo-choo in exactly 3 1-2 minutes.

It is certainly great to sit there and watch the wings, which made it look as though you were suspended there and the earth was moving in a great panorama below. The propellor makes a great wind come back in your face, and the goggles I had but will be O. K. for work tomorrow. We are billed for another joyride (a flight in which the instructor takes full control) tomorrow, at 3.45 a.m., and after that we will begin taking partial control of the lines. They certainly don't keep you waiting long here. But its hard to describe it. Can only say that it is fine and very novel to us.

Tenting is O. K., two to a tent. Collins and I are together and at present we have for light, six candles in a wash basin. Guess we will buy a lantern, as all those issued are taken. We make up for early hours by sleep from 1 to 4 p.m.

Must close now. Will tell you more when I come home.

TO NAME TWO COMMISSIONS.

One to Take Over Collieries, Other the Crops.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 11.— Two important commissions are to be appointed by the Government immediately.

One will be charged with the fuel situation, and will be given power to take over and operate the mines in the west now tied up with a strike. This will be done as a war measure, and follows the failure to effect a settlement of the difficulty.

The other commission will direct the marketing of grain, and be designed to prevent reckless speculation. There will be twelve members, with Dr. Magill, former head of the Grain Commission, as chairman. Other members will be grain dealers or producers.

WIRE WORM APPEARS.

BRANTFORD, June 9.—The wire worm has made its appearance at Cainsville. The little pests were discovered among the early corn, approximately twenty-five to a hill, and the entire field will have to be destroyed. R. SHOE STYLES.

Tips From Paris About the New Footgear.

Every American model that went to Paris a year ago showed the extremely long, narrow shoe, but Paris bootmakers shortened the vamp when copying it for their trade. The shoe that is a la mode today and will be for spring and summer is the half short vamp with arch under the foot and the Cuban heel. If a boot, then it will be the black with colored top bordered in the patent leather around the lacings at the top, and the seam at the back will be covered. The top part is of cloth or covert and the color beige, gray or white.

If the shoe is low it will be of patent leather with a long tongue that extends above the instep and posed over the toes will be a wide black buckle—steel, if for afternoon, imitation black enamel if for morning. These two styles are the best, but there are a hundred variations.

For evening the smartest thing is the strapped slipper of brocaded silk (generally yellow and white), or else the slipper is laced across with ribbons, then wound about the leg above the anklet, filet fashion. Some of the best bootmakers show the little old fashioned slipper, cut low with just one strip over or above the instep. This is for afternoon and evening wear, for it is equally pretty in black calf and white satin. Over the toes is a tiny chou of satin or leather. This model is extremely simple, in keeping with clothes, and it will be in fashion for a long time.

The toe of all footgear is neither round nor pointed, just a healthful, sculptural cut. The heel for evening slippers is high and curved, but half an inch shorter than the original Louis XVI., which means that heels are quite moderate and simple.

It took Parisiennes a long time to give up their dearly beloved buttoned shoe, but once relinquished they have taken to the laced article with enthusiasm. For elegance they admit the buttoned model is the best, but the other article now appears so feminine to them that it is sure to remain. Frenchwomen of the old school cling to buttons on shoes, and dealers and makers have ceased trying to persuade them that the laced shoe is better than the other. When buttons are used here they are half size, and fastidious women who can afford it have the buttons of cut jet.

Suggestions on Pie and Pie Crust Making.

One woman states: "To prevent juice or filling from running out, trim the undercrust even with edge of plate, allow top crust to hang over half an inch after wetting the rim of pie. Press closely together, then turn the overhanging crust under the bottom part, lifting the dough from the plate little by little and tucking it under all the way around. Press down to the plate once more. This is a little more work than simply pressing the wet edges together, but your filling won't run out if you do it.

"When I was first married and getting all the information I could about cooking a friend told me to put the water into pie crust when mixing it as though it cost a dollar a drop. Too much water will make pie crust tough, no matter how much lard you have in it.

"Another friend told me that I should use a tablespoonful of lard to a cupful of flour, but if I went by guess I could tell when I had enough lard in by making a small ball of the lard and flour, and if I could toss it lightly from one hand to the other without breaking it it would be just right."

Egged Veal Hash.

Chop fine remnants of cold roast veal. Moisten with the gravy or water. When hot break into it three or four eggs, acording to the quantity of veal. When the eggs are cooked stir into it a spoonful of butter and serve quickly. If to your taste shake in a little parsley. Should you lack quantity, half a cupful of stale breadcrumbs are no disadvantage.

BRO. GARDNER'S ADVICE TO MEMBERS LEAVING CLUB

Honest Whitewashing and Pancakes Without Bran the Best Policy.

AT THE LIMEKILN

No New Wrinkles in the Crap Game—Red Light Warnings

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

"My frens," said Brother Gardner of the Limekiln club as he rose in his place the other evening, "I regret to announce dat several members of dis club am about to remove to odder fields in de struggle to make a libin'. Dey will not lose deir membership in de club, but it may be long befo' we shall see dem ag'in. We shall part wid dem wid regret. We shall feel a bit sad when we no longer see deir faces among us. Will Brudder Cato Jones please stand up whar all kin behold him?"

Brother Cato got to his feet, and after he had been beheld the president said:

"Brudder Jones, you am gwine to Buffalo to engage in de whitewashin'

TRIED TO ACT LIKE A WHITE MAN.

business. It am a new field and a new town fur you. You will be strange to de people, and dey will be strange to you. Your success will depend on de way you start in.

"Slip into Buffalo quietly.

"Don't pay no money to brass bands to head de procession.

"Don't go around axin' folks if dey am aware dat dar's a new coon in town.

"Jest glide in between two days and settle down. Don't say whedder you come from New York city or de village of Podunk.

"In Buffalo as well as yere you will find lots of white folks. Dey will be smokin' fifteen cent cigars, rentin' boxes at de posoffice and buyin' furniture on de installment plan. You will find 'em packin' de theaters an' dodgin' deir landlords. Dey will be fillin' de restaurants and owin' deir coal man. Dey will be wearin' silks and welvets and standin' off de fam'ly doctor. Don't foller deir example. Let 'em go deir own way, and you go yours. If it wasn't fur de examples of extravagance sot by de white folks today ebery cull'd man in de kentry might have a cabin of his own.

Honest Whitewashing in Buffalo.

"And about your whitewashin', Brudder Jones. It's an aige of trusts and bank wreckin' and cheatin' and swindlin'. De people will look fur you to mix clay and whitin' wid your lime. Dey will expect you to ax double price fur your work and den do it in a slipshod manner. My advice to you is to disapp'int 'em. Use honest materials and do honest work. Lots of folks will call you a fool, but in de long run you will win out. Dar am a few honest folks left in dis kentry, and dey will appreciate you and stand by you. You has our werry best wishes fur your success, Brudder Jones, and now you may sot down and gib way to Brudder Sundown Carter."

Brother Jones sat down, and Brother Carter stood up.

"Brudder Carter," said the president, "you am gwine ober to Philadelphy to engage in de business of makin' and sellin' hot pancakes, assisted by Mrs Carter. It seems dat she had got a pecooler twist of de wrist in de pancake business, and you hopin' to make a heap o' money out of it. We also hope you will, but you am also in need of advice. Dar was a time when de people of Philadelphy was so honest dat if a man lost his wallet on de street de finder would travel clear to Pittsburg to restore it to him. You could pass a nickel fur a quarter in any grocery. You could whisper to a conductor of a street car dat all your money was tied up in de Third avenoo road, and he would not only pass you free, but hand you a couple of cigars to smoke when you got off.

Philadelphia Not What It Was.

"Philadelphy has changed, Brudder Carter. Dey am up to snuff ober dar. If you am plannin' to mix any bran wid dose pancakes dey will cotch on in a week.

"Don't look around you and set your standard by dat of de white men and say what is honest in dem is honest in you. If you do you will find yourself in trubble. De difference am dat you hain't got money to pay fur lawyers and de white man has. His lawyers kin make it out breach of trust, while the police will convict you of highway robbery.

"You will find white men ober dar wid fur coats and glossy silk hats.

"You will find a heap of autos, same as yere.

"You will find silks and satins and diamonds.

"You will find white folks bathin' in champagne and lightin' dollar cigars with two dollar bills.

"Don't attempt to enter de swim, Brudder Carter. Stick to pancakes. Stick to de simple life. If you could look behind de scenes in Philadelphy, Chicago, New York or any odder place you would find four-fifths of de swell people in debt fur de mattresses on deir beds. It's halcyon days wid dem jest now, but you wait a bit. Dis country has lost its head ober de scramble fur money, but de craziness has almost had its run. Buy what you need, pay your debts, sell for cash and you will be safe. Jest make your own program and stick to it, no matter what white folks do. You may now sot down while I spoke a few words to Brudder Accidential White."

Brother White modestly posed on the chalk line, and after drawing a long breath and taking a drink of water the president said:

"Brudder White, you has been a member of dis Limekiln club fur about five years. You has paid your dues and been prompt in your attendance, but outside of dat I have seen werry little in you to praise. You moved up here from Virginny. You begun right away tryin' to be white folks. You follered 'em around and put on a superior look. I has seen you and your wife ridin' in a taxicab. I has seen you gwine to de theater. I has seen you carryin' a cane. I has seen ice cream come to your house. I has took notice of your patent leather shoes.

No Chance in Craps.

"Dey tells me dat you am now gwine to Oswego to start all ober again. You has gone dead broke and must fly de coop. It's jest what I knowed would happen, and I'm not gwine to be too hard wid my criticisms. You was jest foolish 'nuff to be led by de example of white folks, as many anodder culled man has been and will be. You got ashamed of de kinks natur' put in your ha'r. You wanted to swell and swagger. You wanted flooh rugs wid lions on 'em, and you wanted a cuckoo clock on de mantel. You has had 'em, and whar am you at de present date?

"Dey tell me you am gwine up to Oswego to run a crap game and dat you am boastin' of de wrinkles you am gwine to work off on de innocent darkies of dat town. I hain't gwine to advise you not to do it. When a man, white or black, hain't got honesty nailed down sumwhar in his soul it hain't any use appealin' to him. Shoot your craps and work your wrinkles, but when de law gits hold of you don't squeal. Take your medicine like a man.

"We has lately had de spectacle of a white man befo' de courts who had broken de laws, busted a bank, ruined depositors and caused thousands to suffer dat he might pile up millions. Money was his god. He eben forged to git it. When he was at last arrested he defied de courts. He sneered at public opinion. He and his family and lawyers said he couldn't be convicted. Dey was all wrong. He was convicted arter thirteen months' delay and arter appealin' to ebery court in de land and usin' his ill gotten money to pay lawyers he is now in prison.

"It may be dat he was convicted by accident, Brudder White. I hain't sayin' nuffin' 'bout dat. What I'm sayin' is when de time comes dat de law lays hands on you don't squeal. Stand right up and take your dose.

"I has said don't be like a white man in your dishonesty and extravagance. I also say don't be like a white man in playin' de baby act when de law finally gets hold of you. Dar am people who admire a great rascal, but all of us have a contempt for a squealer. Let's go home."

An Authentic Biography.

"Goodness gracious!" exclaimed the bondholder's wife as she entered his private office, where the thermometer indicated 95 degrees, and found her husband, his brow dripping with perspiration, busily engaged with a pair of scissors in the arduous employment of detaching coupons. "Goodness gracious! Are you trying to take a Turkish bath?"

The bondholder turned to the woman, with a hurt expression on his shrewd face. "I wish you would not speak in so slighting a manner," he said reprovingly. "I am expecting a visit from the man whom I have engaged to write my biography, and I want to appear so he can say truthfully of me that I earned my bread by the sweat of my brow."—Chicago News.

Stand Taken by Sweden Has Proved Puzzling To Allied Governments

One of the most difficult problems confronting the student of current events throughout the world today, is how to reach any just estimate as to the real attitude of Sweden towards the war, and the exact position in that country. Sweden was amongst the first countries, on the outbreak of the present world struggle, to declare her neutrality, and she has affirmed it and reaffirmed it, officially and unofficially, at intervals, ever since. Nevertheless, her attitude has always contained an element of doubt. The outbreak of the war, two and a half years ago, found her actively and openly engaged in preparing herself against a possible attack from Russia. The "Russian peril" was a phrase to conjure with, throughout the length and breadth of the country, and it was the subject of a vigorous propaganda under the leadership of such men as Sven Hedin. As a consequence, when war broke out, it was held by many that Sweden already stood committed to the support of the Central Powers.

KING GUSTAV

Sweden withstood the first rush of demand, as it were, and proclaimed her neutrality, but from the beginning the pro-German party embarked on a vigorous propaganda. Sven Hedin devoted to it all his energy, visited the German front, wrote a book full of praise of German aims and methods, and, although even he was heard, on occasion, to advocate the maintenance of Swedish neutrality, his activities were a pillar of strength to the "Activists," as the party in favor of intervention on the side of the Central Powers came to be known. Recently, very little has been heard of the Activists. The outside world had, in fact, gained the impression that Sweden's foreign policy had become "stated, fixed, and settled," and that no deviation from it was to be expected. Then came the resignation of the Hammarskjold Cabinet, "a business government," as Sir Gilbert Murray described it about a year ago, and this was followed, within a few days, by the formation of an exclusively Conservative Ministry, with M. Carl Swartz as Prime Minister. It is not very long ago that the Socialists, comprising one of the strongest parties in Sweden, were protesting against the "pro-German attitude of the King and the Queen," and, today, both the Liberal and the Socialist press are loud in protest against the new Ministry, in the formation of which the Social Democrats refused to take any part.

It is not easy to gauge the significance of these developments. The Swartz Ministry, like its predecessor, has declared the necessity of Sweden maintaining her neutrality. Their foremost task, M. Swartz said, would be strictly to pursue the logical, impartial neutrality carried on by their predecessors. There, for the moment, the matter rests; but the element of doubt remains, more strongly pronounced, perhaps, than ever. The recent action of the German pirates in sinking Swedish vessels laden with grain may have affected King Gustav unfavorably in his feelings towards the Kaiser. The Stockholm papers have spoken with no uncertain voice, but the monarch remains silent.

Music and Animals.

The influence of music on animals was once tested by a violinist in a menagerie. The effect was greatest on a puma, which became much excited when quick time was played, but was calmed by slower measures. Wolves showed an appreciative interest, lions and hyenas were terrified, leopards were unconcerned, and monkeys stared in wonder at the performer.

FUTURE OF THE AEROPLANE.

How the Lessons Learned Now Will Be Applied After the War.

When the war is over the wings of the wind will have been harnessed so effectively that a splendid profit will be written on the balance sheet of peace. The air dreadnaughts of the day are the prototypes of the aeroplane de luxe of the morrow; the winged wains that carry a ton of explosives will be commandeered by commerce, and the safety devices that stand the gaff of shot and shell will find no very great test in the trade winds of the world.

The highways of the sky know no barriers and no frontiers. Besides being lord of its own element, the new aeroplane, driving through space at a hundred miles an hour, will outdistance the fastest ship and leave in a dilatory smudge of the horizon the smoke of the speediest railway train.

The sky is a universal roadbed that never needs repair. Spanning continents and bridging seas, hurdling cities, forests and the waste spaces of the world, the aeroplane, made safe, sound and speedy at the demands of war, will be trained to the minute for the greater service of peace and humanity.—Merle Crowell

He Made Good.

Lord Lansdowne once had a remarkable prophecy made concerning him while he was an Oxford graduate. Jowett, his tutor at Balliol, greatly admired him and always said that he would do great things.

"There goes a man," remarked Jowett, "who is as certain to be foreign secretary in due time in whichever party he chooses as tomorrow's sun is to rise."

Of course at that time Lord Lansdowne had not the least idea of filling such a distinguished post, and yet in 1900, after a brilliant political career, he found himself at the head of the foreign office.—London M. A. P.

World's Greatest Rink.

The largest skating rink in Europe, measuring about 83,000 square yards, is at Davos, in the canton of the Grisons, Switzerland, where all the great international skating competitions take place. It is generally open from the third week in November until the middle of March, and the climatic conditions prevailing at that altitude of 5,200 feet are so excellent that it is indeed an exception when the rink has ever to be closed during this period. A considerable staff of men is employed to maintain the rink in order. The ice is flooded every night and is scraped and polished in the morning with almost the same care that glass workers bestow upon plate glass.

Learning From Tumbles.

It does not matter how many tumbles you have in this life so long as you do not get dirty when you tumble. There is the greatest practical benefit in making a few failures in life. You learn that which is of inestimable importance—that there are a great many people in the world who are just as clever as you are, * * * and you very soon find out, if you have not found it out before, that patience and tenacity of purpose are worth more than twice their weight in cleverness.—Huxley.

The Baby's Room.

For the wee baby a nursery room separate from the living apartments of the family is especially important. Quiet, sunshine and good air are first requisites for the child's well being, and these are not easily secured when he is moved hither and thither to different parts of the dwelling as suits the convenience of his elders. The din and clatter and bustle of work and the confusion of movements, sights and noises are bewildering and harmful to the little one's sensitive nerves and brain.—Good Health.

Ceiba Tree of Honduras.

The tree known as la ceiba is one of the dominating features of the landscape in Honduras. It rises to a height of seventy or eighty feet before branching, and then a broad top spreads out like a huge umbrella. The trees are commonly six feet or more in diameter, but the wood is soft and not considered valuable for lumbeer. It is white, and many persons think it would be valuable for paper pulp. The tree bears a silky cotton, which is used to some extent for stuffing cushions.

NO ANTI-CONSCRIPTIONISTS AT TYPOGRAPHICAL CONFERENCE

Returned Soldiers Visited Printers and Were Assured of the Friendship of the Latter.

LONDON, June 11.—Rumors of an anti-conscription meeting at Hyman Hall brought about fifty returned men down town Friday. Red Cross work was in full swing throughout the greater part of the building, and the Typographical Union was in session in one of the smaller rooms. The boys paid a visit to this meeting, and were cordially received. They were assured that the meeting had not been called for anti-conscription purposes, and after a few brief speeches had been made quietly withdrew.

No demonstrations occurred and the proceedings throughout were exceptionally orderly.

Printers in the Army.

Charles Kinskey, lieutenant in the 3rd Artillery, Buffalo, assured the soldiers that the conference was heartily in sympathy with the returned men. More than 650 printers were at the front and 30 had fallen in action. Arrangements had been made to have those who returned placed in their former positions. Delegates Powell and President Doughty [illegible]oke. It was pointed out that on Thursday a donation of $5 was given to the flower show and that the flowers obtained were sent to the convalescent hospital.

The printers have paid out $7,650 to the widows and relatives of 25 union-printers killed in action while with the C. E. F. The returned men expressed their gratitude on hearing this.

A Misunderstanding.

The delegates learned that the National Council of Women had refused to use union labels on their printing as they had received the impression that the typographical unions were opposed to equal wages for women. A committee was appointed to draft another request to the council pointing out that the Typographical Union had been the first to introduce equal-wage clauses into its constitution. Fifty years ago it demanded that women workers receive wages equal to those paid the male members.

The delegates were taken to Port Stanley by radial and entertained at dinner by the London Union. Among the speakers was Secretary George L. Myland of Peterborough.

NEW BOOK OF PRAISE.

Some of the Hymns Added to Methodist Collection.

One of the features of the new Methodist hymn book is a version of "God Save the King," by Hon. W. S. Fielding, former minister of finance in the Laurier Government.

Among the new hymns are: "Hark Hark, My Soul," "Blessed Assurance, Jesus Is Mine," "Christians, Awake Salute the Happy Morn," "Crown Him With Many Crowns," "O Come All Ye Faithful," "I've Found a Friend," "Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand," "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go," and "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden."

FAIR FRUIT CROP PEACHES TO BE SCARCE

According to Mr. P. W. Hodgets superintendent of the fruit branch, Department of Agriculture, the fruit crop prospects for Ontario are better than last year. He says the outlook is nothing exceptional, only that there is likely to be a fair crop of every fruit with the exception of peaches, of which there may be a scarcity.

PRODUCE AND ECONOMIZE

Sir Robert Borden made the statement while in England "Waste in time of peace is a sin; in this time of national stress it is a crime."

Commenting on this statement, the London Telegraph says:—

"His crisp sentences might well be displayed prominently in every home, in every factory, and perhaps even on board ship and in regimental messes. Victory will depend largely on the extent to which each one of us is willing to check waste of labor, must be provident—even miserly—in our habit of life we are to preserve what is dearer than life itself."

Canadians should take these words to heart with equal force. There are three ways by which Canadians who cannot fight can aid in winning the war. First by greater production, second by economy and third by savings.

There is a crying and pressing need for more food. Canadian farmers and others have patriotically responded to the call for greater production, but in the coming vital six months before this year's crop is ready to be threshed much can be accomplished by food economy.

The best use of Savings for war purposes is to invest them in War Savings Certificates which can be secured at any bank or any post office where money orders are sold. For $21.50 a war certificate can be purchased and at the end of three years the government will return $25.00, which is at the rate of over five per cent interest.

portunities of the West. Within a few years the whole wide world was shaken, when the ring of Germany's sword proclaimed her plighted word naught but a "scrap of paper," and you were among the first to hear England's call to all true mothers' sons to defend right against might. As early as September, 1914, in a Vancouver Battalion you enlisted. Of your experiences since—and thrilling they must have been—most of us have heard but little. So tonight we anticipate, part in sorrow, part in gladness hearing from your own lips the story so many other lads may never tell—of what it really means to "do your bit."

You, Jack, are the first of our own boys to come back home and that is why we are here tonight to welcome you heart and hand once again into our midst. While we are sorry that the shrapnel has left one hand maimed, yet we earnestly congratulate you and your parents on your otherwise sound condition, and we would make you understand that your acts and those of your brother, who is still on the soil of Flanders pushing Prussian militarism to the background, have not gone unnoticed.

We therefore, as a slight token of our appreciation of what you have done and suffered in our cause, ask you to accept this purse of gold. We hope it may always serve as a link between you and the parish where you were born, and that God's blessing will be upon you in the future, and that, though of wounds you lay down the arms of our King, yet you may be ever and always a soldier of the King of Kings.

Dog Thought Mad Bites a Child

Daughter of Ed. Pemberton Is Taken to Toronto for Pasteur Treatment.

Last Thursday a spaniel belonging to Mr. Ed. Pemberton, of 124 Rubidge Street, bit young Miss Pemberton. The ordinary household remedies were applied, but yesterday the arm and leg started to swell, and fearing that the dog might be suffering from rabies, Dr. Johnston was called in and after examining the animal advised that a physician be called in to look at the little girl. The doctor at once advised that she be taken to Toronto for treatment at the Pasteur Institute, and Dr. Johnston ordered the dog shot, and after P.C. Deannard had performed the operation, the head was removed and sent to Toronto.

This is another strong proof of the necessity for the strict enforcement of the quarantining of all dogs in the city until the danger of the trouble is over. The police will start out again today and see that a more rigid enforcement of the bylaw is effected.

Living Without Eating

Science tells us that if a man can get water he can exist for about thirty days without food. We can absorb and burn up our muscles until 60 per cent. of their weight has gone. We can do the same with from 30 to 40 per cent. of our livers and digestive organs, and 20 per cent. of our lungs. Our hearts can lose 10 per cent. and our brains and nervous systems can lose 5 per cent.

Bradford's Big Saving

The revenue from the Bradford Corporation's grease factory, England, amounts to nearly $250,000 per annum. This sum represents what other people have thrown away. No less than 120 tons a week of valuable grease are extracted from the waste products in the wool industry.

Economical Elopements

Elopements, with the consent of the parents on both sides, are frequent in Bulgaria, the expense of the wedding ceremony and festivities being thus avoided by the thrifty peasants.

Rubbish-heaps and waste have provided the world with wealth in greater measure than the richest gold mines ever known.

For the loss of an arm by an accident in a printing machine $1,750 was awarded to a boy in the City of London Court.

SUNDAY STORY OF WAR

An official report says that on Saturday all was quiet south of Ypres except for artillery fighting. Prisoners now exceed seven thousand. A great number of guns and other booty is still buried under the debris. During the day British positions in the neighborhood of Greenland Hill on the Scarpe front were improved. Reuters correspondent says Klein Zillebeko was taken by the British.

Sunday morning's official statement says the British gained further ground at a number of points south of Ypres. British airman successfully bombed the airdrome at Denis Westrem Saturday, all returning safely.

The French in a surprise attack on the left bank of the Moselle near the eastern end of the front last night inflicted serious losses on the Germans.

A SMART HOME MOTOR DELIVERY

Peterborough Floral Company Keep Pace With the Business Growth.

Since acquiring the Mason Floral Emporium on Water street, the Peterborough Floral Co. its present proprietors, have infused new life into an old established institution, in keeping with a progressive Peterborough. Under the vigorous supervision of Mr. Cecil Williamson, the managing head of this firm, their large glass area now gives life to every variety of the choicest plant creations in demand by a critical public.

Mr. Williamson is naturally an horticultural genius, whose never-tiring devotion to producing all that is most beautiful in the plant, floral and shrub world, together with the acme of art in floral designs, has won for his greenhouse an enviable reputation in Peterborough city and county. So rapidly has this business grown that improved delivery facilities were imperatice, resulting in the acquisition of an exceptionally attractive motor rig, now in commission. This equipment is artistically finished in light brown, its lettering in gold with dark brown shading, and is an appreciable addition to the up-to-the-minute business methods of The Peterborough Floral Co., whose deliveries can henceforth be made in express time.

A clock has been invented that records at a central point the time each machine in a factory is running.

Experiments are under way in China and American cotton seed with a view to improving the native cotton.

ANIMALS IN FIRE

Fire Affects Different Animals in Different Ways

Most animals are afraid of fire, and will fly from it in terror. To others there is a fascination about a flame, and they will walk into it, even though tortured by the heat. A horse in a burning stable goes mad with fear, but a dog is as cool in a fire as at any time. He keeps his nose down to the floor, where the air is purest, and sets himself calmly to finding his way out. Cats in fire cry piteously. They hide their faces from the light and crouch in corners. When their rescuer lifts them they are as a rule quite docile and subdued, never biting or scratching. Birds seem to be hypnotized by fire, and keep perfectly still; even the loquacious parrot in a fire has nothing to say. Cows, like cats, do not show alarm. They are easy to lead forth, and often find their way out themselves.

Bank of England Notes

It is interesting to know, a London paper writes, that the greatest and smallest amounts for which the Bank of England has issued notes are $5,000,000 and two cents.

A 76-year-old bachelor who died at Borden, Kent, was found to have collected more than 100 fancy waistcoats.

Competent Jury?

"The jury have found you not guilty. Go away, but do not do it again." This was the comment of a London magistrate in discharging Thomas Earle, charged with stealing a purse from a girl.

Chariots worked on the principle of the taximeter are said to have been used in China in the fourth century.

NATIONAL FLOWERS

World's Floral Symbols are Very Many and Varied

A journalist paper writes: There is no British flower. There are flowers or plants that symbolize the countries of the British Empire, as the rose for England, the thistle for Scotland, the leek for Wales, the shamrock for Ireland and the maple leaf for Canada. The traditional flower of France is the fleur de lis. It is authentic from Louis VII to 1789. Then it fell with the Bourbons, being replaced by the tri-color. Bonaparte adopted the bee and the Bonapartists wore and still wear violets. The lily was readopted and tradition sanctions its use to-day.

The national flower emblem of Japan is the golden chrysanthemum. Conventionalized with sixteen rays it is the personal badge of the Mikado. But cherry blossoms are often used to symbolize Japan. There is perhaps no Italian flower unless it be the lily. The white lily was the badge of the Ghibellines, the red lily of the Guelphs affording a sort of parallel to the Wars of the Roses which made the rose the national flower in England.

The United States has no national flower. In 1889 an attempt was made to secure a general expression of opinion in favor of some one flower. The goldenrod was then most favored, but either law or traditional usage is necessary to constitute a national emblem of any sort, and the goldenrod had neither to back it.

PENALTY OF FAME

Premier of Britain was Rich in "Schoolmates"

Lloyd George told a friend that he was beginning to think he had almost as many schoolmates as there were passengers on the Mayflower, which carried the Pilgrim fathers to the American coast in the seventeenth century. The premier made this observation after the amusing discovery that he had thousands of schoolmates when he was a schoolboy in Wales. He said the attendance never exceeded 30, but that almost every day his mail includes a letter from somebody who begins by saying: "I was once at school with you."

Rumania's Many Farms

There are a million small farms in Rumania and only a few thousand large ones; but the few big landowners have more land then the many small ones. The average size of the million small farms is eight acres, while that of 4,471 large ones is 2,200 acres, says an American paper. In times of peace the Wallachians go into Hungary by the tens of thousands to help with the sowing and reaping.

A Very Busy Young Thief

A boy of 17, who said he committed the theft two days before he got married and was arrested two days after the wedding, was sent to a month's hard labour at West London for stealing two magnetos worth $120.

Feathered Songsters for Food

The Italians do not consider a dinner complete unless a dish of small roasted birds is included. They even serve roast larks and nightingales.

Where Ingenuity Counts

The bighorn or Rocky Mountain sheep can travel as far over the mountain peaks in a few minutes as a hunter can go in two hours.

An electrically-operated alarm clock of French invention rings its bell one or more times a day at a set time every day, or only on designated days.

Poorhouse Patient?

The sum of $50,000 was given anonymously to Cambridge University for the endowment of a school of Spanish.

COUNTESS SCORED BRITISH LANDLORDS

Aristocracy should Give All Lands to State, said Owner of 25,000 Acres

The Countess of Warwick, owner of 23,000 acres, issued a stirring appeal to the landed aristocracy of Great Britain to follow the example of the Russian Grand Dukes and turn over all their feudal properties to the State. "We must go," she says. "The aristocracy of England, in its position of hereditary landowners, must go. The country rings with suggestions for the betterment of the conditions under which land is cultivated, but as I see things, the suggestions are in no instance drastic enough.

"The only cure for the present evils seems to me to be State ownership, the abolition of all private property in the earth that was given to all of us in common. There are two classes of large landowners in England, the aristocracy and the plutocracy.

Only Six have Wisdom

"As a class, the aristocracy have been good landlords within limits, but the limits are very marked, because they have always been a narrow minded body. The average chatelaine who plays the part of Lady Bountiful is to me an abomination, because her philanthropy is so closely associated with dogmatic religion, personal pride and party politics. If our aristocracy possessed the overwhelming wisdom necessary to their role as supreme dictators all would be well, but I cannot reckon in their ranks more than six whose claims would bear momentary consideration.

Plutocrats Worse

"As for the plutocrats, the men who have bought lands and titles in the open market—and the one is nearly as readily purchased as the other—they have not the old feudal tradition of the aristocracy. They have been accustomed to make business ventures pay; they demand 6 per cent. on their outlay and employ an agent who will see that they get it. The landlord of this class is a bad landlord."

MIRACLE OF SURGERY

Dead Hand of Teamster Made Alive by Skill

When a teamster, who had come into Montreal to work in a machine shop, stumbled against a steel-cutting, circular saw, that perfect piece of machinery obediently bit through every fraction of bone and flesh presented to its iron teeth, and the man's hand, cut through the back at the wrist, hung limp and helpless. The superintendent bound stout cord above the worker's wrist, made a rough tourniquet of a pen holder, and 'phoned up the general hospital. Within seven minutes, the ambulance pulled up at the factory doors, and five minutes later the teamster was in the big outpatient hall of the general, where some 400 men, women and children, all poor people, patiently waited attention. He was summoned at once—for there was urgency in his case—into a bright room of wondrous order and cleanliness, where a white-robed surgeon examined the wound with eyes in which the teamster could divine nothing but quiet, critical observation.

What followed was in the nature of a jig-saw puzzle of flesh and sinews. A nurse assisting, the teamster's hand and half his arm were put into an artificial swoon, so to speak, all pain and feeling evicted like bad tenants. Followed a series of most delicate operations. One half of the severed tendons, elastic as rubber, had leaped up the teamster's arm; the other half had been drawn towards the finger tips. Like cables that have snapped in deep sea water, these tendons had first to be located, then pulled together and sutured. To pull these elastic fibres into position, sharp incisions were made in the arm and hand, so that the pincers could enter, grip them and stretch them out. It was a splendid feat of surgery, by which a man's right hand, dead and useless, was reimbued with life, restored to action, rescued from [illegible].

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

IN THE BASEBALL WORLD

Seven Deadly Sins of Baseball

Pride—Putting monogram on ball after catching sacrifice fly, and before throwing to home home plate.

Lust—Batting around all night instead of around 300.

Sloth—Failure to touch all the bases.

Gluttony—Trying to count the attendance while playing in a world's series game.

Wrath—Accusing the umpire's ancestors of having been moles, after striking out.

Avarice—Accepting pay for wearing out a pair of baseball pants and a good bench.

Envy—Speaking unfavorably of Ty Cobb.

Advice For Rookies

It's no longer good form to permit the ball to become sunburned in your hands before throwing to retire a runner.

A good change of pace doesn't mean ability to run from the outfield to the home plate with the ball in an attempt to prevent a home run.

It's not being done this season at all.

Nor last.

Nor next!

Watching the ticker from Scribe Park is getting almost as exciting as unfolding the contents of a cream puff.

Some people work up a lot of enthusiasm over eating a chocolate eclair, but it hardly creates the kind of muscle that makes soldiers.

On the other hand neither does the pastime of rolling bones over the green.

And soldiers are selling above par these days!

Know many a golfer who can't do an eighty-six par course even when the wind is with them. But it does them good to be dallying with the out of doors just the same.

SOME SPORTING NICKNAMES

There has been considrable speculation as to how Cravath, the Phillies' slugger, came by his nickname of "Gavvy." Many fans were of the opinion that it was a corruption of "Gabby," but this is a mistake. Cravath told the Philadelphia Evening Ledger man about his sobriquet, as follows:

"There is no doubt about the "Gavvy" stuff; I have had that nickname as long as I can remember, and it didn't some to me because I talk so much, either. When I was a kid out on the coast, I played baseball every chance I got, and soon became known in the small towns near my home I lived in a place called Gaviota, Calif., and the ball club had the same name One day I played with another team, and a spectator who recognised me shouted, 'There is one of the Gavvies.' Throughout the game they called me 'Gavvy,' and it has stuck to me ever since. I picked up some more polite stuff on the coast, but 'Cactus' stil is with me. Charley Van Loan slipped me that one. Aonother one, which is suggestive of my speed, is 'Wooden Shoes.' Some guy wished that one on me when I was playing with the Boston Americans, erhaps I will get a gew more before I qui'it the game."

They do say that the ages of some of the veteran ball players have been increasing by leaps and bounds since the conscription bill was passed. Some of them, it is said, aged as much as ten per cent, over night.

McGRAW SUSPENDED

President Tener Wasted No Time in Punishing Giant Manager

New York, June 11. — President John K. Tener, of the National League, announced today that he had suspended John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Nationals, for an indefinite period as the result of the latter's attack upon Umpire Bryon in Cincinnati. The National League executive telephoned his decision to Secretary Heydler from Philadelphia, where Presidtnt Tener is engaged in preparing the league's defence in the suit of the Baltimore Federal League Club for $900,000 against organized baseball.

Manager McGraw admitted hitting Umpire Bryon after the game with the Cincinnati team, but claimed that he had provocation. The umpire and the manager became engaged in an argument when they met under the grandstand after McGraw had been ordered from the contest as a result of disputing a decision by the umpire.

"POOR MAN'S FRUIT"

Bananas are Highly Nutritious as a Food

"Bananas have a higher caloric value than any of our other common fruits," says Dr. Victor C. Myers in the Journal of the Medical Association "Unlike most other fruits they are always in season. . . . As sold in the market, however, bananas are frequently not sufficiently ripe to be consumed to advantage inimediately. A banana is ripe," says the writer, "when the yellow of the peel takes on a golden hue and begins to speckle with brown shades. The spread of the brown coloration does not condemn the fruit as over-ripe so long as the pulp inside shows no sign of fermentat. decomposition . . ." An experiment was made in keeping a patient on a [illegible]-milk diet for a week and on bananas and milk for a similar period and the patient thrived better on the bananas and milk

JELLICOE'S PIETY

Father Bernard Vaughan, speaking at a meeting in the east end of London, said what he admired so enormously in Admiral Sir John Jellicoe was not only his efficiency an administrator, his efficacy in command, but his splendid manly piety. Just before the great sea fight off Jutland the admiral of the fleet retired to his cabin. There, on his knees, he committed himself and the fleet under his command to the care of God. When he returned to the bridge Sir John was as much at his ease and as calm and collected as though the great battle was some ordinary sham-fight practice.

TO LES DARCY'S MEMORY ..

They made his life a burden, those scribes with acid pen;
They said he was a slacker, because he conquered men
Within the roped arena, instead of on the field—
He's taken his decision now, the one we all must yield.

He's past the stage where slackers are different from the rest,
He's gone where men are taken because they've done their best;
For heaven knows Les Darcy was fighting for his kin—
His brothers and his sisters—yea
Master, they are ten!

The scribes have dropped their pencils except to say a word
Of how he left Australia—not to escape
the sword,
But just to earn some money for Red Cross and relief
Of thousands of his countrymen who now are pitched in grief.

STORM WINDOWS VITAL

Fuel Economy Depends Upon Radiation Losses—Saving One-half

The cost of fuel is a large item of expense to the householder. Anything that can be done to reduce this cost without suffering inconvenience from the cold should be welcomed by all. The average householder has but little knowledge of the principles and application of heating, and there are many portions of Canada where the saving of fuel by the use of storm windows (commonly known as double windows) is not fully appreciated.

Heat is lost from a building in two ways, by (1) radiation, that is, that transferred through walls, windows and other exposed surfaces by conduction and lost, and (2) convection currents, or leakage, namely the losses through the openings around windows, doors, etc. By the opening of outside doors much heat is lost. This, to a great extent, can be overcome by the use of storm or outside doors. Better still is the storm porch, which allows of one door being closed before the other is opened. This porch may be removable, to permit of the use of all verandah space in summer.

The radiation losses are usually of greater importance than the convection. As losses due to radiation from walls, floor, ceiling and doors are determined by the structural features of the house, they are largely unavoidable. The most serious radiation losses are from windows and the saving of heat resulting from the use of storm windows is largely due to the layer of dead air—one of the best non-conductors—between the inner and the storm sashes. Storm windows also prevent uncomfortable drafts.

The great heat loss from single windows is demonstrable. A square foot of window surface radiates as much heat as 2½ square feet of an 8-inch brick wall surface. Storm windows reduce the loss to nearly one-half of this amount. In addition, they reduce the loss due to leakage and save from [illegible] to 15 per cent. of the fuel bill.

The National Anthem

Dr. F. S. Boas, one of London Council's inspectors, reports that a form of the anthem, in Latin and in English, probably existed in the time of James II. and perhaps of Charles II. Its authorship is unknown. The earliest extant form of the anthem with music was published about 1713, the opening line being "God Save our Lord the King." Dr. Boas concludes that there is no original version. The anthem has grown like a folk ballad. Dr. J. E. Borland, L.C.C., musical adviser, says we probably owe the germ idea of the tune to Dr. John Bull (1562-1628), the first Gresham Professor of Music.

ROMANCE OF A LORD

Once Lodged Over a Stable, But Made Millions

Lord Lyveden sold for nearly $1,250,000 property in the U.S.A. which he bought thirty years previously for a small sum. This is well in accordance with his lordship's motto—"A Vernon always flourishes." But there were times when Lord Lyveden must often have doubted the sincerity of his family motto. For many years he courted fickle fortune in several capacities—soldier, sailor, purser, actor, steward, and nurseryman.

"Once," recalls Lord Lyveden, "I arrived in North Carolina with only 75c in my pocket. Like a young fool, I went to a first class hotel and stayed there several days. When the bill was put in front of me I had no money. I was turned out, but as I was leaving the door the clerk pressed fifty cents into my hand, saying, 'I guess you'll want a bed to-night, old man.' I lodged over a stable that night, and in the morning got to work driving a cab. As soon as I was in funds again I went and settled my bill like a Briton."

First Self-Government

The first attempt of government by the people begun in America was in 1619, when Sir George Yeardley was sent from England as Governor of the Jamestown colony. His charter provided that he should call a few chosen men, two from each of the eleven boroughs that constituted the colony. The meeting, which was known as the assembly, was held at the church, with the Governor and his Council presiding. Those who came from the boroughs were called burgesses, and the assembly, which met every year, was styled the House of Burgesses. At this period this was the only English colony in America.

For the Motorist

If the marks on the positive and negative terminals of your storage battery become obscure it is an easy matter to identify them. Take a glass of water and add a pinch of salt, or about a teaspoonful of electrolyte. Run a wire from each battery terminal into the water, being careful that the wires do not touch each other. Bubbles will appear on the negative wire. Then mark a deep plug sign in the case near the positive terminal.

Still the Nation's Hope

It is as a community centre that the little old red school house is to attain again its high place in the national life of any agricultural country. In it the teacher of the Three R's can also be the teacher of husbandry and patriotism and co-operation. The rural public school belongs increasingly to old and young.

"This is the woman I have wanted to marry for more than fifty years," said a man, seventy-five years old, as he led his bride to the altar after his long courtship. The lady had just turned seventy.

AMBER FOR MADNESS

The ancients had great faith in the medicinal powers of amber. By distilling it they obtained an oil which was supposed to cure infantile convulsions. They believed that amber, either worn round the neck as a charm or imbibed, would effectively drive away insanity and fevers. Amber, which is the fossilised resin of pine trees, is found in great abundance on parts of the Baltic coast, in the earth, and often washed up by the sea. It is very rare in England, but occasionally has been found near London. The valuable violins which were made in Cremona many hundreds of years ago owe their beautiful tone and their perfect preservation to the fact that they were varnished with amber varnish. All sorts of ornaments are made of amber, and in the middle ages amber-handled knives and forks were occasionally used. The finest amber ornament in the world is a cup in the Brighton Museum.

SPORTSMEN CAN HELP

"Thrift in Forest Fires" is Aim of Canadian Organization

There are estimated to be 10,000 forest fires in Canada every year of all sizes and descriptions. Nine-tenths are set by human hands, and the damage runs from four to ten millions of dollars, not counting damage to soil, to the value of watershed areas and many other factors. "Thrift in forest fires" is a movement which the Canadian Forestry Association started amongst the guides, and campers and sportsmen of Canada with a view to cutting down the country's timber losses. As is well known, the present-day causes of forest fires are not the railways as much as the settlers, campers, hunters and fishermen. Thoughtlessness in respect to camp fires, the throwing away of lighted tobacco, matches, etc., has caused some of the worst conflagrations in history.

During the months of May and June, before the fire season is well under way, thousands of outdoors men are asked each year by the co-operation of the newspaper publishers of Canada to make that year a year of thrift in the forest. Not only is Canada's exhaustible supply of timber seriously reduced in a time when it should be protected and improved by every possible means, but hundreds of miles of once excellent fishing and hunting and camping grounds are turned into blackened ruin. No camp fire should be left until it is "dead out." A few extra pails of water or spades of sand will make this point certain. No fire should be set except among rocks or gravel, never in a bog or in leaves or needles. Throwing lighted tobacco or matches into the forest is conduct that is chargeable only to the amateur

MISS MENGES AT CITY HALL

Celebrated English Violinist Pleased Belleville Audience Last Night

The Belleville Ontario in its account of the recital given in that city by Miss Isolde Menges, who will appear at the Conservatory of Music tonight, says:—

The renowned English violinist, Miss Isolde Menges, won instant applause and made a local name for herself last evening at the city hall, in a recital comprising works of the great masters. Her pleasing personality, her skill with the bow, the inspiration she revealed in the most difficult compositions, all tended to the success which she achieved. It was a critical audience before which she played and the pleasure she inspired was a certain token of the greatness of her artistic achievement. The program was a varied one and manifested her technique in all its forms

Richness, volume, clearness, are distinguishing marks of the tone achieved by Miss Menges.

NORMAL SCHOOL PICNIC.

Annual Event Held at Burleigh Falls Last Week.

The George street wharf was the scene of much excitement at 8.30 Friday morning when the Normal students met for their annual picnic given by the Normal staff. Although the weather was not at all promising those young educators threw off the pedagogical mask and gave themselfes up to a day of enjoyment. The girls were enthusiastic over the spring scenery on the lakes, especially Stoney. The boys apparently were more interested in the 'Spring Beauties' who came down to decorate the scenery, as one young gentleman missed the boat at Lakefield and rejoined his friends with a smiling countenance on the return trip.

The excursion was up to Burleigh Falls and around the head of the lakes. The students were given some time to admire the Falls and acquaint themselves with the rugged surroundings. They took full advantage of this and returned to the boat loaded with columbine and violets.

The boat returned at 7 p.m. and the students bid farewell to their teachers and to each other after the year of work and enjoyment together.
